RICHER DESPITE SLOW SAMVAT

Diwali delivers a wealth of gains for ace investors

- Portfolios of 34 of 60 up; eight gain over 50%

FE BUREAU
Mumbai, November 7

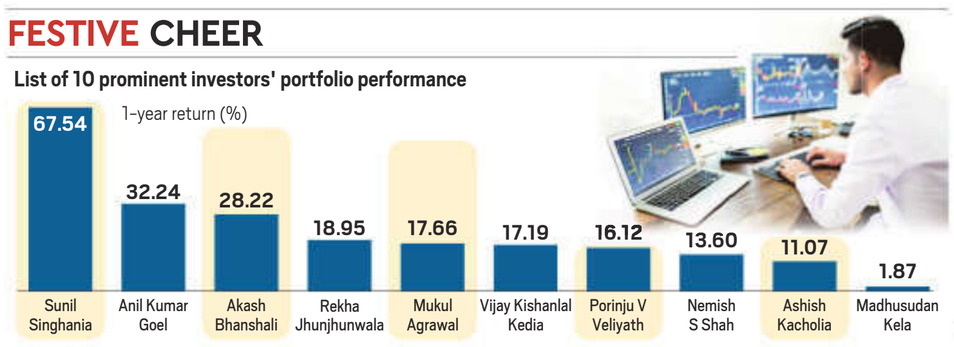

GODDESS LAKSHMI HAS smiled upon several marquee investors this Diwali as fireworks on Dalal Street have brought more than festive cheer to them. A spectacular rally that lifted benchmark indices by nearly 10% in just seven trading sessions has brightened the fortunes of some of India's best-known stock market investors.

Despite a lacklustre Samvat 2082, marked by concerns over US tariffs, the West Asia conflict and volatile markets, more than half of India's prominent investors have emerged richer than they were last Diwali. Of the 60 marquee investors tracked, 34 saw their portfolio values rise over the past year, even as the Sensex declined 4%, as per data from Trendlyne.com.

Indian epics get new-age avatars in online gaming

LEGEND HAS IT

■ Themes abound global arena, such as Asura's Wrath, blending Hindu mythology with science fiction

■ Upcoming Hanuman's Legacy set for global audience

■ Dark-fantasy inspired by Indian epics, The Age of Bhaarat, wishlisted 70% from abroad

AS INDIA CELEBRATES the triumph of good over evil – whether through Lord Rama's victory over Ravana or Lord Krishna's defeat of Narakasura – a similar battle is unfolding in the virtual world. Here, ancient Indian epics and mythological characters are being reimagined as immersive gaming experiences, bringing stories that have endured for millennia to a new generation of players.

One of the early examples is Raji: An Ancient Epic, developed by Pune-based Nodding Heads Games. Drawing from the Ramayana and the Mahabharata, the game follows Raji, an orphaned circus performer chosen by the gods to defend the human realm against a demonic invasion. Her mission is to rescue her younger brother and confront the demon lord Mahabalasura.

Its sequel, Raji: Kaliyuga, picks up six years later, with Mahabalasura once again threatening the world. As he tears the gates of heaven and unleashes Kaliyuga, Raji finds herself fighting alongside her younger brother Darsh, or Golu, as she affectionately calls him.

Emergency a mistake: Sonia

Congress leader Sonia Gandhi, in an interview with a foreign publication, has called the decision to impose the Emergency a mistake, and said she believes her mother-in-law and then prime minister Indira Gandhi also came to feel the same. Gandhi said in the interview, "I believe she was never comfortable in the course of the Emergency. It was sitting heavy on her." ■ PAGE 26

Car market takes firm electric leap

VIKRAM CHAUDHARY
New Delhi, November 7

WHEN INDIA'S MASS-market electric car sales hit 36,064 units in October 2026 – a 77% surge over October 2025 – in addition to luxury EV sales of 868 units (up 53%), it didn't just signal a festive push or temporary growth due to high fuel prices, but pointed towards a structural transformation.

Driven by crude oil volatility stemming from the West Asian conflict, favourable tax structures (5% GST on EVs versus 18% to 40% on ICE cars), as well as more models, EV sales crossed 30,000 units for the fifth month. EV penetration crossed 7% during October (36,932 EVs in a total market of a little over 500,000 units, as per Vahan), helped by models like Tata Punch EV, which became the first EV to cross 5,000-unit-a-month mark, as well as Mahindra's XEV 9S, selling over 35,000 units during January-October.

INDIAN EQUITY INDICES EMERGE AS TOPPERS

INDIAN BENCHMARK EQUITY indices emerged as the top performers globally during the current quarter so far, outperforming all major stock market indices, as per the Bloomberg data. The Sensex and Nifty gained 11.8% and 10.6%, respectively, between September 30 and November 6. Besides India, the Philippines was the only other Asian market to post positive returns, rising 1.45%. South Korea (down 26.01%) and Taiwan (down 17.2%) were the worst performers as their AI-linked bets came under pressure post the tech-led rout in US markets. -Compiled by Kishor Kadam

Eco-warriors debate AI love, hate

- Embrace tech, but warn of data centre impact too

VALERIE VOLCOVICI
Washington, November 7

ENVIRONMENTAL GROUPS WORLDWIDE are using artificial intelligence to analyse climate data, track forest fires and count endangered wildlife – embracing a technology they also warn is driving a surge in electricity demand, water use and greenhouse-gas emissions.

The contradiction is forcing these organisations to justify their AI use in carrying out missions to combat climate change or protect natural resources.

"We recognise that AI can come with environmental costs, and we need to be thoughtful about how we use it," said Ali Swanson, AI lead at the US nonprofit Conservation International.

"But at a time when the climate and biodiversity crises are becoming more urgent, AI can help us move faster and make better use of the information we're collecting," Swanson added.

SEEKS $10-BILLION VALUATION

Hindustan Coca-Cola files DRHP for $1-bn India IPO

VIVEAT SUSAN PINTO
Mumbai, November 7

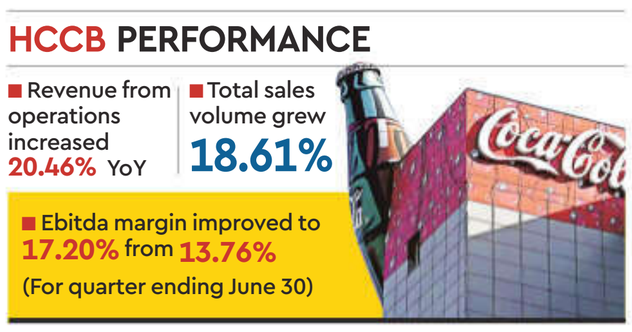

HINDUSTAN COCA-COLA Holdings Limited (HCCH), the parent company of Coca-Cola's Indian bottling arm Hindustan Coca-Cola Beverages (HCCB), has filed its draft red herring prospectus (DRHP) with the Securities and Exchange Board of India (Sebi) for its proposed initial public offering (IPO), marking a key step towards the listing of its Indian bottling operations.

The proposed IPO will comprise an entirely offer for sale (OFS) of up to 997,461,456 equity shares, each with a face value of ₹10, by Hindustan Coca-Cola Overseas Holdings. The shares are proposed to be listed on the BSE and the National Stock Exchange (NSE) in 2027. According to industry sources, the IPO is pegged at around $1 billion, with Coca-Cola seeking a valuation of approximately $10 billion for the business.

Speaking to analysts last month, John Murphy, president and chief financial officer (CFO) of The Coca-Cola Company, said, "As previously announced, we are exploring a potential IPO of our bottling operations in India and will provide further updates as appropriate." HCCB has reported strong operating performance in the latest available quarter.

For the three months ended June 30, 2026, its revenue from operations increased 20.46% year-on-year to ₹4,310.17 crore. Total sales volume grew 18.61% during the period, while Ebitda margin, excluding other income and exceptional items, improved to 17.20% from 13.76% in the corresponding period last year.

Kotak Mahindra Capital, Citigroup Global Markets India, J.P. Morgan India, Morgan Stanley India, Axis Capital, Goldman Sachs (India) Securities and IIFL Capital Services have been appointed as the book-running lead managers to the IPO.

Tata Steel PAT up 16% in Q2; beats estimates

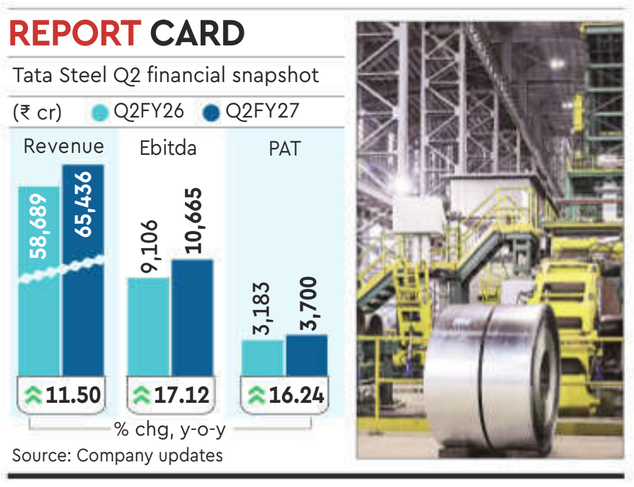

URVI MALVANIA
Mumbai, November 7

TATA STEEL REPORTED that its net profit for Q2FY27 grew 16.24% to ₹3,700 crore compared to ₹3,183 crore in the same period a year before, led by lower inventory cost. Profit came ahead of Bloomberg estimates of ₹3,254 crore.

The company's revenue came in at ₹65,436 crore and was up 11.5% year-on-year (y-o-y), also ahead of Bloomberg estimates of ₹64,152 crore.

"We delivered strong growth in deliveries and earnings this quarter, backed by a resilient supply chain and close customer engagement, despite ongoing geoeconomic uncertainty and higher raw material costs. India continued to be the cornerstone of our performance with volumes growing 16% quarter-over-quarter (QoQ) despite a seasonally softer quarter, reflecting the strength of our market presence and customer reach," TV Narendran, CEO and managing director at Tata Steel said in a statement.

Earnings before interest, taxation, depreciation and amortisation (Ebitda) at ₹10,665 crore was up 17.12% over Q2FY26. Ebitda was ahead of Bloomberg estimates of ₹10,007 crore. Ebitda margin was 16%.

Oil ministry defends E20 standards

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, November 7

THE GOVERNMENT ON Saturday defended the 20% ethanol-blended petrol programme, saying tests of 893 samples collected across 27 states and Union Territories, including 56 in Karnataka, found them compliant with prescribed quality standards, as state-run oil companies challenged the Karnataka government's claims of excessive ethanol content in fuel sold at some retail outlets. The ethanol content in all 893 samples were found to be within the prescribed 19-21% range. The 56 samples tested in Karnataka, recorded ethanol content of 19-20%, averaging 19.30%. The OMCs have questioned the sampling and testing procedures adopted in Karnataka's October 2026 exercise.

Car market takes firm electric leap

"THE EV MOMENTUM is here to stay. One reason is the sheer number of models entering the market, alongside noticeable improvements in build quality, real-world range, and highway charging infrastructure," Som Kapoor, partner and Future of Mobility leader at EY-Parthenon, told FE. "On a growing CAGR of overall cars, the EV CAGR will be significantly higher."

October sales show that while Tata and Mahindra have a solid grip on the EV market — both together accounted for 64.4% of all mass-market EVs sold during the month, with Tata selling 14,669 EVs and Mahindra at 8,542 EVs — the mid-tier landscape is becoming competitive. JSW MG Motor India held the third place with 5,940 units, followed by VinFast at 2,571 units, Kia at 1,395 units, and Maruti Suzuki at 1,200 units.

"The initial phase immediately after Covid-19 was driven by curious early adopters and fleet operators. This year, thanks to the sheer number of models available and charging confidence along major intercity corridors, we are seeing EVs becoming the first car in a family," an automotive analyst tracking retail dispatches.

On the extreme upper end of the market, luxury EV sales grew 53%, and October's 868 units pushed year-to-date luxury EV sales past 7,000 units — more than full-year CY25 volumes of 5,725 units. BMW dominated the landscape with 462 EVs sold, and Tesla finished second with 291 EVs. "For high net-worth individuals, luxury EVs have transitioned from secondary garage experiments to primary commute choices," the analyst added. "High-voltage charging setups at home and performance capability mean premium buyers no longer view EVs as a compromise."

Indian epics get new avatars in online gaming

INDIAN MYTHOLOGY HAS also found its way into international gaming. Asura's Wrath, developed by Japanese studio CyberConnect2, blends Hindu and Buddhist mythological elements with science fiction. The action game follows the demigod Asura on a quest for vengeance against the pantheon that betrayed him.

"Every great mythology on the Earth has had its blockbuster except the biggest one. The audience has been to Camelot, Olympus, Valhalla, feudal Japan and mythological China. Ancient India — five thousand years deep, alive in the daily life of a billion and a half people — has never been built at this scale in a video game," said Nicolas Granatino, executive chairman of Tara Gaming, which has studios across London, Paris and Pune.

Tara Gaming, co-founded by actor Amitabh Bachchan, author Amish Tripathi and Nouredine Abboud, is developing The Age of Bhaarat, a global AAA dark-fantasy action-adventure inspired by Indian epics.

Currently at pre-launch stage, the announcement trailer has already passed tens of millions of views with roughly 96% positive sentiment, and 70% of wishlists coming from outside India. "The Pune studio has gone from a single hire to nearly a hundred. On the capital front, we have raised $30 million from investors in Europe, India and the Gulf," said Granatino. Another upcoming title, Hanuman's Legacy, from Gurugram-based Tusharth Studios, seeks to take Indian mythology to a global audience. The AA action-adventure game is set in mythological India in 1200 BC. The studio describes a world "where the warrior god walks the Earth, ancient architecture breathes, and every encounter is grounded in three thousand years of sacred truth".

India is no stranger to the global gaming industry. Its developers contribute to some of the world's biggest gaming franchises, with companies such as Rockstar and Ubisoft employing thousands of Indians. But the opportunity to create and own globally successful intellectual property remains largely untapped. The success of Black Myth: Wukong, a AAA game rooted in Chinese mythology, offers a compelling precedent. The title sold 10 million copies in just three days and has crossed 30 million sales since launch.

Bumper Diwali for ace investors

EVEN SOME OF the biggest names in Indian investing experienced contrasting fortunes. Rekha Jhunjhunwala's portfolio value rose 19%, bucking the broader market weakness. In contrast, the portfolios of billionaire investor Radhakishan Damani and Premji and Associates declined by 20% each. For some, the gains have been spectacular. Eight investors saw their portfolio values jump by more than 50%, while another 18 recorded increases of 10-50%. Eight others registered gains of less than 10%.

Among the biggest winners were Sanjay Gupta, Dheeraj Kumar Lohia and Associates, Raj Kumar Lohia, Suresh Kumar Agarwal, Amit Gupta, Sunil Singhania, Vanaja Sundar Iyer and Nikhil Vora. Their portfolio values surged by more than 50% since last Diwali, comfortably outperforming the benchmark indices.

Lincoln P Coelho, Atim Kabra, Mahendra Girdharilal, Hitesh Ramji Javeri and Associates, Anil Kumar Goel and Associates, Akash Bhanshali, Dilipkumar Lakhi and Dipak Kanayalal Shah also had reason to celebrate, with their portfolio values climbing between 20% and 43%.

But many investors suffered as well. The portfolio values of 27 investors declined, with losses ranging from 3% to a staggering 64%, highlighting the sharp divergence in fortunes even among seasoned market participants.

Shivani Tejas Trivedi, Ashish Chugh and Jayesh Patel saw their portfolio values plunge by more than 50%. The portfolios of Keswani Haresh, Amal Parikh, Dolly Khanna, Bhavook Tripathi, Ashish Dhawan, Shankar Sharma, Ramesh Damani, Urjita Master and Madhukar Sheth suffered declines of 25-43%.

Eco-warriors debate AI love, hate

THE GROUP RECENTLY started using AI to assess hotspots detected by satellites and send real-time alerts to community forest patrols about potential wildfires in remote and environmentally sensitive parts of Cambodia.

Reuters interviewed 15 major environmental, conservation and development organisations about their AI use. All said they used the technology in some form and expressed concern about the environmental impact of the data centres powering it. The centres, filled with servers, can require vast amounts of electricity, along with water for cooling.

It's a global dilemma for individuals, governments and industries balancing AI's benefits with its enormous risks. The tradeoffs likely will grab attention at the UN's COP31 climate conference starting Monday, when host Turkey will call on governments, businesses and other institutions to sign a pledge outlining principles to ensure AI is developed and deployed sustainably.

UN Secretary-General Antonio Guterres wants major AI companies to publicly disclose their systems' environmental impacts.

Researchers at the United Nations University Institute for Water, Environment and Health estimate the global data-centre footprint could more than double by 2030, reaching a size about twice that of Jakarta, the Indonesian megalopolis.

UN Sec-Gen Antonio Guterres wants major AI companies to publicly disclose their systems' environmental impacts

The International Energy Agency, meanwhile, estimates global data centres will consume about 945 terawatt-hours of electricity annually by 2030, producing the equivalent of more than 300 million metric tonne of carbon dioxide. Many of the organisations that spoke to Reuters believe AI's benefits currently outweigh its costs. Kenya's Save the Elephants, a partner of the Wildlife Conservation Network, said it is using machine learning to improve population surveys and study elephant communication. Frank Pope, the group's chief executive, said an aerial survey of Kenya's largest protected area last year generated roughly 200,000 images that took nine people nine months to review manually.

Pope said, "We found that human surveys were missing about a third of the elephants, roughly half of zebras and giraffes, and three-quarters of oryx populations." More accurate wildlife data can help secure financing for conservation, he said. At the institute founded by the late conservation icon Jane Goodall, researchers are using AI to digitise decades of field notes about chimpanzee behavior in Tanzania's Gombe National Park. The project was once expected to take 13-15 years because the records were written by hand using the local Kiha language and scientific shorthand. Thanks to a tool developed with Amazon Web Services, the notes can now be scanned, translated and structured in minutes, said Lilian Pintea, the Jane Goodall Institute's vice president of conservation science. "AI technology should be seen as tools which are human-centered," Pintea said.

Some organisations are experimenting with ways to limit the environmental impact of their AI use. The World Resources Institute (WRI), a research group that uses AI to accelerate its climate and environmental analyses, said it limits resource-intensive applications such as generating videos and images, while caching AI query results so identical searches don't need to be reprocessed.

The crisis MANAGER

How not to get your hands dirty while doing business

MADAN SABNAVIS

INOJO INTERIM MANAGEMENT is not a name that too many people may be familiar with. However, CXOs who have faced various problems that come in the way of carrying out business, which can range from internal strife to possibly being incarcerated, will have this name in their phone books. Started by Vineet Relia, the firm does what few others do — crisis management of a different type. Having been the MD of a large real estate company, and having faced several nasty experiences, Relia ended up choosing crisis management as a career.

The book, aptly titled Relax, It's Only a Raid, talks about the various challenges that one can face when running a business. They can be demoralising and can shatter one's confidence. More importantly, these are often bolts out of the blue with adequate shock value.

RELAX, IT'S ONLY A RAID IS AN EXCELLENT BOOK BASED ON PRACTICAL EXPERIENCES AND SHOULD BE READ BY ALL CXOs

Let us look at Relia's story to begin with. Working as the head of a real estate company which he did not own, he had to face the wrath of homeowners who never received their houses. The promoters were not in the country and the onus fell on the MD, who was rightfully targeted by the people who had invested in the schemes. Public sympathy was with them, and for all practical purposes, Relia was the symbol of the villainous company. He writes about how he manoeuvered this crisis and then went on to form his own enterprise that specialises in such firefighting. So, what exactly are these unwelcome surprises that can happen any time?

You can get an income tax notice, and this can put one in a loop of running to the tax office to issue clarifications and sort things out. A notice is a polite way of being told that one is under watch. It can get serious when there is a raid, which we often read about in newspapers. This creates the right noise to disrupt one's reputation as everyone around is aware that something is amiss.

The answer is to have all accounts in order and have answers to all questions that are asked. This is where a crisis manager is required for proper guidance.

The same holds for the enforcement directorate which is even further up in the food chain where one must be really on full guard. And last could be an FIR — first information report — which can lead to look out notices. Some of the instances narrated by Relia sound more like what we see in movies and getting out of such situations is extremely taxing and requires abundant skill. One's memory can go back to several such instances of CEOs who are not allowed to leave the country due to such filings. The CEO could just be the face of the company but must face the music for sure when things go wrong.

Such situations are something many companies may be going through and while the bigger ones have a dedicated staff to deal with these issues, for those in the mid-range, a guide is necessary to know what to do in such a scenario.

The author recounts some incidents in the book, such as regarding a mafia that was involved in case of a company dealing with scrap. Here, it is a crisis manager who figures out how to deal with the situation and has to use contacts in the police to address resolve issues, which might be out of hand of the management, which would never know how to deal with them.

Company heads also have to deal with worker unions which can be nerve crunching as they have to balance the directions of the management and at the same time face the workers who can get violent at times — as was seen sometime back in an automobile company.

The same holds for accidents on sites of manufacturing companies where public opinion naturally goes against the management as the capitalist is targeted.

Relax, It's Only a Raid is an excellent book based on practical experiences and should be read by all CXOs. The reason is simple. It can happen to them. When one is the face of the company, this responsibility goes with the position. Any grievance against the company or actions seen negatively by the authorities automatically means the CEO-level person is responsible for it.

An Indian immigrant in Canada considers the cost of cancer that crashes her world

FAIZAL KHAN

SOMEWHERE IN THE middle of Nirmala Thomas' novel Snowed Under is a story about an American Mardi Gras tradition of flashing for beads. Ashwini Ram, the novel's central character, quickly dismisses the idea as she hears it. Ashwini, an engineer who builds big construction projects in Canada, thinks flashing is not for a girl like her, an immigrant from Kerala. After all, she doesn't even wear a blouse showing cleavage.

The Mardi Gras flashing is one of the many tropes in Snowed Under that connects different cultures in a country of immigrants from across the world. This particular flashing story, however, connects well because it conjures up the body as a world of its own, battling inner turmoil amid a host of multiple parts and organs trying to keep order.

In the case of Ashwini, however, her body is also a new host to a multitude of cancerous cells, a disease that begins to eat both her body as well as mind. Snowed Under lays bare the mind and body of an individual who comes face to face with a life-threatening disease, opening the floodgates of emotions and questioning the past in the face of an uncertain future. Thomas' second novel, first published in Malayalam as Manjil Oruval five years ago, offers a fresh voice in disease narrative in the story of a forty-something immigrant woman diagnosed with breast cancer.

Published six years after her debut novel Pampum Koniyum (Snakes and Ladders), Snowed Under is set in Ontario, the busy multicultural province of Canada. Ashwini is a senior engineer in a firm leading major construction projects in the country. Arriving in the North American country as a Master's degree student, she never left, finding a new home, husband and family in the freezing cold climes. Twenty years after she first arrived, Ashwini is busy balancing her love for work and her daughter Keerthana, an aspiring medical student, when disaster strikes.

At first it was a feeling between her fingers adjusting her blouse in a public washroom after a spilled coffee in a food court with friends. Soon it is a "grain of rice" that requires a visit to the doctor. "Most women after forty do a mammogram regularly," offers the doctor. The health department of Ontario greeted women on the verge of fifty with letters detailing symptoms of cancer and encouraging them to do a mammogram. Ashwini was far from fifty. The visit to the clinic was an early morning appointment, just to avoid a day's leave from office work.

Suddenly, Ashwini was searching for something from her family to tide over an unexpected episode in her settled life. Her daughter was away burning candles on the university campus. Mohan, her husband, was sure the "rice grain" was a mere figment of Ashwini's imagination. The mammogram leads to a needle biopsy, which the doctor, now Dr Jabbar, an immigrant like her, cautions her would require rest for the rest of the day. As she waits for the biopsy result, her friends, most of them from Kerala, complain about her sudden absence and suspect she might be having an affair.

The biopsy result comes positive. "That's good. I knew you were worrying unnecessarily," says the husband, who is swiftly corrected that it was the test result that was positive, not the news. A second biopsy, which confirms the first, now escalates the condition, an invasive cancer, which in medical terms is a commonly occurring, ordinary, universal form of cancer, towards decisions such as "lumpectomy" or "mastectomy", removal of a lump or breast. Now it is time to tell the daughter and office colleagues. "Moley, don't be afraid," tells her mother from Kerala, "I have promised a para-ful of puffed rice to the Lord. You'll be all right."

Ashwini's struggles with her body and the mind after the arrival of the uninvited guest drive the narrative of the novel. She discovers that there are more sites on positive attitude than on breast cancer itself on the internet, which don't stop her hurtling towards anxiety and depression. The husband, who is set on climbing the corporate ladder, becomes silent and absent. "Is that poor boy also going hungry?" asks her mother about the well-being of the husband after the surgery. It doesn't take much time for Ashwini's world to shrink to the size of the "rice grain".

Part of a rare window into diseases and its impact on people's lives in Indian literature, Snowed Under offers a sensitive portrayal of a person's loss and grief. The novel, the author notes, derives its origins from her own ignorance about breast cancer after a chance meeting with a cancer survivor in the fall of 2009 when she asked why the person was concealing her beautiful sari with a shawl, only to be told that there was "nothing there". The "self-aversion, humiliation, guilt and remorse" that followed resulted in a 15-page short story, expanded into a novel after a decade.

PRICES MAY RISE ACROSS CATEGORIES SOON

Big-ticket slump dims festive e-comm sales

ANEES HUSSAIN
Bengaluru, November 7

ONLINE FESTIVE SALES have fallen short of even the industry's muted expectations, which were already tempered by rising input costs that pushed up prices across categories and left little room for discounts. Gross merchandise value (GMV) in the run-up to Diwali grew 13-15% year-on-year (y-o-y), against the 20-25% growth industry analysts and executives had expected. While festive shoppers shifted their spending to lower-priced categories such as home decor, fashion, footwear, beauty and personal care, and grocery, growth in these could not make up for the value lost to the slowdown in smartphones, laptops and large appliances, multiple industry analysts and executives FE spoke to said.

Last year's festive GMV had grown 25% over the 2024 season to ₹1.2 lakh crore, helped by GST rate cuts that took effect a day before the sales opened in September 2025 and set off a rush of big-ticket buying. That followed growth of 16% in 2023 and 19% in 2024. This year marks the first slowdown in growth in three years and the slowest festive growth in at least five years, according to industry estimates.

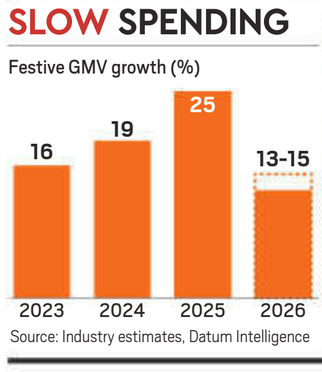

The biggest drag on sales value came from smartphones, estimated to account for 24-25% of GMV in the run-up to this Diwali, against about 30% expected before the season began and 35.2% of last year's festive GMV. Higher prices driven by the memory crisis kept many shoppers away from new phones, and even EMI schemes and bank offers failed to pull them back, analysts said. "We thought EMIs, or bank offers would push sales, but nothing clicked there. Smartphones and laptops actually did worse than what we expected, that's where the biggest drop is," said Satish Meena, founder of Datum Intelligence. Apple's flagship launch also saw it skipping the base iPhone version, leaving no affordable entry option for most aspirants. Older iPhone models, which typically become cheaper after a launch, did not get cheaper either, Meena said.

Much of this year's growth came from higher order volumes rather than purchases of higher-value products. Orders rose at least 10-15% over the same period last year, according to industry estimates, as shoppers spread their spending across lower-priced categories like home decor, fashion, footwear, beauty and personal care, and grocery.

These categories contribute far less to GMV per order. Fashion orders, for instance, had an average selling price of ₹1,643 between September 1 and October 31, with half priced below ₹1,000, according to data from Reliance-owned commerce platform Fynd.

Dil se DIWALI

The Gen Z speak their heart out on what the festival has come to mean to them, how they view tradition, and what is their idea of a perfect Diwali

Give me a pressure-free festival

Aryan Bhatt, 22
Student, Delhi

ONE THING THAT feels outdated to me is the pressure to celebrate Diwali in a particular way whether it is buying expensive clothes, spending excessively or comparing how grandly others are celebrating. I think the festival should be about joy rather than obligation or competition. For me, Diwali is less about following every tradition exactly as it has always been and more about preserving the feeling behind them — family, togetherness, celebration and hope. My ideal Diwali would be a balance between tradition, celebration and simplicity. I'd rather have meaningful conversations and good company than an overly elaborate celebration. For me, a perfect Diwali is one where everyone feels included and genuinely happy.

Swastik Singh, 23
Advocate, Chandigarh

I AM NEITHER disillusioned or enthusiastic about Diwali. I've never treated a festival as a benchmark to begin something new, or as something larger than life. I enjoy the fleeting moments it brings, and that's where my relationship with Diwali begins and ends.

However, I don't think any tradition is outdated; everything needs to be understood in its context before it's judged. My views may sound a bit atheistic, and that comes from growing up in a liberal household.

Eating loads of mithai, which I am not sure counts as a tradition, is non-negotiable for me. Lighting diyas around the house and helping my parents prepare festive delicacies — simple, warm and at home is an ideal Diwali.

Rumjhum Dhasmana, 25
Works with NGO, Delhi

I BELIEVE FESTIVALS should bring people together, not police their choices. My idea of an ideal Diwali has always been rather simple, making a rangoli, sharing sweets with neighbours, family puja and streets glowing with festive lights. I cherish making homemade sweets and snacks with my family, and the joy of sneaking hot bites straight off the thaali. While dressing up is a must, buying something new isn't. It's less about what's new in my wardrobe and more about the feeling of putting on something I love.

Rithik Kalra, 19
BTech student, Delhi

I'M DEFINITELY ENTHUSIASTIC about Diwali. I feel traditions can change with time without losing what makes them special. For me, it's mostly about dressing up, lights, good food, family and enjoying the whole vibe. I really like lighting diyas and decorating the house because that's when it actually starts feeling like Diwali.

One thing I don't really like is the pressure to celebrate it in a certain way. Everyone should be able to celebrate it however they want.

An ideal Diwali for me would be spending the day with family, dressing up, eating good food and decorating the house. Then meeting friends in the evening and just hanging out. Nothing too complicated.

Traditions evolve, won't follow blindly

Ishita Mazumdar, 20
Chemistry student, Gurugram

ONE DIWALI TRADITION I cherish is a personal one which I share with my parents. Most years on the week leading up to Diwali we drive around the locality just looking at the beautiful ways people have decorated their houses. I also love the tradition of 'chothyo prodeep' on the eve of Diwali in which we light 14 lamps. Something I find outdated is the pressure to follow certain customs simply because they've always been followed. I think traditions are worth keeping when they mean something to you, not just because you're expected to.

An ideal Diwali is something in which you have good food and good vibes. The idea of home becomes less fixed over time as we all move on with our lives, but I also feel being in a new city or country lets you make little Diwali traditions for yourself. At the same time, pieces of the traditions which you bring from your home make the festival in a new place feel familiar too.

Sanjana Dutta, 20
Economics student, Delhi

I'M SOMEWHERE BETWEEN disillusioned and enthusiastic about Diwali. I cherish lighting diyas because it has been a comforting tradition since childhood. My ideal Diwali would involve diyas, rangoli, decorations and family time. A new outfit isn't essential for me, and I prefer wearing whatever makes me feel good, whether traditional or not. Clothes have been evolving for centuries now, and there was even a time when saris used to be worn without blouses, so for something like a 'low-cut blouse' to be making headlines feels incredibly futile.

Sakanksh Dutta, 20
Computer science student, Kolkata

ONE TRADITION THAT feels outdated to me is buying gold or silver on Dhanteras without actually planning for it. Mandatory buying of coins can be a financial strain, given the high cost of these metals. But people feel pressured to buy because it's 'tradition', irrespective of whether they can afford it or not.

Shubhangi Sharma, 23
Business analyst, Gurugram

I'M DEFINITELY ENTHUSIASTIC about Diwali, the dressing up, food, sweets, lights and, most importantly, spending time with family and friends. I cherish the traditions of actually visiting people and wishing them in person than just sending a WhatsApp message. But some ideas like new clothes isn't compulsory. Last year, I wore my mother's saree with a crop top and belt and loved giving it my own twist. Whether someone wants to wear a deep-neck blouse, a high-neck blouse, a saree, a lehenga or something completely different, they should enjoy wearing it. My ideal Diwali is stress-free days of food, family and memories. Same for crackers. Something so detrimental cannot be used just because it is tradition.

POST-DIWALI POLLUTION

Delhi's air quality tends to deteriorate around Diwali. Last year, the city's 24-hour average AQI rose from 268 on Oct 18 and 296 on Oct 19 to 345 on Diwali (Oct 20). The AQI climbed further to 351 on Oct 21 and 353 on Oct 22, remaining in the 'very poor' category

Roots are memories & people, not places or houses

Kartik Mutreja, 19

'GOING HOME' FOR Diwali is less about the physical place and more about the people. Even if home is in another city or country, Diwali is one of those occasions that makes you want to be around your family. And if you can't physically go home, I think Gen Z has made it easier to stay connected through video calls and virtual celebrations — although obviously, nothing quite replaces being there in person. I'm definitely more enthusiastic than disillusioned about Diwali. I think Gen Z is changing the way we celebrate rather than moving away from the festival itself. For me, Diwali is less about following every tradition exactly as it has been followed and more about spending time with family — dressing up, decorating the house and creating your own version of the celebration.

The one tradition I genuinely cherish is lighting diyas and decorating the house.

Dhirty Raj Narah, 23
Student, Delhi

WHEN I THINK of Diwali back home in Tezpur, Assam, I remember the little maati saaki burning at the entrance of our house, with the banana tree standing by the gate. I think of the familiar surroundings of the village and the Kali temple where we light diyas and offer prayers. Those memories have stayed with me precisely because they are so ordinary. They remind me of a time when Diwali was simply something that happened around home, without the need to plan or define it. Home has also become somewhat abstract for me and I have developed a sense of belonging where I live now.

On the other hand, I think the excessive spending associated with Diwali, particularly the idea that buying new clothes is almost obligatory, is outdated. Growing up makes you question things that you once accepted without thinking.

Manishankar Thangathurai, 23
Advocate, Delhi

I'VE COME TO believe home is less a place and more a feeling. If I can't be there, I recreate it — I light a diya, cook a family recipe, wear something traditional, and gather whoever is around me, especially friends who are far from their own families too. Add a long video call with everyone back home, and for a few hours the distance disappears. I love wearing a vesthi. It connects me to my family, my roots. I buy new clothes but I try to make that choice count, buying from handloom weavers and local artisans. An ideal Diwali is home full of the people I love. Family, friends and food that never stops coming out of the kitchen.

But what feels outdated is the competitive gifting circuit: the endless exchange of dry-fruit boxes and hampers that gets passed along and never really enjoyed.

Amritesh Kaur, 27
Tech professional, Gurugram

DIWALI IS ABOUT family, cherished traditions and the comforting feeling of home. An ideal celebration means having everyone you love around you. Returning home means not just coming back to a place; it's about coming back to a feeling. Traditions reconnect us with our childhood, even as life changes.

However, a new outfit is non-negotiable. Tyohaaron mein purane kapde kaun pehenta hai yaar? I absolutely love that feeling of everyone gathering under one roof. The sight of my father in kurta-pyjama, my mother preparing festive recipes and cousins decorating the house fills me with joy. Even thinking about all of this gives me goosebumps. Diwali is about the people, the traditions, the prayers, and the togetherness. Above all, it is a feeling of belonging that I hope never changes.

Pranay Goyal, 25
Marketing manager, Bengaluru

LIVING AWAY FROM my hometown Jaipur has reshaped my understanding of home. I used to think it was a place; I've come to realise it's about the people. This year, celebrating with my mother in Bengaluru feels just as meaningful.

As a kid, I used to wait for the aarti to get over so that I could run out and burst crackers. As I've grown older, I've realised the aarti carries the greater significance — it brings the family together. My father used to lead the Diwali puja when I was a kid. But after his passing, I do it now, keeping the tradition alive. Is a new outfit a must? Not really. As long as it's a relatively new kurta, I'm fine. Diwali how it is shaping today is a mix of both — disillusionment over crackers but enthusiastic about the break and the family time, which makes the festival special.

Ditch the spectacle, over-spending

Jiya Kapoor, 24
Dietitian, Ajmer

I'M DEFINITELY ENTHUSIASTIC about Diwali. I think traditions naturally evolve with time, and that doesn't necessarily mean we are losing their essence. For me, Diwali is less about following every tradition exactly as it was followed before and more about holding on to the emotions behind them — togetherness, warmth, celebration and hope. I actually enjoy seeing how people are giving traditional celebrations their own modern interpretation while still keeping the spirit of Diwali alive.

One tradition I really cherish is getting together with family, dressing up and sharing food. It's the simple act of everyone being together that makes the festival special for me.

But I feel the idea that Diwali celebrations have to be excessive is becoming outdated — whether it is buying new things just for the sake of it, wasting food or spending beyond what is necessary. I feel celebrations should be about creating memories rather than creating unnecessary waste or pressure. My ideal Diwali would be a balance between celebration and simplicity — being surrounded by family and friends, dressing up, having a good food, decorating the house, exchanging gifts and spending quality time together.

Prasun Ballabha, 23
Advocate, Noida

I AM ACTUALLY enthusiastic about Diwali. I don't think embracing modernity means that we have to distance ourselves from traditions. For me, Diwali is about finding a balance between the two. I may not follow every tradition exactly the way previous generations did, but I still enjoy the feeling that comes with Diwali.

One tradition I genuinely cherish is spending time with family over a meal. Even if it is just sitting around, talking and eating together, that is what makes the festival special for me. But what feels outdated is the idea that Diwali celebrations have to follow a fixed template: new clothes, elaborate rituals and excessive shopping, simply because "that's how it has always been done". I think traditions should evolve with people. If something is meaningful to you, keep it; if it feels performative or forced, there should be no pressure to continue it. Personally, I enjoy dressing up for Diwali, but I don't think a new outfit is a requirement for the festival. There's nothing wrong with buying something new if you genuinely want it, but buying an outfit every year just for the sake of it feels unnecessary. Gen Z are becoming much more conscious about consumption, and festivals are a good opportunity to celebrate without turning everything into a shopping exercise.

The perfect Diwali

Garv Diga, 20
Engineering student, Delhi

THE FESTIVAL SERVES as a cultural bridge. Going home for Diwali shifts from a physical journey into a mental and spiritual return to one's roots, proving that light can find its way across. Diwali is when families and friends come together, enjoy meals and do prayers together.

It is a festival that brings hope, positive energy, lights, togetherness... Morning begins with a positive, festive energy in the air, we relish sweet dishes, rangoli outside the front door. In the evening, clay diyas filled with mustard oil are lit up, bringing a peaceful glow on everyone's faces. Everyone dressing up in traditional attire and gathering together for the evening feels good. Dinner with loved ones, storytelling and sharing sweets with neighbours and friends make it complete.

Rosy Khanna, 19
MBBS student, Delhi

AN IDEAL DIWALI according to me will be my whole family wearing new clothes, eating together, lighting the house and doing puja together. The tradition of putting up lights and lighting diyas is what I cherish most.

But exchanging gifts seems outdated, as the gifts mostly just keep passing on. So is the tradition of burning crackers. Also, this fascination for constantly clicking pictures takes away the focus on just sitting together, talking and eating. The tradition of new clothes, however, gives a middle-class household a reason to buy new ones.

Diwali is a shared sentiment, across divides

Raaniah Jameel, 25
Public health professional, Delhi

GROWING UP IN Delhi as a Muslim, Diwali was never something I saw as belonging exclusively to someone else. I have celebrated Diwali even during the eight years I spent outside India. Some of my closest friends are Hindu, and there has always been this very natural exchange: I celebrate Diwali with them, they celebrate Eid with me. That, to me, is one of the most beautiful things about growing up in India. Secularism is not always an abstract constitutional idea; sometimes it is simply your neighbour sending you mithai, your friend inviting you home, or an entire neighbourhood lighting up together.

My ideal Diwali is actually quite simple: dressing up, stepping out into the city, seeing all the lights, and ending the night at a party with friends. I love what Delhi feels like during Diwali. There's something special about watching an entire city collectively shift its rhythm — homes light up, everyone is dressed up, neighbours drop by, families come together, and there's a shared sense of celebration. Living outside India taught me that home is much less geographical than I had imagined. It made me realise that culture travels. You don't necessarily lose your roots when you leave home; sometimes you become more conscious of them. You begin to understand that identity is not a fixed thing you inherit once and carry unchanged. It is something you keep producing through the people you meet, the places you live and the traditions you choose to continue. So Diwali, for me, is less about a particular address and more about recreating that feeling of belonging.

I think tradition stays alive not by remaining unchanged, but by giving every generation the freedom to reinterpret it. Our roots give us a sense of belonging; they don't have to determine who we become.

INDIA CRISIS

India generates approximately 0.171 million tonne of municipal solid waste (MSW) per day (about 65 million tonne annually), according to Central Pollution Control Board (CPCB). Urbanisation and industrialisation place a heavy load on the environment by driving severe pollution

How the DIWALI WASTE can be won

The festival of prosperity need not be a celebration of overconsumption. Reduce, reuse and recycle to leave behind cherished memories, not an unnecessary environmental burden

SREYA DEB

DIWALI, THE FESTIVAL of lights, is traditionally associated with prosperity and renewal. Yet, beneath the festive glow lies an environmental contradiction: a celebration of prosperity that generates mountains of waste. Today, the meaning of renewal has become entangled with consumption. The result is polluted air, overflowing bins, discarded decorations and objects that still have years of useful life left in them.

Just to give you a scale of festive waste, the Brihanmumbai Municipal Corporation, the governing civic body of Mumbai, reportedly recorded more than 3,000 metric tonne of additional garbage during the festive week last year. Daily waste generation rose from an average of approximately 6,900 tonne to around 7,300 tonne, with 7,799 tonne recorded on October 20, 2025. In Pune, between October 17 and 24, 2025, the Pune Municipal Corporation collected 18,591 tonne of waste, comprising approximately 12,157 tonne of dry waste and 6,343 tonne of wet waste. Daily collections rose to 2,700-2,900 tonne, compared with a usual total of around 2,300 tonne. Packaging, paper, plastic wrappers and leftover food contributed to the increase, as per reports. Similarly, during October 17-23 last year, the Nashik Municipal Corporation collected an additional 1,250 tonne of garbage. Daily collection increased from around 723 tonne to approximately 928 tonne, prompting the deployment of hundreds of garbage vans. In Surat, municipal officials reported that waste generation increased during the three days of Diwali celebrations, with approximately 600 tonne collected daily. Although collection figures do not always distinguish Diwali waste from ordinary daily rubbish, reports from several Indian cities demonstrate the additional burden placed on civic infrastructure. India does not have a single, comprehensive national estimate of waste generated specifically during Diwali, so municipal collection figures provide the closest indication of its scale.

What a waste!

Intensive household cleaning and redecorating often lead to the disposal of usable furniture, clothes, furnishings and household objects. "Purchases of new decorations, electronics, gifts and festive clothing increase demand for raw materials, energy, transportation and packaging," says a spokesperson for Chintan, an environmental research and action group.

Gifting is another significant source of waste. "Boxes of sweets, dry fruits and corporate hampers often come wrapped in layers of cardboard, plastic trays, cellophane, ribbons and branded bags. Much of this packaging is discarded immediately after the gift is opened. Decorations also contribute to the problem. Plastic flowers, synthetic torans, metallic streamers, rangoli materials and inexpensive decorative lights may be used for only a few days. Products combining plastic, foil, adhesives and other materials can be difficult to recycle," the spokesperson adds. "Over the past five years, our Diwali collection drives have helped keep more than 98,000 kg of plastic out of landfills. Imagine the difference we could make if every household started separating its waste at home. So much more waste could be recycled instead of being dumped or burned," says Kinjal Kansabanik, assistant marketing manager, ReCircle, a waste management and recycling service.

Bye-buy shopping

Festive shopping is reinforced by advertising, social expectations and the belief that purchasing something new is auspicious. New clothes, curtains, bedsheets, cushion covers, kitchenware, appliances and decorative objects often become part of the annual Diwali checklist, even when existing possessions remain perfectly functional. "Textiles illustrate this pattern particularly well. An outfit that is no longer fashionable is not necessarily worn out. Old saris can become festive drapes, dupattas can be transformed into table runners, and garments can be altered, repaired, exchanged or donated. Curtains and cushion covers can be refreshed rather than replaced," says Priyanka Khanna, innovation director at Fashion for Good, a sustainable fashion innovation platform.

"Similarly, working lamps can be repainted, existing ornaments rearranged and decorative lights repaired where safe. Crockery can be borrowed for large gatherings instead of purchasing disposable plates or replacing perfectly usable dinnerware," says a consultant with My Waste Solutions, a solid waste management consultancy firm. According to the spokesperson, sculptures of gods and goddesses, posters, rangoli powders, string lights and other items can be easily reused for many years after they are purchased. Businesses can reduce waste by choosing practical gifts with minimal packaging rather than distributing large hampers containing items employees may never use.

Help at hand

Several non-profit organisations are now involved in collecting waste materials for recycling. For example, the Municipal Corporation of Delhi (MCD) conducts waste collection drives post-Diwali. Collection spots are set up in specific areas where residents can come to segregate and dispose of their Diwali waste for recycling. The Delhi government's Chalo Yamuna Abhiyan, announced in October, also encourages citizens to prevent plastic and religious offerings from polluting the river. This year, the MCD is also launching a collection drive for diyas and old idols of gods and goddesses to transfer to waste to energy (WTE) plants for recycling.

Similarly, the Waste Pickers' Welfare Foundation based in Delhi works with ragpicker communities to collect and sort dry waste generated during Diwali. The list goes on. ScrapUncle, a doorstep scrap-collection service based in Delhi-NCR for recyclable household materials, may be useful for disposing of packaging material, metal and plastic waste accumulated during festive shopping and gifting. They can be called for a pickup from a number of locations in the national capital. Phool, a social enterprise based in Kanpur, transforms discarded flowers into products such as incense and other festive items, offering a model for upcycling floral waste. Saahas Zero Waste provides integrated waste-management services and supports decentralised dry-waste recovery systems in over 50 Indian cities across 17 states. Goonj's annual Khushiyon ka Recycle initiative for pre-Diwali can be used for your old blankets, clothes, materials, utensils, stationary or even household items.

WWF India has launched 'Green Diwali' for 2026. As part of the campaign, citizens are encouraged to take the 'Green Diwali Pledge' to avoid firecrackers, encourage family and neighbours to do the same, use diyas and energy-efficient lights, avoid single-use plastic, segregate waste and choose local products. Educational institutions are encouraged to organise pledge drives during assemblies, classes, rallies and community meetings. By embracing the principles of reduce, reuse and recycle, households, businesses and governments can ensure that the festival leaves behind cherished memories rather than an unnecessary environmental burden.

PREVENTION IS KEY

The most effective approach is to prevent waste before it is generated, reuse what remains functional and recycle materials that can no longer serve their original purpose

CLOTHES AND HOUSEHOLD GOODS

Repair, alter, exchange or donate usable clothes, toys, books and furnishings. Certain NGOs provide collection points for unwanted but usable possessions

GIFT PACKING MATERIAL

Reuse sturdy gift boxes, ribbons, cloth bags and decorative containers. Separate clean cardboard and paper from plastic films, laminated packaging and contaminated materials

DECORATIONS

Store and reuse torans, fairy lights and ornaments. Avoid mixing composite decorations containing glitter, foil and adhesives with recyclable paper

FLOWERS AND ORGANIC WASTE

Collect flowers, leaves and suitable organic offerings separately for composting or authorised organic-waste processing. Remove plastic threads, foil and other contaminants first. Avoid throwing offerings into drains or water bodies

CLAY DIYAS

Clean intact earthen lamps and store them for the following year. Broken clay pieces should be disposed of or reused according to local waste-management guidance

ELECTRICAL AND ELECTRONIC WASTE

Keep broken lights, batteries and unwanted electrical decorations separate from household rubbish. Hand them over to authorised e-waste collectors or designated collection centres

How to set up the perfect GRAZING TABLE

Diwali is a perfect time to lay out a spread

VAISHALI DAR

A GRAZING TABLE might be a western construct, but works beautifully on Diwali as well, where festive decorations can meet a royal spread that all Indian households invariably dish out on the festival. That it saves the host from making endless trips to the kitchen and serve multiple courses is an added bonus.

An abundant, thoughtfully styled spread of Indian savouries, global small plates, dips, fresh produce and mithai make a beautiful combination.

"A grazing table fits the Diwali party scene that has become part buffet, part conversation starter and part festive centrepiece. I make it look lavish without making the preparation overwhelming," says 42-year-old Vrinda Sharma Singh, a tax consultant based in Delhi.

Start with the food

One does not require a dozen elaborate recipes. Instead, think variety, colour and texture. For something fresh, include cucumber and carrot sticks, cherry tomatoes, grapes, apple slices and pomegranate scattered through the display. Small bowls of makhana, masala cashews and spiced almonds are perfect to nibble while chatting.

In starters, millet-based tikkis, seasonal salads and smaller dessert portions work well. Mini samosas, kachoris, dhokla, paneer tikka, chakli and mathri can sit alongside cheese, crackers, olives, hummus and roasted nuts. Create a separate mithai section with bite-sized ladoos, kaju katli, peda and chocolate truffles in the dessert section.

Neema Lath, founder of The Art Kitchen, who specialises in curated culinary experiences, suggests diya-shaped butter candles served with warm bread or a dessert platter inspired by rangoli motifs.

Order smart

The biggest hosting mistake is attempting to make everything from scratch. A better way is to outsource the time-consuming dishes and prepare a few simple accompaniments at home. For instance, order desserts, savoury snacks and kebabs from trusted caterers, while making dips, chutneys, spiced nuts and fruit platters at home.

Karina Thakrar Gupta, founder of homeware brand Fête Home, advises to add a dish that is sugar-free or gluten-free to accommodate guests with different dietary preferences. Try spiced chickpea curry, Tofu Pad Thai with rice noodles, coconut chickpea curry loaded with spinach and peas, served over rice; and corn tortillas with black beans, roasted sweet potatoes, or butternut squash, topped with avocado and salsa.

A good idea can be to mix Indian flavours of a paneer tikka, tandoori broccoli and gunpowder potatoes with pan-Asian bites like truffle edamame dumplings and crispy lotus root. Global flavours can be stuffed mushrooms and baked tomato and feta with focaccia.

For something sweet, gajar halwa crumble, rasmalai and baked cheesecake give the table a festive finish.

As per Prashant Issar, founder of Ishaara & MD of Bellona Hospitality, it is a variety without excess. "A few dishes done well make a stronger impression than a crowded table. Play with textures, colours and different platter heights, keep portions easy to pick up, and replenish to maintain freshness."

Little details matter

Arrange platters, label dishes, portion dips and organise serving utensils the day before. Keep backup portions, hot dishes and extra cutlery in the kitchen, replenishing the table in smaller batches. Perishable foods should not sit out for more than two hours, keep cold foods chilled and hot foods hot.

Bite-sized portions, serving tongs, small plates and clearly labelled dietary options help guests navigate the spread without fuss. Presentation is where a grazing table comes into its own. Gupta of Fête Home suggests starting with the largest platters, bowls and vases before building the arrangement around them. Use cake stands, tiered serving pieces or sturdy risers to create different heights. Group similar foods together, but distribute colours and textures across the table so the spread looks cohesive rather than cluttered. "Keep small gaps for guests to set down a plate or reach across comfortably," she says, adding, place plates and napkins at one end, and position dips beside the foods they accompany. On a long table, create several smaller food clusters rather than one continuous line.

Diyas and candles add atmosphere, but keep open flames well away from food, fabrics and anything flammable.

A grazing spread needs to be generous, inviting and thoughtfully put together. As Issar puts it, the idea is to encourage guests to "mingle, discover flavours and graze at their own pace".

India in a glass

Enjoy a desi twist to cocktails this Diwali

KUNAL DOLEY

HOW ABOUT A spicy cocktail inspired by aam papad, a jamun kala khatta sour, or a kokum agave margarita this Diwali? Indian ingredient cocktails are all the rage, but these can be mixed up right at home to add some zing to the festivities.

For instance, 'Aam Aadmi', a savoury and spicy take on the sticky aam papad, bringing together tequila, clarified tree tomato, sumac, house beer, and dalle chilli tincture, as mixed together at The Brook in Gurugram.

A kokum-agave mix can give a classic margarita an Indian twist with a bright, tangy character and a unique regional touch, says Deepak Jiyal, bar head at The Piano Man, New Delhi.

Mix vodka and rhododendron syrup for a nostalgic trip to the mountains, or whip up a mango lassi and add a dash of whisky, cardamom and saffron for a 'lassi sour', as served at Cafe Delhi Heights.

A popular flavour can be mango-chilli, ready to use as a mixer by Bartisans, and can be paired with tequila, gin, vodka or rum.

KIDS' SAFETY FIRST

Kids can be more vulnerable with their smaller airways, and symptoms may progress quickly. A coughing or wheezing child should be moved near cleaner air, kept upright, and their prescribed respiratory action plan should be followed

SREYA DEB

A POST-CELEBRATION CHECKLIST

From keeping rescue inhalers to pulse oximeters, here's how to prepare for the health risks that persist long after Diwali

THE CELEBRATIONS MAY be over, but for many people, particularly those with asthma, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD), heart disease and other respiratory conditions, the morning after Diwali can bring a different kind of challenge. A combination of firecracker emissions, accumulated particulate matter, vehicular pollution and unfavourable weather conditions can leave the air hazardous to breathe, triggering coughing, wheezing, breathlessness and, in vulnerable individuals, serious medical emergencies.

The risks extend beyond respiratory illness. Hospitals also see a spate of firecracker burns, eye injuries, accidents, alcohol-related trauma and other emergencies during and after the festival. Doctors say that preparation, timely recognition of warning signs and avoiding unnecessary exposure can help prevent complications.

Reducing exposure

For people with asthma, COPD or other chronic respiratory conditions, the first priority in the morning after Diwali should be to minimise exposure to polluted outdoor air. Also check local air quality readings and remain indoors when pollution levels are high.

"Keep windows and doors closed when outdoor pollution is high, use an air purifier if available, and avoid morning walks or outdoor exercise," says Dr Viny Kantroo, senior consultant in respiratory medicine, critical care and sleep medicine at Indraprastha Apollo Hospital. He also recommends continuing prescribed medicines and consulting a doctor in advance of Diwali, as treatment may need to be tailored to changing weather conditions and individual symptoms.

Dr Bornali Datta, director of respiratory and sleep medicine at Medanta, Gurugram, advises people to check the Air Quality Index (AQI) before heading outside, postpone unnecessary trips and use an appropriately sized air purifier with a HEPA (high-efficiency particulate air) filter, if available. Indoor pollution also matters: smoking, incense, strong fragrances and other sources of combustion can further aggravate respiratory symptoms. If going outdoors is unavoidable, a well-fitting N95 or equivalent particulate respirator can help reduce exposure to fine particles. Cloth and loose-fitting masks offer considerably less protection against these pollutants.

There is no single AQI threshold at which every person with a respiratory condition must avoid all outdoor activity. Sensitivity varies, and people with asthma or COPD may experience symptoms even when pollution levels are lower than those affecting others. Dr Datta advises sensitive individuals to exercise caution once the AQI rises above 50, while Dr Kantroo emphasises limiting outdoor activity as air quality deteriorates into the poor and very poor categories.

The practical approach is to monitor local conditions, avoid strenuous activity when pollution is elevated and respond early to symptoms. Keep windows closed while outdoor air quality is poor, then ventilate briefly when conditions improve. An air purifier should complement, not replace, these precautions.

Emergency evaluation

Pollution-related coughing or wheezing should not automatically be dismissed as a temporary irritation. Worsening symptoms can signal an asthma or COPD exacerbation, and waiting too long to seek care can be dangerous.

Dr Sanjay Mehta, director of accident and emergency at Kokilaben Dhirubhai Ambani Hospital, Mumbai, advises seeking immediate medical attention for breathlessness at rest, an inability to speak in full sentences, bluish lips or fingertips, chest pain or tightness, or wheezing that does not settle with the prescribed inhaler. Confusion, unusual drowsiness, coughing up blood and oxygen saturation below 92% are additional warning signs that warrant urgent assessment. Dr Kantroo similarly cautions against attributing a rapid deterioration in someone with asthma or COPD simply to pollution. Severe wheezing, difficulty walking or speaking because of breathlessness, fainting, confusion or rapidly worsening symptoms require emergency evaluation.

A pulse oximeter can help monitor oxygen saturation in selected patients, particularly those with significant COPD when home monitoring has been recommended by their doctor. However, readings can sometimes be misleading, and a seemingly reassuring reading should never override severe symptoms.

People with pre-existing heart disease should also be alert to chest discomfort, sudden breathlessness or other concerning symptoms.

Being prepared

For families managing respiratory illness, preparedness begins with knowing which medicines have been prescribed, where they are kept and how to use them correctly. Patients should keep their prescribed quick-relief inhaler readily accessible, along with their regular controller inhaler. A spacer is useful for people using a metered-dose inhaler and can be particularly helpful for children. Check expiry dates, remaining doses and inhaler technique before the festive period.

Dr Mehta recommends keeping a prescribed reliever, such as salbutamol or levosalbutamol, available with a spacer, along with regular controller medication and any additional treatment specifically included in the patient's written action plan. Dr Kantroo cautions that treatment requirements differ. Some patients use a prescribed inhaler regimen that serves as both maintenance and reliever therapy, while others require a separate reliever. "Patients should not independently increase, reduce or stop their regular asthma or COPD medication because of a pollution episode," he says. If symptoms become more frequent or rescue medication is needed more often than usual, the treatment plan may need review by the treating doctor.

A nebuliser is not essential for every household. It may be useful when a doctor has prescribed nebulised medication, but an inhaler used correctly with a spacer is effective for many patients. Repeated nebulisation at home must not delay emergency care. Never borrow another person's inhaler or nebuliser medication. Home oxygen should only be used when prescribed, at the recommended flow rate. Antibiotics, oral steroids and cough syrups should not be started without appropriate medical advice.

Vulnerable groups

Children can be particularly vulnerable because their airways are smaller and their respiratory symptoms may progress quickly. Parents should move a coughing or wheezing child away from polluted air, keep them calm and upright, and follow their prescribed asthma or respiratory action plan.

A prescribed inhaler should be administered using the child's recommended technique, with a spacer and mask where appropriate. Parents should watch for rapid breathing, nostrils flaring, the skin between or beneath the ribs pulling inward, grunting, difficulty speaking or feeding, unusual sleepiness or bluish lips.

Dr Datta warns that these signs may be subtle at first but can indicate significant breathing difficulty. Persistent wheezing or breathlessness despite prescribed treatment needs prompt assessment, while severe breathing difficulty warrants emergency care. Parents should not rely on steam inhalation or unprescribed medicines.

Burning issues

Respiratory problems are only one part of the Diwali emergency burden. "Burns top the list, mostly to hands, face and eyes from firecrackers and diyas, more often in children," says Dr Mehta. Emergency departments also see blast injuries to fingers, eye injuries, asthma and COPD flare-ups, cardiac events, road accidents, alcohol-related trauma and stomach upsets linked to overeating or contaminated sweets. Hearing damage is another risk that can go unreported.

For a burn, the immediate priority is to cool the affected area under cool running water for 20 minutes. Remove jewellery or clothing near the burn if it is not stuck to the skin, and cover the area loosely with a sterile, non-stick dressing or clean cling film. Do not apply ice, toothpaste, ghee, turmeric or other household remedies. Serious burns, burns involving the face or eyes, deep burns, electrical injuries and burns affecting children should receive prompt medical assessment. Firecracker eye injuries require urgent evaluation; do not rub the eye or attempt to remove an embedded object.

Keep a first-aid kit and appropriate dressings at home, and ensure that a fire extinguisher is accessible in the building. Water or sand may be kept nearby for appropriate fire-control needs, but never use water on an electrical or grease fire. Paracetamol may help with burn pain when suitable for the individual, but pain relief should not delay treatment. Children should be supervised around diyas and fireworks, wear fitted cotton clothing and maintain a safe distance from burning crackers. Avoid handling fireworks that fail to ignite, and protect hearing by keeping away from loud explosions.

Recognising risks

Doctors recommend reviewing respiratory treatment plans before Diwali, checking medication supplies and identifying the nearest emergency department. Families should know which symptoms require immediate help and avoid waiting for home treatment to work when breathing difficulty is severe.

The morning after Diwali, the priorities are straightforward: reduce outdoor exposure, keep indoor air as clean as possible, use a well-fitting respirator when going outside is unavoidable and continue prescribed treatment. Keep emergency medicines and essential equipment accessible, particularly for vulnerable family members. The celebrations may last a few hours, but their effects on air quality and health can continue well into the following days. Recognising the risks early - and knowing when not to manage them at home - can make the difference between a manageable flare-up and a medical emergency.

HEALTH CAPSULES

Prediabetics benefit from early bedtime

According to a clinical trial published in Nursing Research going to sleep earlier may support weight loss among people with prediabetes. The findings showed that participants experienced improved sleep as well as weight loss. Adding sleep coaching led to further improvements in sleep quality and daytime sleepiness.

WHO's new move for TB prevention

The World Health Organization has published target regimen profiles (TRPs) for long acting injectables for tuberculosis prevention and treatment. Tuberculosis (TB) prevention and treatment still depend on daily oral regimens taken over months. Long-acting injectables (LAIs) could significantly lighten the burden.

Junk food linked to silent strokes

Ultra-processed food can leave one at risk of "silent strokes" and cognitive decline by middle age, say researchers. After testing around 9,000 people, scientists found those with the "highest intake" of processed food to be 40% more likely to exhibit a form of brain damage that may increase the chances of clinical stroke.

New wireless tech for blood glucose

Researchers are developing a new wireless implant that uses electrochemical reactions to remove excess glucose, which has the potential to bring blood sugar levels under control in an hour. It is designed to convert excess glucose into gluconate, which can subsequently be eliminated through the kidneys.

The curse of the autoimmune disease

The risk of more than one autoimmune disease

FE FEATURES

MANY PEOPLE WITH an autoimmune disease have others as well. How are autoimmune diseases linked and are there certain pairs or clusters of autoimmune conditions that tend to have a higher incidence together? Dr Sunilkumar Singh, consultant, rheumatology, Kokilaben Dhirubhai Ambani Hospital, Mumbai, says: "Autoimmune diseases share common underlying mechanisms involving immune-system dysfunction and genetic susceptibility. Certain conditions are known to occur together. For instance, Type 1 diabetes may coexist with autoimmune thyroid disorders or coeliac disease, while rheumatoid arthritis can be associated with Sjögren's syndrome. These overlapping conditions are often referred to as autoimmune clustering, although developing one does not necessarily mean another will follow."

Does having even one autoimmune disease increase an one's risk of developing other autoimmune conditions?

Yes, having one autoimmune disease can increase an individual's likelihood of developing another, as several conditions share genetic and immunological pathways. However, the risk varies depending on the existing condition, family history and environmental factors. It is important to understand that an increased risk does not indicate certainty. Most individuals with an autoimmune condition will not necessarily develop another.

To what extent are autoimmune diseases genetic in origin? How significant is the role of hereditary factors?

Genetics plays an important role in autoimmune diseases, but most are not caused by a single gene. Multiple genetic variations can influence one's susceptibility, particularly those involving the HLA system. A family history may increase the likelihood of developing an autoimmune condition but does not guarantee inheritance. Environmental triggers, infections, hormonal influences and lifestyle factors also contribute to disease development.

Why is there currently no definitive cure for autoimmune diseases?

Autoimmune diseases involve complex immune-system abnormalities, where the body's defence mechanisms mistakenly attack healthy tissues. Completely suppressing this response could compromise the body's ability to fight infections. Additionally, different autoimmune conditions involve different mechanisms and organ systems. Current treatments, including immunosuppressants and biologic therapies, aim to control inflammation, manage symptoms, prevent organ damage and achieve remission rather than provide a permanent cure.

Can personalised medicine or gene therapy offer promising treatment possibilities for autoimmune conditions?

Personalised medicine holds significant promise in autoimmune disease management. Genetic testing, biomarkers and immune profiling can help identify disease-specific pathways and guide targeted treatments. Biologic therapies already demonstrate the benefits of this approach. Gene therapy and advanced cellular treatments, including CAR-T therapy, are also being investigated to regulate abnormal immune responses. However, these approaches remain under research for most autoimmune conditions.

Can autoimmune diseases be prevented? Are there any lifestyle measures or precautions that can help reduce the risk?

There is currently no established way to completely prevent most autoimmune diseases. However, maintaining a healthy lifestyle may help reduce certain modifiable risk factors. Avoiding smoking, eating a balanced diet, exercising regularly, maintaining a healthy weight, managing stress and getting adequate sleep are important. Individuals with a family history should remain attentive to persistent symptoms and seek timely medical evaluation for early diagnosis and management.

NOT CONFORMING TO PROCESSES OF AN ORGANISATION IS A SHIFT AMONG EMPLOYEES THAT AI HAS ONLY ACCELERATED

When employees get a mind of their own

SRINATH SRIDHARAN

A SENIOR EXECUTIVE once described a curious productivity problem. His team had spent months redesigning a process, standardising approvals and creating a digital workflow. The system worked as intended. Yet employees had quietly developed their own ways of getting the same work done faster. Some were using AI tools, some were relying on informal networks, while others had simply found ways around steps they considered unnecessary. The formal process remained intact. The way work was actually getting done had begun to move elsewhere.

This is becoming an important question for corporate India. Organisations have traditionally been built around processes. People are hired into roles, trained on systems, given authority within defined boundaries and expected to operate through established workflows. That architecture brought scale, control and predictability. Technology is now giving individuals capabilities that were once concentrated within departments. An employee can analyse data, create a presentation, write code, automate a repetitive task or conduct research with tools that may be available on a laptop. The institution still provides capital, reputation, customers, intellectual property, infrastructure and governance. But it no longer has exclusive control over how work gets done.

The change is particularly visible among younger employees. They have entered professional life in an environment where consumers routinely switch platforms when something is inconvenient and where technology rapidly removes friction from everyday tasks. They are often less patient with internal processes that require several layers to accomplish something that can be completed in minutes elsewhere. Artificial intelligence has accelerated this instinct. A young professional may experiment with a new tool before the organisation has finished discussing whether such a tool should be used at all.

This does not mean every workaround is desirable. Some create genuine risks around confidentiality, accuracy, cybersecurity, compliance and accountability. But a workaround can also be useful intelligence. When capable employees repeatedly find ways around a process, management should ask what the behaviour reveals about the process itself. A system can be perfectly compliant on paper while employees have quietly stopped believing it is the best way to work.

This matters because the informal organisation has always existed alongside the formal one. People have always found shortcuts, built relationships across departments and created ways of solving problems that were never captured in the process manual. Technology has simply made the informal organisation more capable. An individual can now create capabilities that once required a team, a specialist function or several layers of approval. The question for leadership is whether these capabilities are being recognised, governed and incorporated, or merely suppressed.

This is where the issue enters the boardroom. A board may approve an AI strategy after several presentations on technology, risk and investment, while employees across the organisation are already using AI every day. Management may believe a particular workflow is essential because its dashboards show that the process is being followed. A conversation with employees can reveal that people are complying with the formal system while doing the real work through another route. The gap between those two realities can contain both a risk and an opportunity.

A board should, therefore, be curious about where employees are working around the organisation. Which processes are people avoiding even when they remain technically compliant? Where has technology allowed an individual to do something that previously required an entire function? What are employees building for themselves because the organisation has been too slow to provide it? Which workarounds improve productivity, and which quietly weaken controls? These are questions about organisational design as much as employee behaviour. The answer will also require a more mature approach to younger employees. Gen Z should not be romanticised as a generation that automatically understands the future, any more than seniority should be confused with foresight. A 25-year-old may have a better instinct for how a younger customer uses technology but little understanding of the commercial history behind a strategic decision. A seasoned executive may understand that history intimately while being less exposed to the tools and behaviours reshaping the workplace. Each sees a different part of the picture.

This is where 'reverse apprenticeship' becomes more useful than the familiar idea of reverse mentoring. Younger employees can bring proximity to emerging technology, changing consumer behaviour and new workplace habits. Senior leaders bring context, judgment and an understanding of consequences. The exchange is valuable when both sides are willing to learn. The younger employee may discover why a seemingly inefficient control exists. The senior leader may discover that a process once considered essential has become an obstacle to good work.

There is a deeper leadership challenge beneath all this. People inside organisations learn what happens when they question established ways of working. They notice which executives welcome uncomfortable information and which prefer conformity. They understand which experiments receive encouragement and which are treated as deviations. Over time, employees can become very good at following the official process while finding unofficial ways to make it work. That can leave management believing that the organisation is operating as designed when much of its adaptability is actually happening beneath the surface.

For boards, this makes employee behaviour an increasingly useful source of strategic information. The question is not whether everyone is following the rules. It is whether the rules, processes and structures still make sense in the environment in which the company now operates.

Corporate India has spent decades building institutions capable of scale. The next challenge is making those institutions capable of adaptation without losing the controls that make them trustworthy. That requires management to understand where work is moving, why it is moving there and what that movement says about the organisation.

The most useful question for a board may, therefore, no longer be simply whether employees are following the process. It may be more uncomfortable: What have our employees stopped needing us for?

The art of slow play

FAIRWAY FILES

Rahil Gangjee

THERE ARE FEW things in golf more predictable than an unpredictable bounce, a three-putt from six feet and a playing partner who insists that his ball was definitely in play when it has disappeared into the thickest patch of rough on the golf course. But perhaps the most predictable feature of the modern game is that a round advertised as a four-hour affair will somehow stretch into five, five-and-a-half or, on particularly memorable occasions, six hours.

I have often wondered what happens to time on a golf course. Does it move differently? Is there some mysterious gravitational force around the 14th tee that slows everything down? Or have golfers collectively decided that the clock is merely a suggestion?

Slow play is one of the great irritants of the game. It tests patience, concentration and, occasionally, the strength of friendships. Yet, strangely enough, almost every golfer complains about it while remaining blissfully unaware that he or she may be contributing to the problem.

There is a particular breed of golfer who arrives at the tee box, takes a practice swing, steps away, takes another practice swing, checks the alignment, steps away again, looks at the target, consults the wind, perhaps says a small prayer and then finally addresses the ball. By this time, the group behind has had enough time to finish a cup of coffee.

And then comes the actual shot. A magnificent swing, a beautiful follow-through and a ball that travels approximately 40 yards into the trees. The entire exercise must now be repeated. I have always believed that golf is a game of rhythm. You need time to think, prepare and execute a shot. Nobody is suggesting that players should run around the course swinging at anything that moves. But there is a difference between taking your time and taking everybody else's time as well.

One of the biggest contributors to slow play is the search for lost balls. Now, I understand the emotional attachment. Some golfers seem to believe that the ball they have just hit into the jungle is an extension of their personality. They will search behind trees, under bushes and occasionally in places where even the grounds staff would hesitate to venture.

The rules allow a maximum of three minutes to search for a lost ball. Yet, some players appear to interpret this as three minutes per bush, three minutes per tree and an additional three minutes for emotional closure. I have seen golfers spend more time looking for a ball worth a few hundred rupees than they would spend looking for their car keys. At some point, you have to accept that the ball has decided to retire.

Then there is the ritual of marking, lifting, cleaning, replacing and remarking the ball on the green. Putting is an art, and nobody should be rushed into making a decision. But there are players who study a putt from every conceivable angle. They crouch behind the ball, walk around the hole, inspect the slope from the other side and sometimes look at it from a position that suggests they are trying to understand the curvature of the Earth.

By the time they finally putt, the grass has probably grown a little.

The irony is that many of these players are not necessarily better putters. In fact, some of the most elaborate pre-shot routines I have witnessed have produced some of the most spectacular three-putts. Golf has a wonderful way of reminding us that spending more time thinking about a shot does not necessarily make the shot better.

Of course, professionals are not entirely innocent when it comes to slow play. We have all watched tournaments where a player takes what seems like an eternity over a crucial shot. There are reasons for this at the highest level. The stakes are enormous, every shot matters, and the consequences of a mistake can be career-changing. But even at the professional level, there is a growing recognition that the game needs to move at a more reasonable pace.

For the amateur golfer, however, the stakes are rather different. Most of us are not playing for a cheque that could change our lives. We are playing for a trophy, a little pride, perhaps a few side bets and, most importantly, the right to remind our friends about that one birdie for the next six months. Which brings me to another interesting phenomenon: the golfer who cannot decide whose turn it is to play.

Everyone stands around looking at each other. Someone asks, "Are you ready?" The other person replies, "You go ahead." The first person insists, "No, no, you are away." And so begins a diplomatic negotiation that would put international peace talks to shame.

There are simple ways to make a round move faster. Be ready when it is your turn. Start thinking about your next shot while others are playing, provided it is safe to do so. Walk briskly between shots. Keep an extra ball handy. Mark your scorecard when you are not holding up the group. And if you are searching for a ball, let the group behind play through rather than turning the entire golf course into a crime-scene investigation.

Slow play is one of the great irritants of the game. It tests patience, and, occasionally, the strength of friendships. Yet, strangely enough, almost every golfer complains about it

The Ready Golf concept is particularly useful for amateur players. It encourages golfers to play when they are ready, rather than rigidly waiting for the player furthest from the hole, provided it is safe and does not interfere with another player's shot. It is a simple idea, but one that could save an astonishing amount of time.

There is also the question of etiquette. Golf is built on respect, not just for the rules but for fellow competitors and the course itself. Holding up an entire field because you want to spend another five minutes calculating the perfect angle for a 90-yard wedge is hardly sporting.

And if you are playing in a group that is consistently falling behind, perhaps it is worth accepting that the problem may not be the group ahead. It could be you. I have played enough golf to know that the game is already difficult enough without adding unnecessary complications. You can hit a terrible shot in five seconds or a terrible shot after five minutes of preparation. The result is usually the same, except that in the latter case you have also irritated three other people.

My advice is simple: enjoy the walk, enjoy the company, take your time when it matters, but don't confuse a leisurely game with an endurance event.

After all, golf is supposed to be a four-hour escape from the pressures of everyday life. It is not meant to become a six-hour reminder of them. And if you happen to find yourself on the 18th tee after six hours, with the sun disappearing and your playing partners looking ready to file a missing-person complaint, remember one thing. The only thing worse than a six-hour round is realising that you still have to add up the scores, settle the bets and listen to the fellow who has been telling everyone since the 10th hole that he is having the round of his life. That, unfortunately, is a punishment no handicap system has yet managed to address.

LOOKING BACK AT THE INSPIRING LIFE OF ADVANI AS HE TURNS 99

Bharat Ratna LK Advani*ji* at 100!

NARENDRA MODI

Prime Minister Narendra Modi and veteran BJP leader LK Advani

SHRI LAL KRISHNA Advani*ji* enters the hundredth year of his life today, November 8. This year, his birthday fittingly coincides with Diwali, a festival associated with Prabhu Shri Ram and the diya at a time when we are marking 75 years since the inception of the Jana Sangh, 125th Jayanti of Dr Syama Prasad Mookerjee and recently celebrated a hundred years of the RSS.

There are very few people whose lives have touched so many different chapters of modern India. Advani*ji* was born on November 8, 1927, on Dev Deepawali. As a youngster in 1947, he experienced the pain of leaving behind his familiar world in Sindh. He rebuilt his life from scratch without bitterness. This trait of being able to build from scratch, against all odds, has stayed with him throughout. It was seen while he was strengthening the Jana Sangh and later building the BJP. His tenures as BJP President saw the Congress falling sharply from 400 seats to below 200 in 1989 and the BJP becoming the single-largest party for the first time in 1996. Advani*ji* nurtured generations of karyakartas and gave the party a clear foundation rooted in the principle of 'Nation First'.

Two qualities always set Advani*ji* apart as a leader. First, his ideological clarity and intellectual sharpness. This was reflected in his speeches and writings. The Jana Sangh and BJP resolutions he authored remain worth reading even today, while his interviews were consistently incisive and precise. Second is the manner in which he exposed the pseudo-secularism propounded by a large section of the Indian polity for many years.

Advani*ji* took up every responsibility with immense diligence. As an RSS pracharak, Advani*ji* first worked in different parts of Rajasthan. From there, he went to the national capital, where he started working closely with Atal*ji*. History shows that it is rare for two towering political leaders to work together for several decades, cooperating with each other without becoming competitors. Advani*ji* and Atal*ji* set a remarkable example. Together, they changed the course of Indian politics.

The Delhi that Advani*ji* came to was coming to terms with the horrors of Partition. He immersed himself in making the Jana Sangh stronger. In 1967, Advani*ji* became the chairman of the Delhi Metropolitan Council, where he worked alongside the late Vijay Kumar Malhotra*ji* (who became chief executive councillor).

In 1970, Advani*ji*'s parliamentary innings began. His interventions have won appreciation across the political spectrum. He made a mark as an MP, and later, as leader of opposition in both houses and from the treasury benches as well. Despite parliamentary commitments, he frequently travelled across India to meet people.

I vividly recall the 1991 Lok Sabha elections. It was decided that Advani*ji* would contest the Lok Sabha elections from two seats, one of which was Gandhinagar. He had an old link with Gujarat. His father had settled in Kutch after Partition. Advani*ji* had also served as a Rajya Sabha MP from Gujarat. So, it was a homecoming of sorts. Being involved in the BJP organisation, I had the honour of helping prepare his papers and assisting him throughout the campaign. The people of Gandhinagar sent him to Parliament time and again. As a voter of Gandhinagar, I also had the honour of voting for Advani*ji* on numerous occasions. The care and attention he devoted to his constituency is something to learn from.

The Emergency was a watershed moment in Advani*ji*'s life. He was at the forefront of saving democracy and protecting the Constitution. His experiences found their way into his book, A Prisoner's Scrap-Book. One part of that book, titled A Tale of Two Emergencies, beautifully explained the striking similarities between the events in India starting June 1975 and those in Nazi Germany in 1933.

Advani*ji* was a fiery opposition leader but an equally excellent administrator. When the Janata government came to office in 1977, Advani*ji* became minister for information and broadcasting. It is widely accepted that his work in this department was extremely impactful. As deputy prime minister and one of India's longest-serving home ministers, he was instrumental in strengthening India's security apparatus. His work in improving the lives of our security forces is remembered with great fondness. His unequivocal stand against terrorism ensured India got a tough anti-terror law.

Of course, an iconic moment in Advani*ji*'s life was the Somnath to Ayodhya Rath Yatra. It changed the course of Indian society for the better. I consider it a privilege that I got the opportunity to be involved in this Yatra from the ideation stage to execution. Being present at Somnath when the Yatra began was particularly special. A Yatra can be very demanding, requiring long hours, constant travel, physical endurance and an ability to remain focused despite fatigue. Advani*ji* embodied this endurance.

I also have memories of the saddening moments of Advani*ji*'s arrest in Bihar. Then, in Gujarat, the BJP withdrew support from the Chimanbhai Patel government. With this, a simple message was given — that when it comes to our ideology and the Ram Temple, there will never be any compromise. Many of our senior leaders and karyakartas took an oath that come what may, a Ram Temple will be built. And, years later, with the blessings of the people of India, a grand mandir for Prabhu Shri Ram became a reality in Ayodhya.

There is so much more of Advani*ji* that is outstanding. His simplicity, for example. After the Navnirman Movement, Advani*ji* had come to Junagadh and stayed for a month as an ordinary karyakarta, preparing the party for the assembly elections in which Congress was rejected. He has always shown what probity in public life is about. He is a voracious reader. Those who have spent time with him know how carefully he goes through newspapers. He is a big fan of cinema and theatre, and has been an enthusiastic film critic. His sense of history and the need to preserve it is visible in his book, My Country My Life.

Advani*ji* always remained in touch with Sindhi culture. Another effort he undertook was the popularisation of Sindhu Darshan Puja near Leh. I myself had been to one Puja with Advani*ji* and George Fernandes*ji*.

Any account of Advani*ji*'s remarkable journey would be incomplete without mentioning Kamla Advani*ji*. She was a constant source of strength and support throughout his public life.

Growing up in Karachi, Advani*ji* could hardly have imagined the path his life would take. In an expression of gratitude, the people of India conferred upon him the Bharat Ratna in 2024. As Advani*ji* enters the hundredth year of his life, I pray that he be blessed with good health and that he continues to inspire us all as he has always done.

Bengaluru's climactic shift from temperate to heat-affected highlights the need for ecological conservation. Efforts include rejuvenating lakes, expanding green spaces, and sustainable urban planning to combat rising temperatures

Bengaluru had a sweater problem

NOW IT'S A HEAT CRISIS

THE SUSTAINABILITY MAFIA

I ASK ANYONE WHO lived in Bengaluru in the 1980s or 1990s and they will tell you the same thing: You needed a sweater in April. The city sits nearly a kilometre above sea level. Back then, with roads shaded by enormous rain trees and neighbourhoods cooled by a network of lakes built and maintained over centuries, Bengaluru attracted visitors and migrants from sweltering Chennai and dust-choked Delhi. That erstwhile reputation is now a source of bitter irony. In April 2024, Bengaluru recorded 37.6°C, the third-highest April temperature the city had seen in 15 years and the highest in eight. In March that year, temperatures had touched 37°C, among the warmest March readings in the city's modern history. For long-time residents, the city no longer felt like itself. Behind Bengaluru's rising temperatures is a story of piece-by-piece dismantling of the natural systems that made it liveable. But its experience also points to a way forward.

What Bengaluru had

Bengaluru is home to more than 14 million people and India's technology hub, where Infosys, Wipro and hundreds of global technology firms have established major operations. It sits on the Deccan Plateau at an elevation of approximately 920 metres. That elevation has historically helped keep Bengaluru cooler than many other large Indian cities.

But for the average temperature, the city's ecological infrastructure mattered as much as its geography. The lake network, known locally as kere, stored water, supported irrigation and helped regulate local temperatures. These lakes, together with extensive tree cover that once occupied 68% of the city's land area, created a microclimate that was significantly cooler than the surrounding plateau. Research suggests that a healthy lake can reduce temperatures in its surrounding area by up to 3°C, with cooling effects measurable as far as 800 metres from the water's edge.

India's economic liberalisation brought investment and migration to Bengaluru at a pace its planning infrastructure struggled to accommodate. Between 1973 and 2023, the built-up area of Greater Bengaluru grew by more than 1,000%. Between 1991 and 2019, the built-up footprint increased by 170%, while the population within the city's municipal limits grew by 25%. As fields, lakes and tree cover gave way to concrete, the city lost natural cooling systems. Its mean air temperature has risen by 0.23°C per decade since 1975, accelerating to approximately 0.5°C per decade in the most recent decade.

Why cities heat up

To understand Bengaluru's heat crisis, it helps to start with the urban heat island effect. Cities tend to be warmer than the rural areas around them because of the materials they are built from and the way they use energy. Concrete and asphalt absorb solar radiation during the day and release it slowly at night. Soil and vegetation generally cool down more quickly.

Glass-facade buildings can reflect solar radiation onto neighbouring streets. Dense high-rises can also block natural wind circulation, trapping heat between buildings in what researchers call urban canyons. Vehicles, generators and air conditioners add waste heat. Air conditioners cool indoor spaces by transferring heat outdoors, contributing to the heat experienced by people on the street. Research synthesising more than 400 peer-reviewed studies finds that urban areas in developing countries can be 1°C to 5°C warmer than their surroundings, with the difference often greatest at night.

Bengaluru's tree cover fell from 68.27% of its land area in 1973 to just 6% by 2023, an 88% decline over 50 years. Rain trees, gulmohar and tamarind that once lined the city's roads have disappeared from many areas, making way for road widening, metro construction and real estate. This 2017 study found that Bengaluru had approximately one tree for every seven residents, while optimal human well-being in urban areas necessitates at least 1.15 trees per person.

Once known as the City of a Thousand Lakes, Bengaluru has lost much of its water infrastructure to encroachment, construction and pollution. Of the 837 lakes documented in Bengaluru Urban district, 730 have been encroached upon. By 2023, water bodies covered less than 1% of the city's land area, down from 3.40% in 1973. The same research reports extensive encroachment and pollution across the remaining lakes. Bengaluru's first bus stand was originally a lake bed. An IISc study of 2010 reported a dramatic decline in Bengaluru's groundwater levels, from around 28 metres below the surface to depths of approximately 300 metres in some areas. The result can be a reinforcing cycle: higher temperatures increase demand for cooling, which adds waste heat and electricity demand, potentially increasing emissions and worsening the conditions driving long-term warming. Research suggests that electricity consumption can rise by between 0.45% and 4.6% for every 1°C increase in urban temperatures, though the effect varies by location and conditions.

The innovative solutions

Bengaluru's heat crisis is a system problem, and addressing it requires solutions that work at the level of the city, its infrastructure and its individual buildings. Across India's climate-tech and policy ecosystem, researchers and entrepreneurs are developing tools to help cities make better decisions, reuse scarce resources and reduce the environmental costs of urban growth. Three examples illustrate different parts of this response:

1) CSTEP's work on evidence-based climate planning, Openwater's approach to decentralised wastewater treatment and reuse, and SmarterDharma's efforts to embed sustainability into building design. The Centre for Study of Science, Technology and Policy is a Bengaluru-based independent think tank founded in 2005. Led by Executive Director Jai Asundi, the organisation works across energy, climate, urban development and air quality, combining scientific analysis with engagement with state and national governments.

CSTEP's work on Bengaluru focuses on turning evidence into practical policy. In 2021, it signed an agreement with the Karnataka State Pollution Control Board and Bruhat Bengaluru Mahanagara Palike (BBMP, the municipal corporation) to support a source-apportionment study, which identifies the sources of Air pollution across the city. Such analysis helps policymakers target interventions where they can have the greatest effect. CSTEP is also developing an Ecosystem-Based Adaptation Feasibility Tool for Bengaluru. Designed for city planners, policymakers and grassroots organisations, the tool aims to identify climate-vulnerable areas and help prioritise nature-based responses.

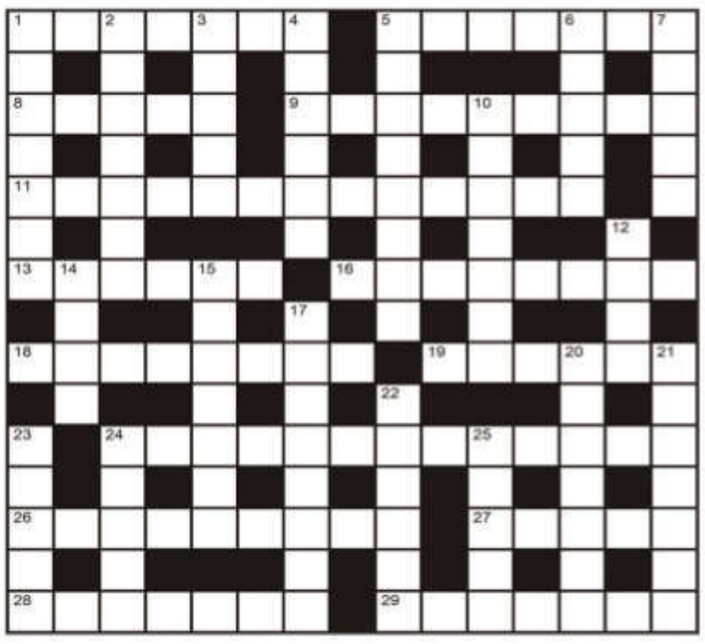

2) Bengaluru faces a paradox: it imports water from the Kaveri River while struggling to reuse much of the wastewater generated within the city. Wastewater treatment and reuse offer a way to reduce pressure on freshwater sources, including groundwater. Openwater is a spinoff from the Flexible Electronics Lab at the Indian Institute of Science, Bengaluru. Founded in 2016 by Sanjiv Sambandan and Prabha Nagarajan, with Nitin Parekh as co-founder, the company develops decentralised water-treatment systems. Openwater's systems are designed to treat greywater, groundwater, sewage and certain industrial effluents to a quality suitable for reuse. They are modular, remotely monitorable and designed to be installed without extensive civil construction. According to the company, the systems can be operational within a day and use no synthesised chemicals while producing minimal sludge. Openwater's approach is to make decentralised treatment more practical at the level of individual buildings and communities. The company has been recognised by the Solar Impulse World Alliance and has received the BIRAC Innovator Award twice.

3) SmarterDharma: Sriram Kuchimanchi is the founder and CEO of SmarterDharma, a Bengaluru-based social enterprise founded in 2012 that works at the intersection of construction, urban sustainability and technology. SmarterDharma's SD+ platform is designed to help developers, architects and green consultants incorporate sustainability at the conceptualisation and design stages rather than treating it as a retrofit. It uses an algorithm and machine learning to support decisions about energy use, water management and material selection. The platform also provides financial modelling that compares capital expenditure with potential operational savings, helping developers evaluate the commercial case for more sustainable design. The company has also been developing MGEM, a green building materials marketplace that operates across 10 states and is available in eight languages. It is working with home finance corporations to create green-financing incentives for homebuyers, with a target of reaching 25,000 homes over the next 24 months.

Bengaluru cannot recover its old climate simply by planting trees or installing new technologies. But it can make choices that reduce future heat exposure and help its residents adapt. The task is to make those choices part of how the city plans, builds and grows.

KAKURO

In Kakuro sum puzzles, the numbers in the black squares refer to the SUMS of the digits, which you are to fill into the empty spaces directly below or to the right of the black square containing the number.
No zeroes are used here, only the digits one through nine. An important point: A digit cannot appear more than once in any particular digit combination.

SOLUTIONS

BRIDGE BOUTS — L SUBRAMANIAN

DON'T BE TOO GREEDY

Take the west seat in today's deal from a match-point event. Partner, sitting east, opens 2H on first seat. South makes a take-out double and you have S x-x-x H A-x-x-x D A-T-x-x C x-x. You make a preemptive jump to 4H and north bids 5D and bidding reverts to you. What do you do?

You should pass!

After achieving your objective of pushing the opponents to a wrong contract, you should be happy and not do anything silly like doubling them for penalty.
Why? It may reveal about the diamond position; also, they may have a spade contract, which they can run to. The complete hands are:

Dlr: East
Vul: NS

S x x x
H Q
D K Q 9 x x x
C K x x x

S x x x
H A x x x
D A T x x
C x x

N

S Q J x
H K J T x x x
D x x
C x x x

S A K T x
H x x
D J
C A Q J x x x

W	N	E	S
-	-	1C	1D
1H	2D??	2H	Pass
4H	5D???	dbl	All Pass

Contract: 5D by north. Partner leads the HJ. You win with the ace and subsequently two diamond tricks, to put the contract down.

Discussion: Let us say you double for penalty instead of passing, south may run to 5S, which partner is likely to double. Suppose you lead the HA and play a second heart. Declarer ruffs in dummy and calls for a spade. Your partner is forced to split his honours. Declarer wins, enters dummy by CK and plays another trump; and inserts the ten, and breaks the spades 3-3 to claim the contract.

Instead of passing 5D quietly and defeating it, to earn a top, you pushed the opponents to a makeable contract, to score a bottom.

South should have overcalled 3C to show a good suit and a good hand. Off-shape doubles should be avoided as far as possible. You cannot fault north for bidding 5D. He has a good six-card suit and a high-card in clubs.

TMB Foundation Donates 42-Seater School Bus to Ramakrishna Mission Vidyalaya, Coimbatore

Access to quality education continues to be a significant challenge for families residing in Bharathi Nagar, where communities were resettled from the city outskirts. Long travel distances and the financial burden of transportation often hinder regular school attendance, particularly among students from economically weaker backgrounds. To address this challenge and promote uninterrupted access to education, TMB Foundation has donated a 42-seater school bus to Ramakrishna Mission Vidyalaya, Coimbatore. The dedicated transportation facility will help ease travel difficulties faced by students, improve attendance, reduce dropouts, and enable children to pursue their education in a safe and reliable manner. The sponsorship demand draft for the school bus was formally handed over by Vincent Menachery Devassy, Executive Director, Tamilnad Mercantile Bank Ltd., to Swami Garishthananda, Secretary, Ramakrishna Mission Vidyalaya, Coimbatore.

The event was attended by Mr. P.R. Ashok Kumar, Executive Vice President, Tamilnad Mercantile Bank Ltd.; Mr. Anantha Subramanian, Head of Operations, TMB Foundation; Mr. D. Inbamani, Vice President, TMB Foundation; Mr. Vaseekaran, Regional Manager, Coimbatore, Tamilnad Mercantile Bank Ltd.; Swami Trilokatmananda, Treasurer, Ramakrishna Mission Vidyalaya; and Dr. G. Murali, Principal, Ramakrishna Mission Vidyalaya Industrial Training Institute.

ATTEMPT TO CENSOR

Sonia Gandhi: Penguin was 'uneasy' with criticism of govt

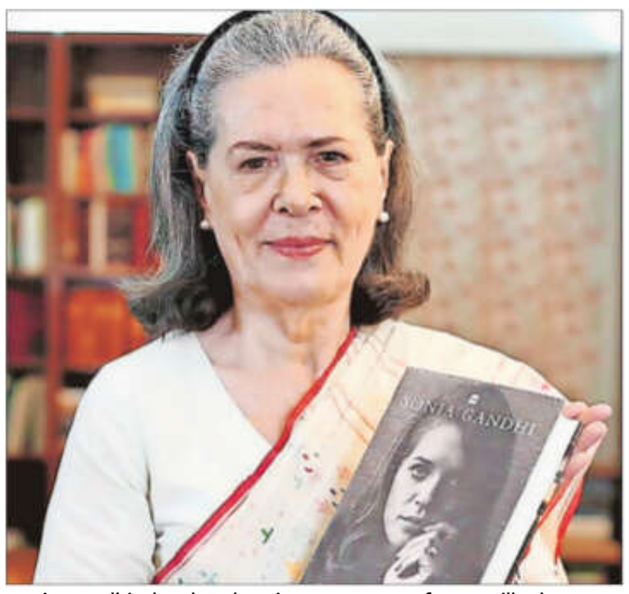

- Says imposing the Emergency was a mistake

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, November 7

BREAKING HER SILENCE on the censorship row involving her upcoming memoir, Congress Parliamentary Party chairperson Sonia Gandhi has said that publisher Penguin Random House India was "uneasy" with criticism of the government. While she was disappointed that the publisher did not go ahead with the book, she was not surprised.

She saw it as an attempt to censor her book, The Guardian reported. The controversy began amid reports of differences between the publisher and the author's representatives over editorial changes to the manuscript.

Several Congress leaders raised concerns over possible governmental pressure and freedom of expression, with some alleging that Penguin India was under pressure to remove sections relating to PM Modi, the RSS and China's occupation of Indian territory during the Modi regime.

Sonia Gandhi's book Belonging: A Journey of Love will release on November 10

Maintaining that there was no external pressure behind its decision not to publish Gandhi's memoir, Penguin India had said there was an impasse over a particular issue during discussions on the book. HarperCollins India then announced that it will publish the Congress leader's memoir in India on November 10, ending the uncertainty over the book's domestic publication. In her interview with The Guardian, Gandhi also weighed in on the last 12 years of the Modi government's rule and its impact on India's secular and pluralistic character.

She said the situation was more than disappointing and very painful, "having known a different India". "In parliament, we are not allowed to debate. In the past, there were discussions, there were meetings between the opposition and the government, there was consultation. Now the opposition counts for nothing," she said.

Weighing in on the Emergency, Congress leader has called the decision to impose it a mistake and said that she believes that her mother-in-law and then prime minister Indira Gandhi also came to feel the same. The Congress Parliamentary Party chairperson in her upcoming book writes that keeping Sanjay Gandhi "in check" could have prevented much of the damage that followed the imposition of the Emergency, according to The Guardian.

In another interview published in The Hindu on Saturday, Gandhi when asked about Sanjay Gandhi's name becoming synonymous with the Emergency, and whether the excesses of that time could have been avoided had Indira Gandhi listened to her elder son Rajiv and to others, Sonia Gandhi said, "It was not only Sanjay, though in the public mind he is often seen as synonymous with the Emergency. There was a lot of pressure from some of her senior colleagues... there were very few people around her like Rajiv who had a different point of view."

US carries out fresh strikes on Iran, targets air defence system

ASSOCIATED PRESS
Washington, November 7

PRESIDENT DONALD TRUMP said the US military carried out new limited strikes on Iran, targeting an Iranian air defense system. Iran state media reported the sound of two explosions in the Suza area of Qeshm Island, which is in the crucial waterway for oil shipments. Trump in an exchange with reporters described the military action as "minor".

"They knocked out — they built a little bit of an anti-aircraft device and we knocked it out in about 15 minutes, maybe five," Trump told reporters shortly after arriving in West Palm Beach, Florida. Trump did not offer further details about the target. US officials have reported that most of Iran's air defence systems were destroyed or severely degraded during a June 2025 bombardment by Israel and in the early stages of the current conflict. US officials have assessed that Iran would try to rebuild them and other military infrastructure over time.

The US military also reported carrying out what it described as defensive strikes on Monday. Explosions were heard on the islands of Qeshm and Hengam in the strategic Strait of Hormuz, and in the nearby mainland area of Bandar Abbas. Friday's strikes are the first since Trump's Republican Party was dealt a stunning repudiation in Tuesday's midterm elections in the US. The electoral setback was stoked in part by voter dissatisfaction with Trump's execution of the conflict and elevated fuel prices, a byproduct of the war that's affected nearly every sector of the global economy.

In the days since Republicans' shellacking at the polls, Trump has vacillated between threatening to "destroy" Iran and suggesting a resolution to the war is near.

Earlier Friday, officials from the two West Asian governments said Iran is reviewing proposals presented by chief mediator Qatar aimed at addressing differences with the US about Tehran's nuclear programme. But one of the officials stressed that Iran remains unwilling to engage in negotiations with the Trump administration over its atomic activities.

Difference over Iran's nuclear programme is the thorniest issue and one that Trump insists must be resolved as part of any deal meant to end the more than eight-month-old war. Both officials were not authorised to comment publicly on the delicate negotiations and spoke on the condition of anonymity.

The US Central Command, which oversees US military operations in West Asia, announced in a post on X late Friday that the United States was offering "a reward of up to $20 million and possible relocation for information about Iran's nuclear programme, including its facilities, equipment, and associated personnel, such as those in the scientific community, or the movement of any of the above." The post included a link to the State Department's Rewards for Justice programme. The White House declined to comment about the Qatar-presented proposals on Iran's nuclear programme, but Trump noted earlier Friday in an exchange with reporters that mediators' discussions with Iran continue.

STEPHEN MILLER NEW US CHIEF OF STAFF

US PRESIDENT DONALD Trump named longtime aide Stephen Miller as his chief of staff, giving the architect of some of his toughest domestic policies one of the most powerful jobs in Washington after Republicans lost control of Congress.

Miller, who will replace Susie Wiles, assumes the role as the president prepares to confront a Democratic-led House of Representatives and Senate and a wave of congressional investigations into his administration.

A longtime proponent of expansive presidential authority, Miller's appointment signals that Trump has no intention of rethinking his policies and rewarding his most loyal aides. REUTERS

Newsrooms, journalists not covered under DPDP Act

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, November 7

JOURNALISTS AND NEWS organisations do not fall under the definition of 'data fiduciaries' under the Digital Personal Data Protection (DPDP) Act and are not covered by its provisions, government sources said, seeking to allay concerns that the legislation could restrict press freedom and investigative journalism.

The definition of a data fiduciary is "clear" and "proper" and covers entities such as banks, insurance companies, telecom operators and e-commerce platforms that collect and process personal data, sources said.

Journalists and newsrooms do not come under the definition of data fiduciary, so the rules do not apply to them, they added. But a source said: "We have always said we are very open-minded on this. Whatever action is needed, we will take it". The Act places obligations on data fiduciaries, defined as persons or entities that determine, alone or jointly with others, the purpose and means of processing personal data.

These include obtaining consent, providing notice to individuals, ensuring data security, reporting personal data breaches and erasing information once the purpose for which it was collected has been fulfilled. The government's clarification comes amid concerns among news publishers that the absence of an explicit exemption for journalistic activities could complicate reporting on matters of public interest, investigations involving personal information obtained without the consent of the individuals concerned.

TN villages mark 20th cracker-free Diwali to protect birds

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
Erode (Tamil Nadu), November 7

IN A REMARKABLE display of ecological harmony, residents of over a dozen villages surrounding the Vellode Bird Sanctuary in Erode district are celebrating a cracker-less Deepavali for the 20th consecutive year to ensure a peaceful breeding season for thousands of winged visitors.

Spread across 240 acres, the sanctuary features a 50-acre pond capable of holding water up to a depth of 30 feet. The waterbody is primarily sustained by seepage from the Lower Bhavani project canal and monsoon run-offs. Following a severe dry spell a few years ago that left the area parched, the sanctuary was rejuvenated at ₹2.35 crore. The upgraded facility now boasts strengthened bunds, miniature bridges, walkways, a butterfly park, and designated selfie points, making it a major eco-tourism draw in the region. The annual bird season, which spans from October to March, transforms the sanctuary into a bustling nursery. Domestic species such as the Painted Stork, Asian Openbill, Black-Headed Ibis, Little Cormorant, and Grey Heron arrive in large numbers. They are joined by migratory flocks travelling from as far as Siberia, Russia, Australia, and New Zealand, including Pelicans, Sandpipers, Caspian Terns, and Black-Necked Storks. The birds feed on the pond's abundant fish, build nests, and rear their chicks before migrating back. To prevent the noise and smoke from frightening the birds or disrupting their breeding, residents of more than 10 neighbouring hamlets, including Mettupalayam, Pungambadi and Ellapalayam, instituted a voluntary ban on firecrackers two decades ago.

HC lifts blanket ban on sale of book about Rana Kapoor

THE DELHI HIGH Court lifted the blanket ban on the sale and circulation of a book titled Yes Man: The Untold Story of Rana Kapoor, after deletion of four "offending passages".

The book was authored by Pavan Lall and published by Harper Collins. The court recognised the disproportionate consequences of stopping a book that already circulated for years. The book was published on December 22, 2020 and remained in circulation for a considerable period before the injunction was granted in July 2024.

The judgment acknowledged injunctions imposed before a full trial can restrict freedom of speech and expression. FE BUREAU
