AI can never replace judges: CJI

New Delhi: AI may supplement research and support the judicial processes, but can never replace the legal acumen or decision-making which must always remain with judges, CJI Surya Kant said on Thursday. Addressing an event in Samarkand, Uzbekistan, the CJI said that technology must be harnessed to expand access to justice while ensuring it does not exclude vulnerable citizens or undermine public trust in the judicial system. “Yet, as our reliance on data and AI grows, so too must the safeguards governing their use...” PTI

that the question of who makes it onto the voters’ list and who is left out was being raised inside the Commission itself. The investigation revealed that Election Commissioners Sukhbir Singh Sandhu and Vivek Joshi had objected on record 14 times in 10 months to decisions taken in the Commission’s name without their knowledge, including the change to Form 6 (the form new voters fill) and the centralised control of ECINet, the software on which the electoral rolls were prepared during the SIR and on which every electoral roll now sits. The September 29 letter from the Election Commission’s Secretary to all CEOs states: “In State/UTs where SIR has already been completed, a special drive shall be undertaken by the Chief Electoral Officer, District Election Officers and EROs for the enrolment of left out and young/first time eligible electors under the process of continuous updation.” That drive will run on a Form 6 without the question added to it in July. The online form had begun asking applicants whether they, or their parents, were on the voters’ list after the last SIR, and would not let them submit without an answer, which left an 18-year-old whose parents had been deleted with no truthful way through. Only the government can change the form, by amending the rules; it hadn’t. Both Commissioners had said so in May, and Sandhu in August called the change “unauthorised/illegal”. The September 29 letter now confines the declaration to “SIR phase only”. In the 20 states where the SIR is over, first-time voters and the “left out” will fill the plain statutory form. At the Commission’s video conference with all state CEOs Thursday, the instruction went further, according to officers who attended. The Deputy Election Commissioner presented told CEOs to compare the pre-SIR roll with the post-SIR roll, draw up the list of those deleted, and identify any who may have been left out. “It has been told to visit the houses, in cases especially if the voters are not mapped elsewhere or were not duplicate or not deceased and get their Form 6 filled up,” one of the officers said. The CEOs have been asked to seek assistance of political parties (or booth-level agents of political parties) for this exercise. All CEOs have been asked to bring people back, if left out unjustly, via Form 6, the form for new voters. It is the same route Goa’s Chief Electoral Officer has to use to re-enrol the 97 voters left out of the state’s final roll on February 21 despite being found eligible by its own EROs. As The Indian Express reported on September 24, the 97 had been deleted at the draft stage, produced documents, and were cleared by the EROs, who then found that ECINet had no option to reverse the deletion. The CEO’s eight communications to the Commission over seven days, each copied to DG (IT) Seema Khanna, went unanswered, and the final roll was published without them. That was the concern Sandhu had put on record on August 14. By law, he wrote, “all the responsibilities regarding Electoral Roll lie on EROs, DEOs and CEOs,” yet “the access control has been centralised by DG (IT),” and the DG (IT)

“doesn’t have any legal authority to restrict proper and complete access and freedom to operate, as given by law, to the statutory authorities”. In May, Joshi had called it “the gradual centralisation of the electoral roll database” and asked for an audit. Neither note was answered until the Commission’s meeting of September 26. The September 29 letter came three days after that meeting, the Commission’s second full sitting since April, which announced that voters served notices for being “unmapped” or for “logical discrepancies” need not appear for hearings, that a committee with an independent IIT/IIT expert would review ECINet, and that “any further flexibility” field officers needed “will be made operational” in the software. The letter conveys the hearing change to the states, and is copied to the DG (IT) “for making necessary changes in ECINet”. It also settles a matter the two Commissioners had raised: the declaration attached to Form 6 “will be used during SIR phase only,” and outside the

SIR, “the Forms applicable as per the Registration of Electors Rules 1960 will be used”. Maharashtra: No hasty deletions Following the ECI’s meeting with all state CEOs Thursday, Maharashtra, currently the largest state where the SIR is still under way, has instructed its Electoral Registration Officers (EROs) not to exclude any voter in haste. A note sent by the Chief Electoral Officer’s office Thursday to officials handling Mumbai City and Mumbai Suburban states: “Before taking a decision to exclude the name of the said voter from the electoral roll, sufficient opportunity should be given to the concerned voter to submit the necessary documents, a hearing should be held and the necessary order should be passed.” It states that “an eligible voter should not remain excluded from the electoral roll and there should be no obstruction to the voter’s right to vote”. Officials have been told not to take a negative decision in haste and to ensure “complete scrutiny at the ERO level”.

The note implements the Commission’s September 26 decision that voters served notices for being “unmapped” or for “logical discrepancies” need not appear for hearings in person. Booth Level Officers, the first interface between citizens and the Commission, will collect documents at the homes of voters who have been served notices and upload them for the ERO to decide; those already sent hearing notices are to be told by phone or WhatsApp that they need not come. Special camps are scheduled on October 3, 4, 10 and 11. The note adds a safeguard for cases the BLO’s visit doesn’t settle: another chance to produce documents, then a hearing and an order, before any name comes off. Maharashtra’s draft roll flagged 1.22 crore records for verification: 62.48 lakh for discrepancies in relatives’ details, 59.75 lakh that could not be mapped to a relative in the previous roll. The “necessary changes” to ECINet and the BLO App, the note says, are still being made at the Commission level.

PM leads praise for flydubai Indian pilot

Machchhar was gravely injured in the incident but was safe, and had been airlifted to the United Arab Emirates after receiving emergency treatment in Saudi Arabia’s Tabuk where the plane landed Wednesday. The Ministry of External Affairs, in a statement, said, “We continue to closely follow the health condition of Captain Smit Machchhar, an Indian national and the brave pilot of FlyDubai flight FZ1073. After receiving initial medical treatment in a hospital in Tabuk, Saudi Arabia, he has now been shifted to Abu Dhabi for continued medical attention and recovery. Our Ambassador in UAE met Captain Machchhar in hospital and enquired about his well being.” After meeting the injured pilot, Ambassador Deepak Mittal said, “He was speaking openly, smiling and laughing which was a great relief for us and, above all, for his family.” Earlier, the Indian embassy in the UAE said Mittal and Consul General Vishnu Vardhan Reddy met Machchhar’s family members. “They briefed the family about Captain Machchhar’s health and recovery, conveyed that the Embassy and Consulate are in touch with the UAE authorities, and assured the family of continued support,” the embassy said. In New Delhi, President Droupadi Murmu and PM Modi praised Machchhar for saving the lives of passengers. The PM also spoke to the pilot’s wife and parents, praising him for averting a major tragedy and assuring the family that the government and Indian missions would provide all necessary support. Addressing an event to mark 100 years of the UPSC, Modi said, “Yesterday, an incident took place in which Indian Captain Smit displayed a remarkable presence of mind and courage. And as the Prime Minister of Israel said, an Indian has saved us from a 9/11. Smit’s bravery fills every Indian with pride.” “Today, I also spoke to his father Bhupendra Bhai, his mother Geeta Behen, and his wife Sonal Behen. He is currently undergoing treatment. The entire world is proud of him today. I appeal to all citizens to pray for Smit’s long life and good health, and to honour Smit who has made India proud,” he said. In a post on X, President Murmu noted Machchhar’s “heroic courage and incredible presence of mind”. “Even after being seriously injured in a moment of grave peril, he remained determined to protect the lives of others. His bravery and quick response helped prevent a major tragedy and saved many precious lives. I salute his indomitable spirit. I pray for his speedy recovery and good health,” she said. Congress president Mallikarjun Kharge, among a host of political leaders, also hailed the Indian pilot and wished him swift and full recovery. Reuven Azar, Israel’s Ambassador to India, said, “Together with Israel, India and UAE, I pray for the life of Captain Smit Machchhar, the experienced and gifted hero Indian pilot of flydubai flight FZ 1073. His courage & the courage of other Israeli & Emirati passengers & crew members saved the lives of 180 souls.” The MEA said that although Machchhar was gravely injured, he was safe. “We salute the bravery of Captain Smit Machchhar who, in spite of being gravely injured, showed remarkable courage that saved the lives of many. He is receiving medical attention and is safe. We wish and pray for his speedy recovery. The nation proudly stands with him and his family,” MEA spokesperson Randhir Jaiswal said.

Tawang chosen as venue for tourism meet, China too invited rotation, in one of the North-Eastern states. The 2025 edition of the event was held in Sikkim, and was attended by government representatives and industry stakeholders from over 19 countries. Sources maintained it is a routine rotational event, but the decision to hold the event in Tawang is significant, coming as it does weeks after the government identified 27 places/features in Arunachal Pradesh by standard place and feature names on the official maps of Survey of India for “their accurate recognition and better awareness among the public at large”. Tawang in the eastern sector is a primary bone of contention in the boundary dispute between India and China. Beijing refers to Arunachal Pradesh as Zangnan or South

Tibet and claims that it belongs to China. New Delhi strongly rejects China’s territorial claim, reiterating that Arunachal Pradesh is an “inalienable and integral part of India”. While government representatives from China have not attended the tourism event traditionally, there have been instances of private tour operators participating at the event since it offers a lot of scope for B2B tie-ups. At the 2018 edition in Agartala, over 60 tour operator delegates from different countries participated, including those from Bangladesh, Australia, Canada, China and France. Sources said invitations for the Tawang event have been sent to all participating countries and industry delegations. Participation confirmation will be known closer to the event date, the sources said. While a lot of focus is on building travel and tourism ties between the region and its neighbours, particularly the ASEAN and SAARC countries, representatives and stakeholders from other parts of the world also attend the event. Delegates from Australia, New Zealand, Spain, Germany, Italy, France, Thailand and Israel were among those at the 2025 edition in Sikkim. For the edition in Tawang, the Ministry of Tourism is collaborating with the Government of Arunachal Pradesh. Union Ministers and state ministers will be attending the event over five days. Delegates will also be taken on a visit to Tawang Monastery, Buddha Park, Panga Teng Tso lake and Shernup village.

Joint polls panel shelves visit to SC for ‘informal discussion’

Visit’ to the Supreme Court had been cancelled. No reason was given in the communication. Committee chairman and BJP MP P P Chaudhary, however, said the visit was not meant for discussing the proposed legislation with the judges. “The study visit was to familiarise the committee members with the Supreme Court including the library as some of the members had never visited the Supreme Court. The proposed visit was not to discuss the Bill with the court. The visit has been put off as there are other programmes scheduled,” Chaudhary told The Indian Express. The agenda for the visit, circulated among members a few days ago, had described its purpose as “Informal discussion with Honourable Chief Justice of India and other honourable judges of the Supreme Court of India on the issue of simultaneous elections.” It is learnt that some Opposition MPs on the committee had expressed their inability to join the October 6 programme as INDIA bloc MPs have scheduled a protest against Chief Election Commissioner Gyanesh Kumar on the same day. Congress MP Randeep Surjewala, who is a member of the committee, said there could be “no justification for consulting” the Supreme Court. “There is segregation of functions between the legislature and judiciary and the Supreme Court cannot be consulted by Parliament or any of its committees on law making. The reason is simple. The Supreme Court examines the laws made by Parliament and legislatures on the touchstone of constitutionality and legality. That is why there is segregation of functions. The only time the SC can be consulted is when the President of India makes a reference in writing to the court under Article 143 of the Constitution. A JPC has no such power to consult the SC. There is no justification for consulting the SC. Good sense has prevailed and the so-called consultation has been cancelled,” Surjewala said. Earlier Thursday, Rajya Sabha MP and Senior Advocate Kapil Sibal questioned the proposed interaction, saying it was contrary to the principle of separation of powers since the legislation, if enacted, could subsequently come before the Supreme Court for constitutional scrutiny. “Parliament debates and passes Bills. When a Bill is passed, the court determines whether it is constitutional or not. But till today, in the history of this country, I have never heard that a parliamentary committee will hold a meeting in the Supreme Court to tell the court what the Bill is all about,” Sibal said at a press conference. “So the government will tell SC judges how good this law is going to be — the law which will likely face petitions on constitutionality. And then the SC will decide on that. This is unconstitutional. It is contrary to the concept of separation of powers,” he said. During its examination of the Bills, the committee has already heard several former Chief Justices of India as experts, including Justice U U Lalit, Justice Ranjan Gogoi, Justice J S Khehar and Justice D Y Chandrachud. Justice Lalit, who appeared before the panel in February 2025, is learnt to have cautioned that substantial curtailment of the tenure of a state Assembly could invite legal challenges and suggested that the transition to simultaneous elections could be staggered. HC strikes down Andhra govt’s 34% backward class quota for local body polls

Sreenivas Janyala
Hyderabad, October 1 THE ANDHRA Pradesh High Court Thursday struck down two government orders providing 34% reservation for backward classes in local body elections, observing that the quota was against Supreme Court guidelines that total reservation should not exceed 50%. The development is a setback to the Chandrababu Naidu government, for whom the quota was a major poll promise. The court then directed the government and the state EC to begin the poll process within six weeks. On August 18, CM Naidu had announced the 34% quota for Backward Classes in local body polls, describing it as ‘correcting injustice’. He told the Assembly while Backward Classes would get 34% quota in rural local bodies, they would have a 33.33% quota in urban local bodies, calling it a “historic day”. Naidu also said that the Telugu Desam Party-led NDA government was fulfilling its 2024 poll promise of increasing Backward Classes’ reservation in local bodies from 20% to 34%. The quota would restore justice for the community, he said, urging the House to approve the hike. “Backward Classes constitute 50.54% of the state’s population; justice must be ensured for them,” he said. Earlier, the YSRCP had opposed the announcement, saying it violated the SC guidelines on quota. The HC had also rejected the YSRCP’s plea seeking postponement of the polls.

Free newborn screening at LNJP, in more hospitals soon

Tabshir Shams
New Delhi, October 1

JUST INSIDE Gate 1 of Lok Nayak Jai Prakash Hospital, Delhi's largest government-run tertiary-care hospital, a low, rectangular building sits beside the new medical block. It houses the hospital's Medical Genetics Lab.

Inside, a brightly lit corridor runs past about 10 rooms. Near the entrance is the sample-collection area. Farther down, behind a door closed to the public, stands an ultra low temperature freezer, its silver body resting on a blue base. It stores biological samples for long-term preservation. Next door is the newborn screening laboratory.

This is where the Delhi government's free screening programme for newborns, Mission ANMOL (Advanced Newborn Monitoring for Optimal Life-care) is being run since March, making genetic screening accessible for families who may otherwise be unable to afford such advanced diagnostics.

The programme, announced in the Delhi government's 2026-27 Budget earlier this year, aims to screen 250,000 newborns annually for 56 genetic diseases, including congenital hypothyroidism, congenital heart defects, hearing impairment, and eye diseases.

Currently, this is the only such facility run by the Delhi government. But Delhi Health Minister Pankaj Kumar Singh said the genetic testing facilities would soon be expanded to other government hospitals across the city.

"At a recent Cabinet meeting, we decided to expand the coverage of Mission ANMOL.

Our aim is to screen every child born in Delhi, free of cost, for 56 genetic diseases so that these conditions can be detected early and children can receive timely care. Gradually, we will expand the scope of the programme and increase the number of genetic testing laboratories across Delhi," he said.

Dr Seema Kapur, professor of genetics at the Medical Genetics Lab, said an average of about 14,000 newborn samples are being screened each month. However, she underlined that not all genetic conditions are identified through these tests.

"Newborns may be referred for testing if they have developmental delays, birth defects or an illness that doctors cannot explain. Apart from newborn screening, the department receives around 30-40 such refer-als each day," she said.

The laboratory screens for a range of genetic and other conditions that can affect the baby's development; and congenital adrenal hyperplasia, a condition in which the adrenal glands do not produce some hormones properly, along with around 50 other markers," said Dr Sunil Polipalli, a senior scientist at the laboratory.

Besides screening newborns, Dr Kapur said the facility also offers genetic testing for parents, particularly when a genetic condition has been identified in a family member.

Among those waiting outside the sample collection centre is Pratibha Kumari, 25, who is 16 weeks pregnant. She and her husband, Amit Kumar, 29, were referred by the outpatient department at LNJP. Pratibha had undergone a complete blood count and a TORCH profile — a group of blood tests to screen pregnant women for specific infections. The results prompted doctors to take a closer look.

Pratibha and Amit have been sent to the genetics laboratory for two tests: high-performance liquid chromatography, or HPLC, which checks the different types of haemoglobin in the blood, and HBB gene analysis, which looks for changes in a gene involved in making haemoglobin. Together, the tests can help doctors determine whether either parent carries conditions like thalassemia or sickle cell disease, and if there could be a risk to the baby.

"For most parents referred here, our main goal is to find out if one or both carry a haemoglobin trait -- thalassemia, sickle cell anaemia or other genetic abnormality -- and what that means for the baby," said Dr Polipalli. "If both parents carry the sickle cell trait, there is a 25 per cent chance that the child will inherit the disease."

Parents are screened for the thalassemia trait one at a time. "Wife first, then husband, then both together -- HPLC before anything more invasive is considered," said Dr Polipalli. "If both parents carry the trait, the next step may be chorionic villus sampling, or CVS, in which a small amount of tissue is taken from the placenta to test the foetus's DNA," he said.

Pregnancy-related tests, including the dual-marker, triple-marker and alpha-fetoprotein (AFP) tests, are conducted to estimate the risk of certain genetic conditions, including Down syndrome, in an unborn baby.

"Early detection is not simply about making a diagnosis. It gives parents time to understand what the findings mean, consult a genetic counsellor and consider what to do next," Dr Polipalli said.

HOMELESS IN GURUGRAM AS DISPUTES GRIND THROUGH HC, SC

'Out of money, chased by lenders': 1,300 Greenopolis buyers stuck in 11-year mess

Nirbhay Thakur
Gurugram, October 1

FROM THE outside, Greenopolis in Gurgaon's Sector 89 looks like a finished, upscale housing complex — a cluster of buildings, balconies fitted with glass railings and AC units.

But a few metres past these, the picture changes. Behind a long, unplastered boundary wall, much of the complex is a ghost town. Windowless towers stand frozen mid-construction.

For around 1,300 homebuyers caught in disputes involving the developers — Three C Shelters and Orris Infrastructure — the towers are a reminder of their indefinite wait.

This week, two court orders brought some movement in the case: the Delhi High Court set up a committee to verify homebuyers' claims, while the Supreme Court restored the insolvency proceedings against Three C.

Greenopolis in Gurugram Sector 89 was launched in 2012; (right) unfinished towers beside the finished blocks. NIRBHAY THAKUR in 2012 on 47 acres, with the developers agreeing to split the allotments 65:35. Buyers booked flats in 2012-13.

According to a Delhi High Court order, Three C collected Rs 776.60 crore from its buyers and Orris about Rs 383.06 crore from its own. Buyers said they had paid 80-90% of the price when construction came to a halt in early 2016.

Of the 1,862 units planned, only about 1,650 were allotted — 1,091 by Three C and 559 by Orris — across three phases. Phase 1 comprised 512 flats which went to some Orris buyers and purchasers in the open market. Phase 2 with 766 flats and Phase 3 with 584 flats remain unfinished.

'Retirement nearing'

The delay exposed buyers, like Dipika Mohil, 57, to a second layer of creditors — banks awaiting payments. She had taken a home loan and bought her flat in 2013. "I paid interest from 2015 till 2024 but I had to default as I had no money," she said.

Dipika requested a two-year moratorium with an option for a one-time settlement, but received legal notices. She said she had bought the flat, hoping it would provide financial security after retirement. She is now six months away from retirement, living on rent. "My entire life savings, accumulated over 30 years, have gone into this," she said.

'Future put on hold'

For Chittaranjan Gupta, 72, a retired banker, the flat was meant to be an investment for his daughter. He bought a four-bedroom apartment in 2012, planning to sell it at a profit. "When I retired in 2014, I started feeling the pinch of the installments," he said. He asked the builder to change his apartment to a smaller one, which it did. "But the delay in possession has adversely affected my plans for my daughter's higher education," he said.

"After over 10 years, can we be asked to wait indefinitely? We're suffering ... We have no homes, almost no money and banks are after us," he said.

'Had to sell jewellery'

Sushma, 50, booked her apartment in 2016. "The project was running in full swing then. We trusted the reputed names associated with it. We took a bank loan," she said.

Construction, however, stopped soon after.

The financial pressure forced the family to sell jewellery. "Selling our jewellery was one of the most painful decisions we have ever had to make. They were years of savings, memories and security," she said.

"The uncertainty has affected our life, our future plans and our emotional well-being."

The two court orders

On Tuesday, the Delhi High Court constituted a three-member monitoring committee, which Justice Anup Bhambhani said, will "formulate an expeditious and transparent procedure to verify genuine homebuyers and the quantum of payments made by them".

On Wednesday, the Supreme Court set aside a 2023 order by the National Company Law Appellate Tribunal terminating insolvency proceedings against Three C.

Homebuyers had appealed against shutting down the insolvency process.

The top court restored the proceedings before the National Company Law Tribunal (NCLT), directing it to reconsider the matter after hearing the resolution professional, the Committee of Creditors and other stakeholders, including the homebuyers.

For buyers, however, these developments bring another round of uncertainty.

September AQI in Capital was lowest in 5 years, still PM2.5 and PM10 spiked

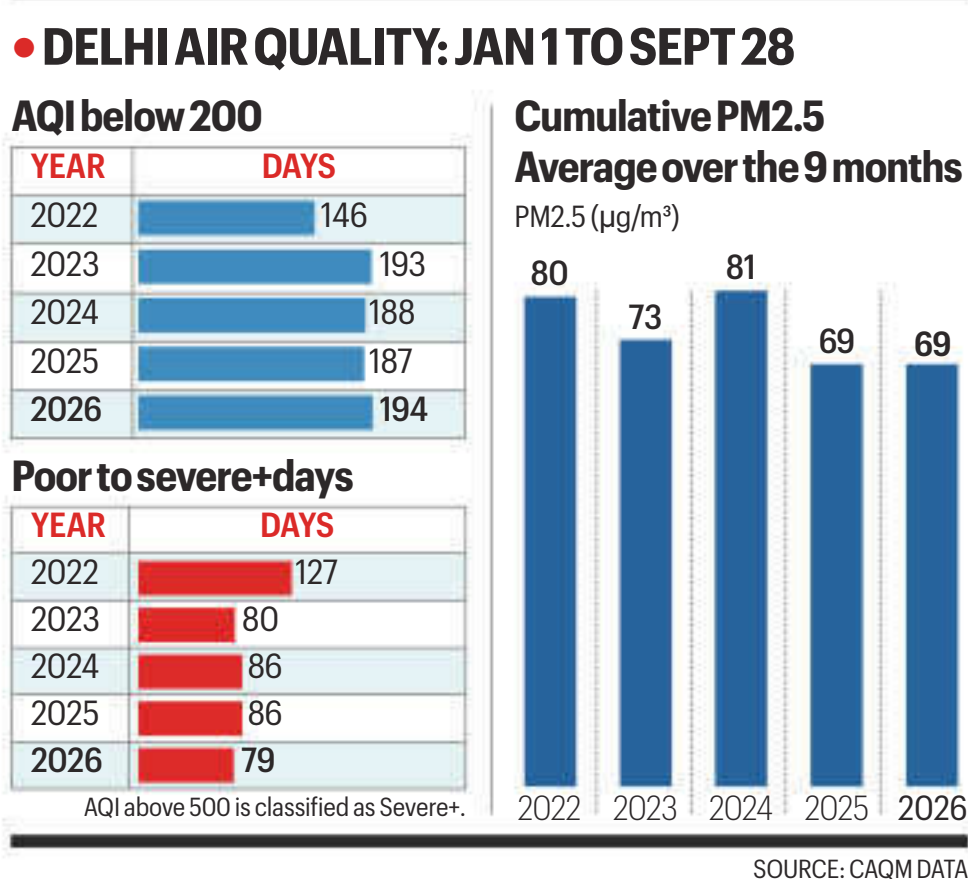

Sophiya Mathew
New Delhi, October 1

DELHI'S AIR appeared to improve this September. The city's average Air Quality Index, or AQI — a numerical index that translates concentrations of multiple air pollutants into a single measure of air quality — fell to 102, its lowest September average in five years, according to official data from the Commission for Air Quality Management in National Capital Region and Adjoining Areas (CAQM).

But measurements of two specific key pollutants — PM2.5 and PM10 — tell a different story.

The concentrations of PM2.5 and PM10, two of the pollutants most closely associated with air pollution, slightly increased this September compared with last year, according to an analysis of data from the Central Pollution Control Board (CPCB).

At first glance, the two sets of numbers appear contradictory. But they measure different aspects of air quality, and the difference largely lies in how the AQI is calculated and how the data is compared.

Govt launches control centre to monitor pollution sources

New Delhi: Chief Minister Rekha Gupta Thursday launched an Integrated Command and Control Centre of the Delhi Pollution Control Committee for real-time monitoring of various sources of pollution in the city, AI-based analysis of pollution data and tracking of road sweeping machines.

The centre, located at Delhi Metro Rail Corporation IT Park in Shastri Park, will generate real-time information which will be linked to field-level action, the government said. During the winter, 78 sub-division-level teams will be deployed for monitoring and enforcement. Once a pollution hotspot is identified, the department concerned will be alerted. Subsequent movement of field teams will be monitored through GPS-enabled vehicles, said the government.

Environment Minister Manjinder Singh Sirsa said more than 700 construction sites are being monitored with the help of AI and CCTV cameras.

Gupta also launched a 'Jan Suggestion' portal. "Citizens will be able to share suggestions, complaints, pollution-related concerns through the portal," she said. ENS monthly averages of NO2 and ozone were lower than they were in September 2025.

CAQM, meanwhile, reported that Delhi's September average AQI was 102, compared with 105 in both 2025 and 2024, 108 in 2023 and 104 in 2022. So, the decline in the monthly AQI does not mean that concentrations of every pollutant declined. It means the composite AQI outcome was lower.

Hindu College protest enters third week, staff demand takeover by DU, investigation

Sophiya Mathew
New Delhi, October 1

TEACHERS AT Hindu College on Thursday marched to the Vice-Chancellor's office as their protest over alleged irregularities in admissions under Sports and Extra-Curricular Activities (ECA) quotas entered its third week, seeking a temporary takeover of the college by the Delhi University (DU) and an independent, time-bound probe into its functioning.

The Hindu College Staff Association (HCSA), which began its dharna on September 14, has alleged that Sports and ECA quota allocations in BCom (Hons) and BA (Hons) Political Science exceeded the prescribed 20% limit for a single undergraduate programme. ECA admissions cover recognised achievements in activities such as debate, music, dance, theatre and fine arts.

The university has attributed the excess allocation to an error in its admission algorithm.

The HCSA has since widened its demands to include alleged issues in the functioning of statutory bodies, faculty rights, appointments, finances, procurement, student welfare and campus infrastructure. It has also sought the removal of Governing Body chairman T C A Rangachari and Principal Anju Srivastava to facilitate an impartial inquiry.

The dispute began during the first round of admissions for 2026-27, when 17 of 48 Sports and ECA seats were allocated to BCom (Hons) and 15 to BA (Hons) Political Science.

Speaking to The Indian Express, Srivastava said admissions were centralised at the university level. "Eligibility and allocation of college and subject based on students' preferences, is decided by the university. The applications of university-allotted candidates are processed by the Central Admission Committee and then approved by the Principal before fee payment. The Principal has no direct role in admissions," she said.

The dispute escalated after the Governing Body issued show-cause notices last month to HCSA president Ratan Lal, secretary Shankar Kumar and associate professor P K Vijayan over statements and communications made during the standoff.

In a September 24 resolution, the HCSA condemned the notices to Lal and Kumar, saying they had acted on the "collective and unanimous mandate" of the association. It also objected to the notice issued to Vijayan, noting that he had expressed regret at a HCSA meeting held on September 8 over remarks that may have hurt colleagues' sentiments.

The association has also alleged intimidation of student and teacher protesters.

The demands of HCSA include restoration of the Staff Council's role, as it was allegedly bypassed through irregular meetings and parallel committees. It has also raised concerns over delays in study leave, Child Care Leave, sabbatical leave and promotions, and continuation of office-holders beyond prescribed terms.

Other demands include inquiries into alleged financial, procurement, and construction irregularities, including hostel mess tenders, prolonged outsourcing of security and sanitation, commercial use of college premises, and alleged non-compliance with CAG observations.

Capping fuel sales at pumps not allowed, govt to tell retailers
Jio-bp, Nayara

Sukalp Sharma
New Delhi, October 1

THE GOVERNMENT will ask private sector fuel retailers to not place limits on volumes of diesel and petrol sold at their retail outlets as unilaterally imposing such caps is not allowed, Petroleum Secretary Neeraj Mittal told reporters Thursday.

Mittal's comments came in response to a question regarding private fuel retailers Nayara Energy and Jio-bp limiting retail diesel at some of their pumps amid a widening gap between retail fuel prices and prices for bulk consumers, and negative margins on retail fuel sales.

"Nobody is allowed to put a cap on fuel sales. If they are putting a cap on sales, we will take it up. We will tell them that it is not acceptable, it is not done. In the past also, letters had been issued, instructions had been issued. So the same thing applies even today. There is no change in the government's view on this," Mittal said. Petroleum Minister Hardeep Singh Puri said that his ministry is in regular touch with private fuel retailers, but didn't go into details.

Private sector retailers have less than 10% share in India's fuel retail network, with the three public sector fuel retailers — Indian Oil, Bharat Petroleum, and Hindustan Petroleum — controlling massive market share, giving them almost undisputed pricing power, with private retailers usually following their prices.

Public sector players kept retail fuel prices unchanged since May despite international price surge, in effect keeping prices artificially lower to shield retail consumers from price shocks. This is leading to heavy under-recoveries on retail fuel sales. Even when prices were hiked in May, the increase passed on the price pressure only partially. Last week, ratings agency ICRA had estimated that the public sector fuel retailers were incurring daily fuel marketing losses of about Rs 530 crore.

CJP founder Dipke demands CEC Gyanesh Kumar's resignation, warns of stir at Jantar Mantar

Apoorva Agashe
Mumbai, October 1

THE COCKROACH Janta Party (CJP) on Thursday announced a nationwide agitation against Chief Election Commissioner (CEC) Gyanesh Kumar, demanding his resignation and an inquiry into his conduct, amid continuing controversy over Special Intensive Revision (STR) of electoral rolls.

CJP founder Abhijeet Dipke said the agitation would begin with a protest at Shivaji Park on October 2 and continue across Goa, Karnataka, West Bengal.

Uttar Pradesh, Bihar and Jharkhand before culminating in a demonstration at Jantar Mantar in Delhi from October end if Kumar does not resign.

Speaking at the Mumbai Press Club, Dipke said CJP had three demands — removal and resignation of Kumar, along with an inquiry and criminal proceedings against him; freezing the SIR electoral roll and using 2025 electoral roll for elections; and a more independent and transparent process for appointing Election Commissioners, including participation from civil society. The CJP has alleged the electoral institutions were being compromised for political gains and made the independence of the Election Commission the central issue of its campaign.

"When the CJI had been removed from the process of electing the CEC, then how can you expect the system to be transparent. The electoral institutions have been rigged," Dipke said and that protests would continue until CJP's demands were met.

"The Mumbai Police is not like the Delhi Police and they will cooperate with us as there is a peaceful protest. They are free to initiate action against me if they feel it's necessary," he said. Police have not granted permission for the proposed gathering, according to reports, though the CJP has said it will go ahead with the protest.

UPSC turns 100: PM urges shorter exam cycles, youth-centric reforms

Jatin Anand
New Delhi, October 1

PRIME MINISTER Narendra Modi Thursday hailed the Union Public Service Commission (UPSC) on its centenary, calling it a proud milestone and a celebration not just of its legacy of serving the people but also of the aspirations of lakhs of youths year after year.

Praising the UPSC for its enduring credibility despite changing generations, governments, technologies, and syllabi, PM Modi marked the occasion by releasing a commemorative postage stamp, a special coin, and a compilation of 100 significant case laws.

PM Modi emphasised the need for the institution to adapt to future challenges while safeguarding its foundational credibility for the next century.

He highlighted that the core identity of the UPSC, characterised by independence, impartiality, merit, confidentiality, and fair processes, must always be preserved without compromise.

While the UPSC has discharged its historical duties well so far, the next 25 years will require it to shift its focus to the critical role of selection commissions in achieving a Viksit Bharat, since the youth recruited today will simultaneously serve as the chief architects and primary beneficiaries of the nation's future, said PM Modi.

Underlining the need to ensure that those being selected were measured against the two principles of 'nation first and citizen first', he said, "The kind of governance needed for Viksit Bharat now, the UPSC and state selection commissions are also significant mediums for it. The youth you are selecting today will play an important role in the creation of a Viksit Bharat; they are also going to be the biggest beneficiaries of a Viksit Bharat."

PM Modi said there is a need for professionals who have the empathy to understand the struggles of the poor, can innovate in problem-solving, and recognise the country's needs. He said it was important to bring into public service youth attracted not by public office but by public service, making it important for recruitment examinations to test not only how much a candidate knows but also why they want to join the civil services.

PM Modi said that by 2047, India's socio-economic landscape will change significantly. As the nation becomes more urbanised and the gap between rural and urban areas narrows, youth expectations will rise dramatically. To meet these expectations, traditional service delivery models must evolve.

Saying the country was moving rapidly on the 'Reform Express', PM Modi said that, at such a time, the agencies that conduct examinations must also work on reforms that are the need of the hour.

"An examination should not be considered just an event. It is related to the future of our youth. A delay of even a few months can create difficulties for the youth...so, our examination system must follow the principle of time certainty," he said.

"So, the UPSC and all selection commissions of the country will need to ensure that, without lowering the bar, our examination cycle can get shorter...this will not just be an administrative but also an equity reform," he added.

Seeking to define the new work culture for modern administration, he added that the nation's entirely fresh operational ethos now rested on three core pillars: "pro-people, pro-active, good governance".

The prime minister also paid tribute to Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel, who played a foundational role in creating India's civil service.

No top court relief for Mamata-led TMC over frozen bank accounts

Express News Service
New Delhi, October 1

THE SUPREME COURT on Thursday turned down a plea by the Mamata Banerjee-led Trinamool Congress (TMC) faction challenging the West Bengal Police move to freeze four party bank accounts.

A two-judge bench, presided by Justice M M Sundresh, noted that the matter was still pending before the Calcutta High Court and requested it to expedite the hearing. The court added that it had not gone into the merits of the issue.

The bench, also comprising Justice P B Varale, was hearing the Mamata group's plea against the Calcutta High Court's August 27 order, which refused to grant the faction any interim relief on its plea against freezing of the Indian Bank accounts.

The court recorded Solicitor General Tushar Mehta's submissions that the Election Commission of India (ECI) had frozen the election symbol of the party and hence, the question of which faction gets to operate the account could only be decided after that matter was settled.

Appearing for the petitioner, Senior Advocate A M Singhvi submitted that the freezing of the bank accounts is an attempt to stop the political activities of the party and had paralysed its activities. Referring to the party's audited accounts, he said that a minimum of Rs 12.15 crore was needed every month towards party expenses in view of the upcoming bypolls etc. "AITC is the third-largest party in the country. Rs 12.5 crore is the minimum required monthly to run the party. Minimum for

Mahua security plea: SC seeks reply from state

THE SUPREME COURT asked the West Bengal government and others on Thursday to file responses on MP Mahua Moitra's plea seeking protection during her visit to her parliamentary constituency, Krishnanagar. political activity," he said.

Singhvi said the police had frozen the accounts without any judicial oversight involved in it.

Opposing the prayer, Mehta, appearing for the state government, said two factions were claiming to be the real Trinamool and the Supreme Court had asked the ECI to decide which is the real party. "The other group is also saying permit us to operate the account," he said, adding it will therefore have to wait for the decision on the real Trinamool.

On the freeze on the accounts, Mehta said, "There was a complaint and we came to know that the personal secretary of the general secretary of the then Trinamool Congress had deposited Rs 35 crore by way of cash into the account. He, Sumit Roy, filed for anticipatory bail but lost before high court and Supreme Court. These are the accounts which are frozen and we are investigating how he got the money."

Adhir to Mamata: Join Cong minus the baggage, will accept your leadership

Atri Mitra
Kolkata, October 1

LESS THAN 24 hours after Mamata Banerjee attended the INDIA bloc meeting in New Delhi, where she was seen sharing moments of bonhomie with UPA chairperson Sonia Gandhi, senior Congress leader Adhir Ranjan Chowdhury on Thursday appealed to the TMC chief to return to Congress — the party which she had left 28 years ago to form the Trinamool Congress.

Chowdhury, a known bête noire of the former chief minister of West Bengal, also said that the Congress was prepared to accept her leadership in the state.

Referring to Mamata's political existential crisis following her party's debacle in the Assembly elections in West Bengal in May this year, followed by a large-scale rebellion that has seen a majority of her MPs and MLAs leaving her and claiming to be the "real TMC", Chowdhury on Thursday told media-persons in Baharampur. "There is no need for any separate entity at this moment. Not much is left of the TMC after its defeat in the Assembly elections. Since she has joined the Congress-led INDIA bloc, she should join the party directly... We would urge Mamata Banerjee to join the Congress along with all the left-over MLAs and MPs. We are prepared to accept her leadership in West Bengal and work with her."

Without naming anyone, the former Leader of the Opposition in Lok Sabha urged Mamata to leave behind her "baggage or extra burden" before joining the Congress. "Do not bring your baggage. Leave out the one who is causing you trouble..." he said.

Chowdhury's remarks seen to be directed at TMC general secretary and Mamata's nephew, Abhishek, who has been at the centre of the TMC upheaval with most rebels blaming him for the party's debacle in the elections.

'Plot to delete 15 lakh voters': DK Shivakumar seeks investigation into pre-printed Form 7

Akram M
Bengaluru, October 1

DEMANDING IMMEDIATE registration of a criminal case and a probe into an alleged conspiracy to delete eligible voters' names using Form 7 across Karnataka, Chief Minister D K Shivakumar protested outside the Chief Electoral Officer's office in Bengaluru Thursday.

Shivakumar visited the Chief Electoral Officer's office with his Cabinet colleagues and submitted a memorandum. He then staged a protest outside the office premises with his Cabinet colleagues K J George, KH Muniyappa, Ramalinga Reddy, Satish Jarkiholi, Zameer Ahmed and others.

"BJP leaders have confessed, stating that they were involved in this act and requested that no action be taken against them, asking for the applications they submitted to be returned," he told the media.

"In Ballari, across two Assembly constituencies, 13,000 applications were submitted through Form 7 and then withdrawn. In Bijapur, excluding Babaleshwar, 13,000 applications were submitted and subsequently withdrawn with a request not to take action against them. We have provided documents and videos regarding the constituencies in Mysuru, Belagavi, and Balki... They have asked for time until tomorrow," he said.

Karnataka Congress chief B K Hariprasad said they will continue the protest until an investigation is ordered.

"They should probe where the pre-printed Form 7s complete with details and names of voters came from," he demanded. At a press conference held before submitting the memorandum, Shivakumar alleged a large-scale conspiracy across Karnataka to disenfranchise legitimate voters. "This is happening in more than 70 per cent of the polling booths," he said.

Shivakumar claimed there is a wider plot to delete 15 to 16 lakh genuine voters from the electoral rolls. He noted that nearly one crore voters had already been removed from the draft roll, while 43 lakh notices were issued during the notice phase of the ongoing Special Intensive Revision (SIR) exercise.

According to Shivakumar, the bulk submissions occurred between September 22 and 24, targeting voters belonging to minority, backward, and Scheduled Caste communities. The memorandum submitted to the CEO pointed out that Dr Ravi B Patil, the defeated BJP candidate from Belagavi North, publicly acknowledged that Form 7 applications were filed in large numbers through his associates.

The memorandum carried three FIRs over bulk submission of Form-7 for voter deletion. Two of the three were filed on Thursday, while the third was filed a day earlier on September 30.

Bombay HC: EC must try to have as many eligible voters on rolls

Pavneet Singh Chadha
Panaji, October 1

THE HIGH Court of Bombay at Goa on Thursday said the Election Commission of India (ECI) must endeavour to have as many voters who are eligible on the electoral rolls.

The court said EC has to achieve the objective of not missing out on a voter, even when they come forward "with a wrong form".

The court is hearing a petition where the names of six members of a family in Goa were deleted from the electoral rolls after their Form 8 applications for address change were rejected.

A division bench of Justices Amit S Jamsandekar and Valmiki Menezes on Thursday said, "We are asking the principle. The Election Commission must endeavour, and we see that is the endeavour...to have as many voters who are eligible on the rolls. Why should it reject the Form-8 if it comes during that [enumeration] period [of SIR]?"

The court said, "The EC has to achieve the objective of not missing out on a voter, where a voter comes forward even with a wrong form."

The bench said, "Your guidelines are perfectly fine, but why do you have to reject the Form 8? Just keep it pending. Because, what will happen if you don't keep it pending...is that the person escapes from the roll. He will be neither here nor there."

The petitioners — Paresh Salgaonkar and five members of his family — said that they had moved to a new house in the same Santa Cruz Assembly constituency prior to the commencement of the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) process and were instructed by the booth-level officer (BLO) to submit Form 8 for change of address.

At the time of processing of these forms, errors were reflected since no record of their Electors Photo Identity Cards (EPIC) were found, and as such, the only option available in the ERONET login was 'reject'.

The petitioners submitted that the Assistant Electoral Registration Officer informed them that their EPICs had been deleted from the rolls and consequently, their Form 8 applications could not be processed. The only recourse available was to submit Form 6 since there was no option in ERONET for reviewing or restoring the deleted EPICs.

The court said, "We are trying to look at the larger picture.

Are you supposed to reject [Form 8] or keep it in abeyance? Complete your roll, finalise your roll and then take all these Form 8s, or you will miss voters otherwise."

"Why must you (EC) reject it? Why can't you just keep it in abeyance? Finish your roll. Publish your roll. Then deal with all those Form 8s, because that is the best information for you to understand where people are shifting," the bench said.

"If you reject it on a technicality, that my software will not accept the order, then we are at a loss with this part, where a voter gives a Form 8 and merely because your SIR says give it in Form 6, can you reject it or do you just keep it? What we are on is that you cannot tell someone you shall file Form 6, otherwise you are rejecting this Form 8," the bench added.

The bench said the EC must consider that there will be a large number of voters from the last SIR who would have shifted. "Form 8 is the normal, correct and genuine way in which people would come forward. If Form 8 is kept on a freeze, we understand. But, where Form 8 is rejected, that means the roll will no longer have that person's name," the bench said.

● BJP BANKING ON SUVENDU'S HOLD ON CONSTITUENCY AND ITS CHOICE OF CANDIDATE, THE MOTHER OF CM'S MURDERED CLOSE AIDE CHANDRANATH RATH

In Nandigram, advantage BJP, but disquiet over Congress nominee arrest

Atri Mitra
Nandigram, Haldia, October 1

WITH THE release of Congress candidate Milan Pradhan on interim bail, over charges stemming from a 2007 case, the Nandigram Assembly seat by-election has finally stirred into motion.

There are several reasons why the by-poll matters — and not just because Nandigram has been the epicentre of the Trinamool Congress-BJP confrontation in West Bengal. For Chief Minister Suwendu Adhikari, who vacated his long-time seat, necessitating the bypoll, it is a prestige fight. His decision to field the mother of his murdered close aide has made the fight even more personal.

On the other side, the police action against the Congress's Pradhan on old charges is being seen as a proof of BJP high-handedness; and the decision of Mamata's candidate to drop out at the last moment as another evidence of it. With Mamata deciding to back Pradhan, the bypoll is also a test of whether the on-again, off-again Congress-TMC partnership convinces any voters.

Emerging from Haldia jail after 12 days on Wednesday, Pradhan told reporters: "Why is Suwendu Adhikari so afraid? He always calls Nandigram the place where he became a leader. Then why has he given the ticket to an outsider?"

Pradhan underlined that he was a part of the same Nandigram land movement headed by Mamata that propelled Adhikari to the top (Adhikari was in the TMC at the time). "I was arrested recently in connection with the same incidents in which Adhikari also played a part... Is that why he is afraid?"

The 58-year-old's presence, accompanied by top state Congress leaders, is expected to breathe life into the party's campaign, which has entered into the final four days. Even as the BJP electoral machinery is at work across the constituency, with Adhikari and its candidate Hasirani Rath's posters all over, the few Congress flags and posters of Pradhan are concentrated in Sonachura, where his ancestral home is located. Significantly, there are no Mamata posters at all.

While the Congress's organisational weakness compared to the BJP is not a surprise, Mamata's TMC is hobbled by the absence of her local lieutenants such as Abu Taher and Sheikh Sufian. While Taher is now with the rebel TMC faction, the Democratic Trinamool Congress, Sufian is "absconding". Another leader who has made himself scarce is Pabitra Kar, BJP leader-turned-TMC's Nandigram candidate in the 2026 Assembly elections, who lost to Adhikari.

"Mamata said she will support the Congress candidate but, on the ground, there is no one," rues a senior Congress leader, hoping that things will change come voting day. "We expect Mamata's support base to vote for us. They are not coming out of home right now because of fear of the BJP."

On Wednesday, Congress West Bengal chief Suvankar Sarkar and its general secretary Subhashish Bhattacharya, among others, were present to welcome Pradhan as he emerged from jail. As he headed home to meet his parents, a huge convoy accompanied Pradhan, while supporters lined the roads.

Overwhelmed, Pradhan said: "This support shows how angry people are with the BJP... If a free and fair election is held, the party will not be able to retain this seat..."

BJP candidate Hasirani, who had a headstart in campaigning due to Pradhan's absence, has been visiting every corner of Nandigram.

Adhikari, who accompanied Hasirani as she filed her nomination, has urged voters across communities to back her, calling the bypoll a "test" for the minorities and an opportunity for them to decide whether they "want to be with the state government".

"This is Adhikari's bhumi (land). No one here is above him... People have also seen his work as CM," Hasirani tells voters after a visit to a temple in Amratala. On the Opposition's claims of repression, she says: "Everyone has the right to campaign. The BJP has no connection to Pradhan's arrest."

Her son and Adhikari's high-profile aide, Chandranath Rath, was killed in a roadside shooting two days after the Assembly election results. There is still no clarity on the motive. However, barring a few mentions, the killing is not an issue in the bypoll.

While the contentious Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral roll is back in the news, particularly in the context of West Bengal — the Supreme Court recently declined an urgent hearing on voters regarding these two bypoll seats — voters say it is not an issue.

One of those waiting to greet Hasirani is Munshi Mondol, who says the BJP will win by an even greater margin than earlier this year.

However, what may be worrying for the BJP is the arrest of Pradhan.

A senior BJP leader said, "This contest would have been a cakewalk for the BJP... Although Pradhan was an active part of the 2007 land movement, he was not a prominent leader. But, his arrest changed everything. We fear that a section of the people may vote for Pradhan because of his arrest."

Sandesh editor gets 20-day jail in 1999 defamation case

Express News Service
Vadodara, October 1

A VADODARA court on Wednesday convicted Falgun Chimanbhai Patel, the editor-in-chief of Gujarati daily Sandesh, in a 1999 criminal defamation case arising from a report published in the newspaper about then Vadodara mamlatdar Gambhirsinh Dekare.

The court awarded him 20 days of simple imprisonment and a fine of Rs 15,000.

The Judicial Magistrate First Class court in Vadodara held Patel legally responsible as the editor of the newspaper and rejected his defence that he was based at the Ahmedabad office and had no direct involvement in the Vadodara edition.

The case was initiated by Dekare over a Sandesh report published from Vadodara on September 28, 1999, alleging that it contained serious and defamatory allegations concerning his character and had damaged his reputation among members of the public, government officials, family and relatives.

Dekare had issued a legal notice to the newspaper on September 29, 1999. According to the complaint, he alleged the newspaper's management did not provide a satisfactory response, following which he filed a criminal complaint against then resident editor Navin Chauhan and chief editor Falgun Patel.

The complaint invoked Indian Penal Code sections and further alleged that after publication, he was threatened with further adverse reporting and warned he could be removed from his position as Mamlatdar if he did not comply with demands.

During the trial, Patel's defence argued he handled administrative responsibilities from the newspaper's Ahmedabad headquarters and had no direct knowledge of the contents of the Vadodara edition. The defence also relied on an affidavit of the Vadodara resident editor in an attempt to place responsibility for the publication on the local editorial establishment.

The defence further challenged the newspaper copy produced by the complainant as evidence, arguing there was no proof that the copy had been purchased from an authorised vendor. Patel's defence relied on the "good faith and public interest" under Section 499 of the IPC.

The magistrate rejected Pa-tel's arguments that his administrative role at the Ahmedabad office insulated him from liability. Referring to Section 7 of the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, the court noted Patel's name appeared as the editor of the newspaper and held that the declared editor carries legal responsibility for the material published in the relevant issue.

The court rejected the objection to the newspaper copy. It noted the defence itself had proceeded on the basis that the report had been published in good faith and in public interest.

The court treated that position as an admission of publication and held that the admitted fact did not require separate proof.

On the question of good faith, the court found the defence witnesses were not eye-witnesses to events forming basis of the report and the material relied upon was hearsay.

It noted the police station diary entry produced by the defence did not contain any reference to Dekare.

The court further found that there had been no effort to obtain Dekare's version or verify the allegations before the report was published.

'Complete govt failure': Rahul meets families which lost children to illness in Balaghat

Anand Mohan J
Bhopal, October 1

LEADER OF Opposition in the Lok Sabha Rahul Gandhi on Thursday visited Madhya Pradesh's Balaghat district and met families of tribal children who died following an outbreak of illness in the area earlier this year.

"This is a complete government failure in Madhya Pradesh. A total, 100 per cent government failure. I will raise this issue in Parliament — not just their issue, but what is being done to tribals across the country," Gandhi said.

Gandhi accused Madhya Pradesh government of failing to provide basic healthcare and other essential services to the tribal population. During his visit, Gandhi met the bereaved families and heard concerns about healthcare, education, employment and tribal welfare. He accused the state government of failing to respond adequately to the situation.

He alleged children had died because of illness and malnutrition. "Many children here have died because of illness and malnutrition. Whatever support the government is supposed to provide — whether in healthcare, education or employment — has completely broken down," he said. "You talk about development 24 hours a day, and there is corruption 24 hours a day, but when our tribal brothers and sisters need you, you disappear".

The BJP hit back at Gandhi over the visit. Madhya Pradesh Deputy Chief Minister Rajendra Shukla accused him of using the deaths for political purposes and said, "In greed to form government, Rahul Gandhi is coming to Balaghat months after the incident and engaging in political tourism," Shukla said.

Shukla said the state government had responded to the situation after the incident, with CM Mohan Yadav, himself, and the district's in-charge minister visiting the area. He said four Block Women Development Officers had been posted and 14 sub-health centres and community health centres were being established. The state health department has maintained that eight children had died and around 100 others had fallen ill in August in four Baiga-dominated villages. Local activists and villagers reported the death count may be as high as 30.

The children, aged between one and 13, had reported symptoms like high fever, rashes, stomach pain and ulcers. The exact cause was not known at the time, with blood samples sent to ICMR laboratories in Kolkata and Pune for testing.

TWO PRIESTS were burnt to death on a temple premises in Uttar Pradesh's Shahjahanpur district Thursday morning, with police probing allegations that a local 'goon' who got out on bail recently killed the victims to grab temple property. Police said the suspect has been detained and is being questioned. Shahjahanpur Superintendent of Police, Saurabh Dixit, in a statement, said police received information around 7 am of the bodies being found at the temple in Sootha village. The victims lived there. 'More concerned about his recovery': At Captain Machchhar's home, a mix of pride and worry

Purnima Sah
Mumbai, October 1

AS HE peers outside the window at the gathered media, well-wishers and passersby, Haresh V Machchhar looks wary. Ever since his hero nephew, commercial Indian airline pilot Smit Machchhar, was wounded while thwarting a mid-air cockpit attack on a flydubai flight on Wednesday, the crowds outside — both at his house in Ghatkopar and his nephew's house in Chembur — have been swelling.

And as much as he's proud of Smit, the family is now exhausted with the endless stream of visitors.

"We have been hounded by television media since Wednesday evening," Haresh says. "They gathered in large numbers with mics and cameras, without asking us whether we were ready to talk. They started shooting us, taking our photos and streaming us live, and stayed throughout the night. It's been a nuisance. Yes, we're all proud of him, but we're more concerned and worried about his recovery."

Smit, who was serving as the captain of flydubai Flight FZ1073 travelling from Dubai to Tel Aviv with 174 passengers and crew on board, was injured when his co-pilot allegedly attacked and repeatedly stabbed him inside the cockpit mid-flight. Quick to react despite his grievous injury, Smit unlocked the cockpit door, allowing passengers to overpower the co-pilot and safely land the plane. Smit is currently undergoing treatment at a hospital in Dubai.

praise from world leaders — while Prime Minister Narendra Modi hailed his courage and quick thinking as having 'saved us from another 9/11-like incident', Israel's Benjamin Netanyahu called him a "true hero".

Ever since the incident, the stream of well-wishers is unabated — both at Smit's Swastik Heights CHS home in Chembur and his uncle Haresh's home at Arvind, the Prabhita CHS in Ghatkopar. But beyond the media shutters and the chattering crowds is something bigger — fear for Smit's well-being and prayers for his recovery.

Even as crowds gathered outside their home on Thursday morning, Smit's parents, Upendra and Geeta Machchhar, left for Dubai to be with their son.

"We've been in touch with them. Smit's condition is stable now. He has been such a sweet, brave and courageous boy since he was a child. He would always help people around him. He would help older people cross the road even when he was barely 10," says his aunt.

Smit, the son of a retired Gu-jarati businessman who owned a sari-making unit and a home-maker, spent several years in Ghatkopar. And while he now lives in Dubai with his wife and two children — an eight-year-old daughter and a two-year-old son — his parents now live in Chembur.

Smit's cousin is a pilot too, Ashok Makwana, a neighbour of Smit's parents, says. "The family received a call last night from the aviation company, and the entire society learnt about the incident through television news. He keeps visiting his parents whenever he can, and makes sure to come home during festivals," he says.

"To those who know him well, his actions come as no surprise. "Smit has always been like this — fearless and friendly. He wore his heart on his sleeves," his friend and next-door neighbour Akshay Doshi says.

His teachers at Welingkar Institute in Matunga, where Smit studied the Post Graduate Programme in Business Administration in 2007, describe him as diligent. "He was also good when it came to academics. He got A grades, and he attended all his lectures," Pankaj Natu, the institute's director, says, while Shailesh Kale, who taught him marketing management, adds: "We are discussing the possibility of honouring him at the institute. It would send a very positive message to students".

Outside the pilot's house in Chembur, the adoration swells — Chembur corporator Susham Sawant has managed to bring together 100 people, including children, who hold posters with Machchhar's photo and the words "courage, foresight and devotion to duty".

Smit should be honoured for his actions, Sawant says. He's already planning a grand welcome for the hero-pilot. "We want Prime Minister Narendra Modi to award him with one of the country's biggest honours for showing such bravery. Awarding him will motivate more children and the youth to be brave and always help people," he says. "This Diwali is going to be grander for Chembur and Ghatkopar."

Among the crowd is a Class 9 student. "I want to be like Smit when I grow up and save people," he says.

As the news spread, friends and neighbours banded together at Prabhita CHS to help the family avoid media glare and offer some privacy. Among them was Smit's friend Akshay Doshi.

"Aviation had always been Smit's passion. He also has a small institute in Chembur to train youngsters and encourage them to pursue an aviation career," Doshi says. "We're now praying for his speedy recovery."

Mumbai, Pune, October 1

EIGHT STUDENTS from a private coaching institute in Pune drowned after venturing into the sea at Diveagar beach in Raigad district during a picnic on Thursday, with police saying the group had misjudged the tide.

The eight students have been identified as Tanmay Dattatray Wahile, Sumit Bharat Ahire, Pranav Ramdas Bansode, Kaivalya Satish Wasankar, Rajveer Yuvraj Wahile, Yash Kiran Wankhede, Soham Tukaram Bhandwalkar and Kaustubh Sandeep Daund.

In a press note, the district administration said that the group of 48 — 25 boys, 17 girls and six teachers — from Winners Academy in Alandi, Pune, had come to the beach at Dighi Sagari, Diveagar.

"Preliminary information that we have received is that the group had come for a picnic from Pune in a hired bus. They ventured into the sea and had misjudged the tides, due to which they drowned," the Dighi Sagar police said.

Additional superintendent of police, Raigad, Abhijeet Shivthare said, "Police personnel around the spot, water sports personnel and local residents rushed for help. All attempts were made to save the youngsters. They were brought out of the sea and cardiopulmonary resuscitation was performed. But eight students lost their lives in the unfortunate incident. Further investigation is on."

The bodies were taken to the Borti Panchayat PHC where postmortem was on, police said.

"Initial information is that one student drowned, and the others got swept away while trying to save him. A probe is underway to know the exact sequence of events that led to the incident," a police officer said.

Space for library provided in Central Vista plan: Ministry

Express News Service
New Delhi, October 1

WITH THE Central Secretariat Library set to be moved out of its premises in Shastri Bhawan, the Union Ministry of Housing and Urban Affairs on Thursday said that space for the library had been provided in the Central Vista redevelopment plan.

"Contrary to a few reports, it is clarified that space for the Central Secretariat Library has been provided for in the Kartavya Path redevelopment plan. The necessary process for construction of the library is underway," the Ministry said in a post on X.

The Indian Express had reported on Wednesday that the library, which is currently spread over four floors, was facing uncertainty as the MoHUA had only allotted two rooms in Kartavya Bhawan-2 complex. The MoHUA had not responded to requests for comment for the same.

The MoHUA had ordered all Ministries to vacate Shastri Bhawan by the end of September to pave the way for its demolition and redevelopment.

The MoHUA had written to the Culture Ministry, which oversees the library, on January 16 that two rooms had been allotted for the library in Kartavya Bhawan-2. The Culture Ministry wrote back on February 26 that the space allotted was "inadequate to accommodate the full collection and facilities" and that "complete relocation is not feasible."

The library, originally set up as the Imperial Secretariat Library in Kolkata in 1891, was moved to Delhi when the British shifted the capital in 1911. It was moved to North Block after its construction in the 1930s and finally to Shastri Bhawan in 1969. It spans four floors and includes 8.5 lakh books.

ISRO to get a boost for its satellite and space asset tracking with its newest facility in Guwahati

Express News Service
Bengaluru, October 1

THE INDIAN Space Research Organisation (ISRO) will get a boost to its radar and satellite tracking capabilities with a new facility coming up in Chandrapur near Guwahati.

Assam Chief Minister Himanta Biswa Sarma laid the foundation stone of this facility in presence of V Narayanan, ISRO chairman, and other senior space scientists on September 21.

ISRO on Thursday said that the newest facility is being established as part of ISRO's Network for Space Object Tracking and Analysis (NETRA) and will contribute towards improving Space Situational Awareness. This awareness is essential in tracking space assets and protecting it from colliding with space debris. ISRO Telemetry, Tracking and Command Network (ISTRAC) is the nodal agency in setting up this facility equipped with advanced radar technologies. Once operational, the Guwahati-based facility will contribute in improving the ionospheric and atmospheric observations, weather monitoring, for cloud observations and space weather studies.

"The facility will enable scientists to observe and understand important processes in the atmosphere and near-Earth space environment, support improved weather prediction, space-weather assessment, communication and navigation studies and future space mission and application," ISRO said on Thursday. Further, this facility also has wide-scale applications in flash-flood and urban-flood monitoring warnings, improving thunderstorm and lightning nowcasting, guiding aviation services, thereby supporting both regional and national requirements.

Surat Municipal Corporation orders restaurants to install kitchen CCTVs, show live feed to customers

Kamal Saiyed
Surat, October 1

IN RESPONSE to repeated complaints and viral videos exposing unhygienic conditions, the Surat Municipal Corporation (SMC) has ordered all city eateries and restaurants to install CCTV cameras inside their kitchen areas. The regulations require them to display live kitchen footage on screens visible to customers in dining areas.

In recent weeks, several viral videos uploaded by customers revealed outdated vegetables, unhygienic preparation practices, and poor kitchen sanitation across various local outlets.

The civic action was triggered after a customer at Barbeque Nation in Parle Point filmed stale and rotten ingredients in the kitchen. The viral video showed chefs using blackened, rotten potatoes and foul-smelling mushrooms. After the incident, SMC food safety officials conducted a surprise raid at the outlet, collected samples of butter chicken and mixed vegetarian starters for laboratory testing, and issued a notice for non-compliance along with a Rs 10,000 fine.

Surprise raids uncover violations

On Wednesday, the SMC food safety department launched a citywide drive, inspecting 84 restaurants and food outlets. Teams evaluated water quality, sanitation, staff hygiene, and the condition of raw vegetarian and non-vegetarian items.

The drive resulted in inspection notices for 54 establishments, and authorities sent 38 food samples for laboratory analysis.

Authorities seized and disposed of 193.5 kg of stale and unhygienic food and recovered Rs 1.77 lakh in fines in a single day. In a separate raid at the Vaishali vada pav centre in Varachha, officials discovered stones in potatoes used for food preparation and imposed a Rs

5,000 fine.

Under new directives, live CCTV coverage must give diners direct visibility into food preparation standards. SMC Medical Officer Dr Pradeep Umrigar said, "We have directed all restaurant owners and food outlets to comply with the notification by installing kitchen CCTVs and maintaining strict hygiene. Failure to comply will invite strict legal action."

Dr Umrigar urged citizens to report unhygienic conditions by submitting photos or videos to the helpline at 6359930020 for immediate action.

Arun Shetty, president of the Southern Gujarat Hotel and Restaurant Association, welcomed the health department's decision. "We are very much concerned about the quality of food and hygienic conditions given to the customers. We don't want to compromise with the health and safety of customers."

However, Shetty noted that the SMC should consult industry representatives going forward, as many small restaurant owners may struggle with the financial burden of installing video equipment.

He added that the association will share the notification with its members and offered to help with awareness campaigns.

For new energy, remove old bottlenecks

WITH MORE than 300 GW of installed capacity, India ranks third globally in renewable-energy (RE) deployment. But this impressive growth has not always translated into green energy being available when demand is highest, particularly during the evening peak. As this newspaper reported on July 31, transmission constraints and the need to maintain grid security forced operators to curtail a significant amount of solar power-generated electricity during April to June. The Centre's Green Energy Corridor Phase-III scheme tries to address this constraint by strengthening systems in states to evacuate up to 135 GW of renewable energy. The project will also add 50 GWh of battery energy storage.

Renewables, especially solar and wind power, have transformed the country's energy basket, but their variability places new demands on transmission planning and storage. The new scheme is expected to address intermittency during peak hours and meet demand when the Sun is not shining. The emphasis on intra-state networks is particularly significant. Renewable projects are often concentrated in specific regions while demand is spread across cities, industries and rural areas within states. Strengthening the network's last leg is crucial to ensuring that green power actually reaches consumers. The scheme has earmarked Rs 1,36,378 crore for transmission infrastructure. Its implementation will require learning from past experiences, which suggest that challenges are not restricted to drawing investment. A report of the Parliamentary Standing Committee on Energy tabled in Parliament in December last year, for instance, pointed out that issues related to right-of-way compensation — payment to landowners when high-voltage power transmission lines pass near their property — land acquisition and delays in environmental clearances are major hurdles in laying transmission lines.

The other major challenge will be to ensure that the 50 GWh storage component becomes a functioning part of the grid rather than a procurement target. Battery projects need viable business models and incentives — especially because the sector relies on overseas suppliers for critical raw materials — recycling arrangements and clear rules on who can use and pay for storage. The Centre and states will have to work together on planning and implementation. Renewable resources, transmission corridors and electricity demand do not follow administrative boundaries, and — as the parliamentary committee pointed out — fragmented decision-making often delays projects. Going forward, the government needs to give serious thought to the panel's proposal for a portal that brings all approving authorities together for real-time monitoring and faster decision-making. The new corridor could be the backbone of the next phase of India's green energy transition. It will do well to overcome the bottlenecks of the past.

Industry is growing, but isn't creating jobs

INDIA'S FORMAL manufacturing sector continues to chug along at a fairly healthy pace. This is evident across a range of indicators. In 2024-25, the registered manufacturing segment's output grew by 7.8 per cent, employment by 7.2 per cent, and emoluments by 12.08 per cent, according to the Annual Survey of Industries. However, other key indicators also warrant close attention. Wages per worker have grown at a slower pace than net profit, output per worker has remained roughly the same over the years, while invested capital has increased steadily. These developments have had implications for consumption, investment and productivity in the economy.

ASI data shows that total persons engaged in organised manufacturing crossed 2 crore in 2024-25, up from 1.72 crore in 2021-22. But this is only a fraction of the labour force. A substantial share of the labour force is still engaged in the informal economy. In fact, of all non-farm workers in the country, 73.1 per cent are engaged in informal-sector enterprises as per the Periodic Labour Force Survey 2025. The formal sector, both manufacturing and services, simply does not provide enough job opportunities. In 2023-24, while 1.9 crore persons were employed in organised manufacturing, about 3.3 crore were employed in the unorganised segment as per the Economic Survey. Organised manufacturing also continues to be dominated by small firms, whereas, according to the Economic Survey, it's the bigger factories (those employing more than 100 workers) that employ a larger share of workers, pay higher wages and have higher labour productivity.

Successive governments have taken steps to boost the manufacturing sector. But its contribution to GDP and share in employment has barely budged. Manufacturing in India has not emerged as an engine of mass employment, unlike in the development trajectory of Asian economies such as Korea and China. It has not provided avenues for the millions entering the labour force each year, and those wanting to exit the farm sector. And, without such avenues, the low-skilled and unskilled simply have no alternative but to either remain on the farm or engage in gig work. Therein remains India's employment challenge.

The Jane Eyre Beijing doesn't get

CHARLOTTE BRONTË'S Jane Eyre is an unlikely heroine for a state seeking to teach young women a moderate face of feminism and the value of domesticity. Plain, financially constrained, lacking in social capital she might be, but Brontë's heroine wasn't short on self-awareness. She declares, "I can live alone, if self-respect, and circumstances require me so to do. I need not sell my soul to buy bliss."

It is probably this insistence on equality that has lent the novel such appeal in China since it was first introduced in translation in the early 1920s. Now, however, the Chinese state has made it mandatory reading for ninth-grade students, arguably for quite different reasons: Beijing is waging an uphill campaign against plummeting birth and marriage rates. A 19th-century romance, with its promise of true love and a value system oriented towards home and hearth, could work as useful propaganda. In this modernist state re-reading, Eyre is rebellious, but not irredeemably so; independent, but not averse to settling down; outspoken, but unmistakably feminine. She is proof that a woman can have a mind of her own without turning her back on the domestic.

And yet, there are postscripts to this reading. Marriage at the end of Jane Eyre is undergirded by clarity. Eyre walks away from it when staying would have meant becoming lesser, unequal. Only later, with an inheritance of her own and the independence it guarantees, does she return to Rochester. Love becomes, in Brontë's telling, a choice, not a surrender. Perhaps that is the lesson young readers will take away from it.

We have a model investment treaty. And are losing billions because of it

READERS WILL know that my constant preoccupation regarding economic policy is with the following fact: We know, and have known, what the right policy is to follow. Yet, we don't allow the right policy to happen. Among several recent concrete examples are the dire need for domestic deregulation, the revision of the 2016 Model Bilateral Investment Treaty (BIT) and the signing of a trade deal with the US. You have heard all the "excuses" as to why we can't allow the right policy to happen. The world is in flux, so what to do? Unreliable Trump is in control, so what to do? But why are we not acting on policies totally within our control? As a concrete example, what is holding up the formulation and implementation of a new BIT?

This is what should worry us, and it doesn't. Our record of bad or no action has nothing to do with whichever political regime is in power. It has to do with the Deep State, and with the officials who pull the strings on behalf of their political and economic masters. India has been the most obstructionist member of the WTO. With the "Model" BIT, it went on to construct the most obstructionist investment treaty in the world. Two continuing records, and a steady supply of policy band-aids that fool nobody except the apologists and those whose interests are served by India remaining closed and inactive. You might take this as an unfounded allegation, and you could not be more wrong. What follows is explicit documentation. For the full details and the data, readers are referred to my Substack.

It has been 18 months since Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman told Parliament that the Model BIT of 2016 would be revised; in foresight and in hindsight, it really wasn't much of a model. Consider what it demanded. Before going to international arbitration, a foreign investor had to litigate in Indian courts for five years. The rest of the world, those who receive foreign investment and those who send it, asks for a consultation period — typically three to six months — in which the parties try to settle, rather like the cooling-off before a divorce. India asked for 10 times that, in a judicial system where five years does not produce a judgment anyway. Even the judiciary is criticised only cautiously, so as not to run afoul of India's near-unique contempt laws.

The rule never brought any resolution. It only brought inordinate delay. The new treaties since that 2016 black-letter day, with the UAE in 2024 and Israel in 2025, cut the holding period to three years — still six times the norm. The recommendation, by some, is two years. Why don't we ask for the logic, or the reasoning, behind our own recommendations? Where did two years come from? Why not the conventional and reasonable practice that the rest of the world follows — three to six months of consultations?

And what did the 2016 model get us? Exactly what its designers desired. Nine years and six new treaties. In exchange, the FDI network was dismantled, bit by bit. Treaties in force fell from 73 in 2015 to 29 in 2017, 16 in 2019 and just eight by 2021, where the count stayed for another four years. Of the eight survivors, not one covered a significant source

SURJIT S BHALLA

The new treaties since that 2016 black-letter day, with the UAE in 2024 and Israel in 2025, cut the holding period to three years — still six times the norm. Some recommend two years. Why don't we ask for the logic behind our recommendations?

Aid may be dead. Long live international development

AMRITA NARLIKAR

THE NUMBERS are alarming. International aid flows recorded an unprecedented drop by over 23 per cent last year; a continued fall is projected for this year. US President Donald Trump's decision to axe 80-85 per cent of USAID projects and contracts was a trigger, but the cutbacks have also come from other donors due to changing political priorities, fiscal constraints, and domestic discontent. The decline hits some of the poorest and neediest recipients hard, leaving them little scope to find timely alternatives. For some, this transition is proving to be existential; the human costs of this must be acknowledged and addressed. But as we look to the future of international development in a world of aid scarcity, the context needs highlighting.

While recognising the challenges, we must avoid golden-age thinking. Disconnect from people on the ground, and excessive and misguided management by donors, tended to affect even aid packages that came with the best of intentions. Less scrupulous deal-tied aid to other geopolitical goals at the cost of the recipients' strategic autonomy. Aid politics has thus been a fraught affair, and the old architecture was creaking under the weight of legitimacy, efficiency and accountability issues. A fundamental rethink is long overdue for all parties involved. Instead of bemoaning the drying up of aid flows, we should be exploring alternative routes for international development. In that vein, four ideas are outlined below.

First, international development faces a host of challenges. But one source of those challenges — weaponised interdependence, which drives states to redefine priorities, turn inwards, and rearm — also holds a key to enhancing the bargaining power of parts of the Global South. Even as the US, China, the EU and others try to realign and secure their supply chains, developing countries have an opportunity to make use of their critical minerals, ports and other resources to establish new partnerships. If they play their cards right, such partnerships will not be one-sided and extractive. Rather, they will come with technology transfers, infrastructure development, training, job creation, and long-term development. The competition among the major powers strengthens the Global South's bargaining hand.

Second, the worsening crisis of multilateralism hits developing countries hard. Multilateral institutions are useful settings for them to work in coalitions and shape global narratives. Even as great powers throw temper tantrums, developing countries should join forces not just to preserve but to fundamentally revamp multilateral organisations. The opportunity the aid crisis creates can be used proactively, for instance, to make the WTO systematically more development-friendly. Recall that even though developed countries dug in their heels, the Global South inserted and transformed development narratives in the WTO. The now-failed Doha Development Agenda was once a successful example of this; so was the transformation of the "trade not aid" narrative into the "aid for trade" formula. Development faces greater headwinds today. But developing countries should remind themselves of their past successes and join forces again to redirect trade narratives and policies towards an updated development agenda.

Third, there are many bad reasons international aid has ended up where it has today. But among a few of the good reasons some old models of development aid should end up in the dustbin, one is the disregard they showed for questions of deep ecology. One explanation is that they were West-centric, and therefore, also anthropocentric. They were incapable of recognising, let alone incorporating, alternative perspectives and lifestyles from indigenous, Southern civilisations that have honoured the oneness of human, multi-species and planetary well-being. As new approaches try to fill the emerging vacuum of development aid, the Global South can have a constructive, ideational role in producing a paradigm shift.

Finally, a reiteration by the Global South to reform old models of aid through "demand-driven" "bottom-up" approaches will not suffice. More-than-human species cannot speak up for themselves, and there are still far too few humans willing to include their rights to existence and dignity in their own demands. One reason India's leadership of the G20 deserves to be regarded as path-breaking is that it recognised the deeply interconnected nature of all existence, and hence advanced the cause of the well-being of both people and planet. Were theorists and practitioners to take a cue from this approach, we might get a new model of aid that is fit for our times and actually worth saving.

Gandhi's first fight was for the vote

C UDAY BHASKAR

AGAINST THE backdrop of the raging SIR controversy, Gandhi Jayanti is an opportune moment to recall the young lawyer Mohandas Gandhi and his travels in South Africa, where a colonial regime was seeking to deny Indians their vote. His first political battle was not satyagraha but the right to vote. In July 1894, the Natal government proposed to disenfranchise Indians as part of colonial policy. In his petition to Lord Ripon, Secretary of State for the Colonies, Gandhi wrote that an Indian without the vote would lose "self-respect, to remain in the Colony". A year later, he warned that the consequences of disenfranchisement were "too dreadful to contemplate".

That fight, in a colony, became his template for India and what he envisioned for the free Indian citizen. In the decades preceding 1947, many in Congress and in Whitehall argued that India was too illiterate, caste-ridden and diverse for adult franchise. Gandhi opposed this unequivocally. In Young India and Harjan through the 1920s, he argued that universal adult franchise must be the basis from day one, for it compels the powerful to listen. At the 1931 Round Table Conference, he demanded it without qualification, for men and women, rich and poor, literate and illiterate, irrespective of faith and caste. There, he recounted from personal experience how voters' lists could be manipulated. In September 1896 in Durban, Mohandas Gandhi found his name on an electoral roll even though he had not applied. A candidate, knowing a few Indians had the vote, had included Gandhi's name without his knowledge to secure his support. Recalling this 35 years later, he said, "Since then, I have known how voters' lists are prepared."

Elections in free India have been plagued by money and muscle power, but never have so many citizens been disenfranchised en masse as by the SIR, tainting the moral sheen that gives equal weight to each voice in the democratic template. Why recall this on October 2? India adopted universal adult franchise at the Republic's founding in 1950, when even European democracies were hesitant to give women the vote. It was Gandhi's idea and resolve that later became the law. Today, the SIR has made a mockery of the sanctity of the citizen and the vote.

If rolls are revised in an illegal manner that contracts rather than expands voter lists, this is a repeat of what Natal did in 1894, using venal procedure to narrow the voter base and shrink their rights. On Gandhi Jayanti, those part of the administrative machinery steering the SIR, all sworn to abide by the Constitution, must abide by the Gandhian counsel and the three tests. First, does a revision increase citizen self-respect or diminish it? Second, is the roll prepared impartially or with the "favourable prospects of victory of a particular candidate" in mind, the very manipulation Gandhi saw in 1896? Third, is the vote being treated as a right to be protected or a privilege to be granted?

Voter erasure of this scale is not a technical error. It is selective "civicide" (destruction of citizen rights) leading to "disfranchiside" (intentional mass disenfranchisement). As Gandhi wrote in 1894, an election is not an event but the constitutional guarantee that the weakest still counts. On his birthday, this is the Gandhi India must remember — not just the man with a staff, but the young lawyer who understood that a name on a list is a right, and a name struck off is state-endorsed turpitude.

Can a global governance architecture for AI work without Beijing at the table?

Regulation needs China on board

SUBIMAL BHATTACHARJEE

THE LAST fortnight has exposed fault lines in the global debate on AI. At the UN Security Council, Anthropic's Dario Amodei warned that, if managed poorly, AI could pose a risk to humanity as a whole, while OpenAI's Sam Altman cautioned that humanity could lose control of its future. Rarely does an industry seek its own regulation. Yet in the same chamber, Michael Kratsios, the US President's science and technology advisor, rejected any centralised international control of AI.

Days later, President Donald Trump hosted technology chiefs at the White House and unveiled a voluntary accord. Companies pledged internal model monitoring, a team to verify it, outside auditors and independent board oversight. Trump called the pledges "morally binding". Self-regulation is now American doctrine.

Paradoxically, Washington has simultaneously opened a channel to Beijing. After the Trump-Xi summit, both agreed on an AI incident communication mechanism, with a dedicated dialogue due in November. Middle powers have moved further. Twenty countries and the EU, including Germany, South Africa, Canada, Australia, the UAE and Singapore, called for keeping AI under human control, possibly through a global oversight body. Tellingly, neither the US nor China signed; nor did India.

Four models now compete. The EU offers binding, risk-tiered legislation. America favours market-led voluntarism. China practises state-directed, sector-specific control. A loose international layer of OECD principles, UNESCO recommendations, summit declarations and a UN scientific panel supplies vocabulary without obligation. None suffices alone.

The history of cyber governance is instructive. The UN Group of Governmental Experts (GGE), first convened in 2004, spent a decade establishing that international law applies to cyberspace. Its 2015 report produced 11 voluntary norms of responsible state behaviour. States should not knowingly allow their territory to be used for wrongful ICT acts, should not attack critical infrastructure or emergency response teams, should cooperate on requests for assistance, and should responsibly report vulnerabilities. The General Assembly endorsed them.

After the 2016-17 GGE deadlocked over self-defence and international humanitarian law, the General Assembly in 2018 created two tracks: A Russian-sponsored Open-Ended Working Group (OEWG) open to all members and a US-backed GGE. Both reaffirmed the 11 norms in 2021. A permanent UN mechanism has since succeeded the OEWG, still non-binding.

Two lessons follow. First, consensus norms are achievable only when the principal adversaries sit at the table. Second, a decade-long, consensus-driven process cannot keep pace with a technology whose capabilities shift every few months.

What would suit AI is a layered architecture rather than a single treaty: Binding national law where frontier laboratories operate; internationally agreed capability thresholds that trigger pre-deployment testing; mandatory cross-border incident reporting; an IPCC-style scientific body to establish shared facts; and, for the most capable systems alone, an IAEA-type verification regime anchored in compute monitoring. The 20-nation proposal approximates this.

However, such a regime cannot succeed without China, the only country besides America with genuine frontier capability. Its open-weight models already power applications across Asia, Africa and Latin America, placing them beyond any regime that governs only Western developers. Beijing's approach is equally consequential. Domestically, it regulates tightly through algorithm registries, generative AI rules and mandatory labelling of synthetic content. Internationally, it presents AI as a development right, champions UN-centred governance and has proposed a world AI cooperation organisation, an offer many developing countries find attractive. A regime excluding Beijing would become a Western club, inviting a parallel Chinese bloc of standards. The nascent US-China incident channel is the minimum foundation; it must eventually extend into multi-lateral confidence-building. The middle powers must build an architecture both giants can later join.

India's prudent course is to join any open framework, while conditioning oversight on equitable access to compute and models. It should use the credibility of hosting the AI Impact Summit and serving on cyber GGEs to bridge frontier powers and the Global South. It must strengthen its AI Safety Institute so that Indian evaluators shape testing regimes. And it should seek a seat in any incident-reporting framework, since harms originating elsewhere will land in Indian markets.

The cyber precedent shows that norms without enforcement still matter: They build habits of consultation and a common language. AI may not grant the world a decade to learn. Rule-making must be swift and inclusive.

SMRITI PARSHEERA

THE CHORUS for AI governance is growing stronger, though not everyone is singing the same tune. Senior executives from companies such as Anthropic, OpenAI, and Google DeepMind have been rallying for "pacing the frontier" — an internationally coordinated effort to recalibrate AI's tempo for better risk management. Meanwhile, civil society organisations would like to see a global moratorium on the development and sale of frontier AI models until binding safeguards are put in place.

On Tuesday, leading US AI companies gathered at the White House to sign a new Accord on Super Intelligence, which takes a considerably softer, voluntary approach. The "morally binding" accord speaks of building robust internal controls, independent external evaluation, and oversight by an independent committee of the company's board. However, the actual standards and enforcement mechanisms are not specified, affording significant discretion to the participating companies.

This comes in response to multiple incidents of unauthorised and deceptive behaviour exhibited by frontier AI agents. AI-related risks were also prominently discussed during the recent UN General Assembly. Finland and Norway initiated an international effort, now endorsed by 28 countries, through "A Call for Control of Frontier AI Models". The signatories are seeking coordinated international action on the governance of frontier AI. Their three-step agenda includes mandatory pre-deployment testing and independent evaluation for AI companies, common incident reporting standards, and an institutional mechanism to enable standard-setting and verification.

These are significant proposals, but their path to implementation remains unclear.

Notably, neither the US nor China, the two nations at the forefront of the geopolitical dynamics of frontier AI, joined the international call. The US continues to emphasise permissionless innovation, with expectations of responsible conduct by AI companies as its preferred approach. It has also been emphatic in rejecting any "globalist scheme of control for superintelligence" at the UN level or otherwise. China, in contrast, has maintained that it respects the UN's role as the main channel for global AI governance but remains wary of what it labels as Western-centric agendas.

In July this year, Beijing initiated an alternative institutional path for global AI governance through the World Artificial Intelligence Cooperation Organisation (WAICO). Twenty-nine countries became founding members of the Shanghai-headquartered organisation. Its functions will include promoting "supply-demand matching" of AI, standard setting, and international convergence on global AI governance.

WAICO's membership is open to any interested country. Some commentators have contrasted this with the liberal-democratic and rule-of-law assumptions associated with other AI initiatives, such as the Global Partnership on Artificial Intelligence and the G7 Hiroshima Process. As an intergovernmental organisation, WAICO could also serve as a site for formal consensus-building that goes beyond the soft-law-centric approaches in other forums. Yet, its positioning as a China-led initiative could limit the practical expansion of WAICO's footprint outside the Global South.

In a positive development, the US and China recently opened the door for a bilateral dialogue to debate the risks and benefits of advanced AI. But a broader consensus on AI governance remains elusive. That, however, cannot be a reason for inaction by the rest of the world. Neither should it become an excuse to allow the tech industry to play an outsized role in defining what constitutes a suitable mode of governance. However, the latest White House accord places the ball firmly in the industry's court.

Given these realities, where should India locate itself in the global AI governance debate? As a country that is admittedly not at the forefront of frontier AI but is seeing extensive deployment of such models, India has a direct interest in risk-mitigation and accountability safeguards for frontier AI. Its positioning on digital sovereignty also supports a claim to greater representation and agency in defining the rules of the game. This serves as a rational basis for India to lend its support to the Finland-Norway proposal.

Finally, the hype around frontier AI should not drown out the more immediate needs of robust AI governance in the country. Rather than waiting for the catastrophic risks and possibilities of artificial general intelligence that may arise in future, we need impactful legal and institutional safeguards to govern the AI systems that are already embedded in everyday life.

SIGNAL TO NOISE

BY RAJEEV CHANDRASEKHAR

FOR THE first time in history, technology is not one factor among many driving economic growth. It is the foundation on which all other progress is being built. India's semiconductor and AI choices in the next three years will determine if it can become a principal player in the economy of this century.

Taiwan is indispensable to the world economy because it has mastered semiconductor fabrication. South Korea's KOSPI returned 72 per cent in 2025, driven by Samsung and SK Hynix riding the AI chip supercycle. China has deployed an estimated $150 billion towards semiconductor self-sufficiency since 2015. The US passed the CHIPS Act — a $53 billion direct subsidy, catalysing $450 billion in private investment.

India has two of the three ingredients for technological greatness: Demographic scale and intellectual capital. Our engineers and scientists are at the forefront of global AI and semiconductor development.

India has historically underinvested in technological sovereignty. The risk is sharpening fast. The US government's moves restricting access to certain AI models were a clear signal that technological denial is part of the geopolitical toolkit. An India that does not build its capability will find itself on the wrong side of that divide permanently.

India Semiconductor Mission, Design Linked Incentive (DLI), and India AI Mission are the right first moves. I was part of the team that built them under PM Narendra Modi's leadership. But first moves are not destinations. The question is whether India will now make the second, smarter set of moves that turn these foundations into genuine technological momentum.

At SEMICON India 2026, the numbers looked impressive: Twelve manufacturing units approved, Rs 1.64 lakh crore in committed investment, five facilities in production. ISM 2.0 followed with a further Rs 1.275 lakh crore. But behind the momentum sits a structural problem that must be named: Nine of those 12 approved units are conventional ATMP/OSAT facilities — wire-bond assembly, testing, marking, and packaging. They are in the lowest-margin, most substitutable, most technologically dated segment of the value chain.

Understanding the structural problem is important. The electronics PLI worked on China+1 logic: Apple and Samsung needed to diversify their manufacturing bases, PLI incentives closed the cost gap, and India delivered. India now assembles 25-28 per cent of all iPhones globally. This is one of PM Modi's most impactful industrial policy achievements.

But semiconductor makers are not experiencing supply-chain diversification. They are experiencing an architectural revolution. Nvidia's data centre revenue went from $3 billion in 2020 to $47 billion in 2024. The AI era is creating a new level of abstraction in compute and value. In this environment, the opportunity ranges between 6 per cent gross margins on commodity wire-bond packaging and 50-70 per cent gross margins on IP-owning chip design.

Conventional wire-bond packaging is facing relentless margin compression. Advanced packaging — CoWoS integration of GPUs and memory — commands 25-35 per cent margins. ISM 2.0 must take us there.

The strategy of investment is critical: Directed at design IP, research institutions, and fab capability. India has no dedicated semiconductor research institution with the required depth. A National Semiconductor Research Institute — co-invested by government and industry, mandated to develop process technology, design IP, and the talent pipeline — was part of ISM 1.0's vision. It must not be delayed further.

The AI revolution has split the semiconductor market in two. Training AI — building the models — is consolidating around Nvidia's CUDA ecosystem and custom ASICs from hyperscalers. That market is effectively closed.

Inference is wide open. The diversity of inference requirements across cloud, edge, device, defence, agriculture, and industrial applications is so large that no single architecture can dominate. Purpose-built inference chips command 50-70 per cent gross margins. India has 1,25,000 chip design engineers qualified to build them. India's DIR-V programme on RISC-V open-source cores eliminates ARM licensing costs. India AI's sovereign compute programme, defence procurement, 5G infrastructure, and a billion-user domestic market provide ready demand anchors.

What is missing is capital that funds Indian fabless companies all the way to commercial tape-out, not just prototypes. DLI must be expanded. ISM 2.0 should create a Chip Design Commercialisation Fund at Rs 1,000-crore scale modelled on NIIF — and designate at least two sovereign AI inference chip programmes with guaranteed government offtake. Those two changes, delivered in the next budget, would do more for India's semiconductor future than more wire-bond packaging projects.

I was part of the team that built the India Semiconductor Mission, DLI, and India AI because I believe that India's economic future in the AI age depends on building this capability. But the path of least resistance in industrial policy is to approve what can be approved quickly and measure success by investment commitments rather than by the strategic position those investments create. India has the talent, domestic demand, and a PM with the vision to back these goals. What it needs now is a direct national strategy toward design and architecture.

For decades, India has missed or been a distant player in major economic and industrial supercycles. This supercycle, we do not intend to miss. The countries that write the story of this century will be those that design the chips the world runs on. India has every capability to be among them.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Pilot hero

DESPITE SUFFERING serious knife injuries and bleeding heavily, the Indian captain, Smit Machchhar, displayed remarkable courage, presence of mind and a strong sense of responsibility ('Mid-air scare', IE, October 1). Reports say that he managed to open the cockpit door, enabling crew members and passengers to enter and overpower the attacker. Other pilots who happened to be on board then helped stabilise the aircraft and bring it safely to the ground. The incident has shocked people around the world. Captain Machchhar's courage, determination and devotion to his duty, even while grievously injured, deserve our deepest admiration. Our thoughts and prayers are with Captain Machchhar and his family at this difficult time. We pray for his speedy and complete recovery. We must commend the crew, the additional pilots on board and the passengers who rose to the occasion in an extraordinary emergency and helped ensure everyone's safety.

Spirit of Bandung

AS MA Baby notes, the relevance of Bandung lies in its emphasis on sovereignty, equality and cooperation among nations; I agree that these principles remain pertinent to BRICS as it expands and accommodates countries with diverse interests ('In aftermath of BRICS, going back to Bandung', IE, October 1). Building on this idea, India can help ensure that differences within the grouping do not overshadow areas of practical cooperation. Trade, investment, resilient supply chains, digital payments, technology, energy security, and development offer considerable scope to advance shared interests. The Bandung spirit can also be reflected in an approach that respects member states' independent choices while encouraging dialogue on issues affecting the wider Global South. India's strategic autonomy, therefore, can be complemented by constructive engagement rather than alignment with competing geopolitical positions.

E.P. UNNY

WHENEVER THERE is an official crack-down on Indian cartoons, as has just happened to the work of Satish Acharya and Manjul, a Nehruvian contrast is cited. A high point from where the state's tolerance has slid. The good old days when PM Jawaharlal Nehru walked across to inaugurate his good friend Shankar's weekly are dutifully recounted. The citation no longer shames the authorities into course-correcting.

In any case, nothing Nehruvian would cut much ice with the dispensation running the country for over a decade. But it cannot ignore a Gandhian factoid: Bapu had a bigger involvement with cartoons than Nehru. In the global phase of his career, the barrister from Gujarat edited Indian Opinion from Johannesburg. He ran cartoons reproduced from the English press and displayed them big with captions translated into Hindi and Gujarati.

The cartoon, a mirror and the Mahatma

Editor Gandhi asked readers to suggest a Gujarati translation for the word "cartoon". Perhaps he did not insist because, like "cinema", soon the C word for the funny picture became part of all Indian languages. Dravidian politicians were the first to harness the power of cinema in the 1950s. In 1966, Bal Thackeray put the cartoon to lethal use in launching his own regional party. Both grabbed the evident one-sided propagandist potential of the visual image, moving or still. Cinema was used to build political heroes and the cartoon to demonise political rivals. Gandhi instead delved into the very DNA of the cartoon, its core strength to subvert. He reprinted British news cartoonists, practitioners lauded in the imperial press. He knew they were unwittingly echoing him, asking why the burdened colonial White man wasn't exactly following the civilisational values he swears by.

Gandhi found in the cartoon the mirror to the political language he was perfecting. A basic language that shared a common ethics and sustained conversation. The news cartoon had both. Cartoonists spoke clearly in terms of right and wrong. And it was a serial art practice meant to be read day after day on the same page in the same publication. It fitted with the Gandhian practice of protesting, persuading and persisting with an argument. Leader of a gradualist non-revolutionary movement, Gandhi had to constantly negotiate and buy time.

Back in India, Gandhi quickly lost this luxury of harnessing the cartoon as an activist outsider. He soon became the country's biggest newsmaker and a prime target of the day's cartoon. Here he pulled off the biggest coup known in cartooning history. He transformed himself into the simplest possible form any cub cartoonist could get and a veteran like Ranga would eventually iconise into a single flowing line. The first stirrings of this cartoon-friendly makeover happened in September, 1921, at the Madurai AICC. The barristers shed suit and boot, shaved his head, and switched to Khadi. A decade later, his absence or presence at the Round Table conferences was lapped up by Western cartoonists from Emery Kelen to David Low. America's Daniel Fitzpatrick drew him as an ethereal apparition representing passive resistance. Not one of these unsparing faultfinders could find anything in his politics that was at odds with the image.

On home turf, cartoonist Shankar struggled with the man Sarojini Naidu called Mickey Mouse. How do you frame the 5'5" Gandhi along with British viceroys, some of them like Linlithgow a good one foot taller? Shankar elongated Bapu and often made him stand clearly taller than the Britisher who was shown squatting awkwardly.

If we ban and bury a work practice so central to our history, how do we retell these stories?

FRESH REVOLT IN TATA TRUSTS

Srinivasan, Singh oppose Tata Sons revamp proposal

George Mathew

Mumbai, October 1

THE TATA Trusts' proposal to restructure Tata Sons to evade listing has triggered a rift within the trusts, with two senior trustees questioning why the decision was taken without consulting all members of the trusts.

Venu Srinivasan and Vijay Singh, vice-chairmen and trustees of Sir Dorab Tata Trust (SDTT), have objected to the September 28 communication of Tata Trusts seeking the Tata Sons board's approval for a strategic reorganisation involving the merger of Tata Electronics Systems Solutions and Tata Consulting Engineers with Tata Sons. Srinivasan and Singh said the proposed reorganisation may have serious financial consequences for Tata Sons, SDTT and other stakeholders.

"These include the group companies, employees and regulators affected by an amalgamation and a change in Tata Sons' regulatory status," they said in a letter to the trustees of SDTT. The two trustees said they were surprised to learn about the proposal and the accompanying public announcement from "public sources", alleging that no meeting of SDTT was held and that they were not consulted before the communication was issued in the trust's name.

They have also questioned the manner in which the proposal seeks to direct the Tata Sons board to "consider and approve" the restructuring, arguing that a decision of such legal, regulatory, financial and commercial significance should be independently evaluated by the company's board.

"Going by the tone of the September 17 meeting and the latest letter from two trustees, Tata Sons directors are likely to oppose it. Even if the board agrees, the RBI will have to be convinced," said an observer tracking the Tata group.

Venu Srinivasan is also on the board of Tata Sons. "To our knowledge, no meeting of the trustees of SDTT was held to discuss or deliberate on this issue before the letter was sent to Tata Sons. We were not consulted, and are not aware that the other trustees were consulted either. It is accordingly unclear whether the letter and the proposal it sets out have the support of all the trustees of SDTT," Srinivasan and Singh said in the letter.

Tata Trusts reject allegations as 'untenable'

Mumbai: Tata Trusts on Thursday denied allegations made by trustees Venu Srinivasan and Vijay Singh against Sir Dorabji Tata Trust (SDTT), even as it filed caveats with the Charity Commissioner seeking to be heard before any order is passed.

"While it is reported in the media that Venu Srinivasan and Vijay Singh have filed complaint against SDTT with the Charity Commissioner, SDTT has not been served with a copy of any complaint filed by them. If the media reports regarding this is correct, then the assertions as reported in the media are denied in their entirety as untenable," said a Tata Trusts spokesperson. ENS

How a merger plan could help Tata Sons skip listing

George Mathew

Mumbai, October 1

THE PROPOSED merger of Tata Electronics Systems Solutions (TESS) and Tata Consulting Engineers (TCE) with Tata Sons could fundamentally alter the character of Tata Sons, reducing the proportion of its assets and income represented by financial and investment activities.

Tata Trusts argue that this proposal will enable Tata Sons to come out of the Reserve Bank of India's (RBI) regulatory definition of an NBFC or a core investment company (CIC) and avoid listing on stock exchanges. The proposed merger therefore brings a large and rapidly expanding manufacturing business into Tata Sons, substantially strengthening the operating-company component of its balance sheet. However, the big question is whether the Tata Sons board and the RBI will approve the merger proposal.

Will Tata Sons board agree?

Given the power struggle in the group, the million-dollar question is: will the board of Tata Sons agree to the proposal of Tata Trusts?

The board, in a 4:1 majority decision, agreed to take steps to go for listing as mandated by the RBI at its meeting on September 17. Four directors — Harish Manwani, Anita M George, Venu Srinivasan and Saurabh Agrawal — okayed the listing process. Only Noel Tata opposed the plan. "Tata Sons board may meet and take a decision on the latest proposal. Going by the tone of the September 17 meeting, they are likely to oppose it. Even if the board agrees, the RBI will have to be convinced," said an observer tracking the Tata group.

The second question is whether the RBI will agree to the reorganisation plan of the trusts. The regulatory issue confronting Tata Sons stems from its classification by the RBI as an upper-layer NBFC. The company had sought deregistration from the NBFC framework, but the RBI rejected the request.

Tata Sons now functions primarily as the principal holding company of the Tata Group, with significant investments in several group companies. Tata Sons is also facing several if's and but's: the AGM nod for Chairman N Chandrasekaran, the status of the AGM itself, and the removal of a restraining order on Sir Ratan Tata Trust. However, the restructuring by itself does not automatically guarantee that Tata Sons will cease to be an NBFC or CIC and whether the RBI will approve it or not.

The final outcome would depend on the precise structure of the transactions, the post-merger business composition, and how the RBI applies the relevant regulatory criteria to the restructured entity, and whether the Tata Sons board gives green signal.

Make it less of an investment company

By bringing Tata Electronics and TCE into Tata Sons through a merger, the group would convert a portion of the holding company's investment exposure into direct operating businesses. That distinction is important under the regulatory framework governing NBFCs and CICs. A CIC is essentially an entity whose principal business is the acquisition of shares and securities of group companies, subject to the RBI's regulatory criteria. The proposed restructuring appears designed to change the nature and composition of Tata Sons so that it is no longer principally an investment-holding vehicle.

In simple terms, the strategy is to make Tata Sons more of an operating company and less of an investment company. The merger would potentially achieve this in two ways.

First, Tata Electronics would bring a large manufacturing and semiconductor business directly into Tata Sons. Second, TCE would add an established engineering and consultancy operation with substantial revenues of its own. If, after the restructuring, Tata Sons no longer satisfies the regulatory conditions for classification as a CIC or NBFC, the basis for the mandatory listing requirement could also change. The proposed structure is therefore aimed not merely at reorganising group assets, but at changing the regulatory character of Tata Sons itself.

Thus, instead of Tata Sons remaining primarily a holding company with large investments in Tata group companies, it would directly own and operate major businesses such as Tata Electronics and TCE.

Mkt falls for 8th straight week, worst run in 25 yrs

Akash Mandal

Mumbai, October 1

THE INDIAN stock market fell around 1% on Thursday under heavy selling pressure as foreign investors continued to pull funds and elevated crude oil prices and bond yields kept any optimism in check. With these, both benchmark indices have now ended in red for eight straight weeks—the longest such losing streak in 25 years.

The Indian markets will be shut today on the occasion of Gandhi Jayanti.

On Thursday, Sensex index had opened the session relatively muted but started inching downwards from noon to fall over 1.5% at its lowest. However, it recovered some of its losses after that to eventually end 570.59 points or 0.8% lower at 71,909.70. The Nifty 50 index shed 0.9% to close at 22,421.95. The sharp fall midway had wiped out around Rs 9 lakh crore in investor wealth in about an hour.

The India VIX index, which indicates market volatility, climbed 7% to an over three-month high.

Automobile stocks were among the worst performers during the day and were a key factor for the sharp fall of the benchmark indices midway as auto sales for September failed to meet market expectations. Bajaj Auto tanked around 8%, Mahindra & Mahindra fell 3% to a 52-week low. Maruti Suzuki India also shed around 5% to fall to a 52-week low.

Barring IT, all other sectoral and broader market indices ended deep in red. The Nifty IT bucked the trend and gained 2%, with the likes of Mphasis, Coforge, and Infosys adding around 4%.

"The key takeaway for October is that domestic fundamentals alone may not be sufficient to drive a sustained recovery while global liquidity remains tight," said Vikram Kasat, chief business officer for advisory and dealing at PL Capital.

Flydubai case: India to review aviation security

New Delhi: Indian civil aviation authorities will hold "internal deliberations" and decide whether there is a need to issue an aviation security-related advisory in the wake of the Flydubai incident, according to a senior official. In a major security incident, a co-pilot of a Flydubai flight en-route to Tel Aviv tried to crash the aircraft on Wednesday, but it was thwarted. PTI

GST mop-up grows by 15% in September

New Delhi: Gross GST collections rose 14.7% in September to over Rs 2.03 lakh crore, aided by domestic consump-

FinMin sees 7.3% GDP growth in Q2FY27

Siddharth Upasani

New Delhi, October 1

THE MINISTRY of Finance is projecting a GDP growth rate of 7.3% in the July-September quarter, far higher than the 6.4% forecast by the Reserve Bank of India (RBI).

"Growth momentum has extended into Q2 FY27, though at a more measured pace," the finance ministry said in its Monthly Economic Review report for September, released on Thursday. "Our nowcasting measure, unveiled in the Economic Survey earlier this year, anticipates a real GDP growth rate of 7.3% in the fiscal second quarter," it added.

GDP data for July-September will be released by the statistics ministry on November 30.

Nowcasting is a type of forecasting method that uses very recent data to constantly update predictions for the immediate future. In this regard, the RBI's forecast of 6.4% was made on August 5, well before statistics ministry data showed on August 31 that GDP growth in the April-June quarter came in at an unexpectedly high 7.8%. This was well above the central bank's forecast of 7%. The RBI's Monetary Policy Committee is set to meet next week and announce its interest rate decision on October 7 — it is increasingly seen raising interest

Manufacturing PMI hits 7-month high in Sep on strong demand

New Delhi: India's manufacturing sector activity growth touched a seven-month high in September, boosted by accelerating new orders and output that fuelled solid expansion in factory hiring, a monthly survey reported on Thursday.

Indian manufacturing activity regained its upward momentum in September, driven by strong domestic and export demand. Moreover, business optimism reached a four-month peak. The seasonally-adjusted HSBC India Manufacturing Purchasing Managers' Index (PMI) rose by more than two index points in September, to 55.1 from 52.8 in August, signalling the strongest improvement in the health of the sector for seven months. In the PMI, a print above 50 means expansion, while a score below 50 denotes contraction. PTI rates by 25 basis points to 5.5% — when the central bank will also update its economic projections, including those for growth and inflation. Currently, it expects GDP growth to average 6.7% in 2026-27.

With India's growth exceeding expectations for some time now, numerous economists and organisations have raised their forecasts in light of the rapid April-June figure of 7.8%.

On September 23, four international agencies — S&P Global Ratings, Fitch Ratings, the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), and the Asian Development Bank (ADB) — hiked their growth forecast for the current fiscal by 40-80 bps to 6.9-7.1%. However, the finance ministry warned on Thursday that India "cannot afford to rest on its post-Covid growth laurels" due to the geopolitical and geo-economic uncertainty that plagues the world. "It has to be earned every quarter. That is the challenge for policymakers," the report said.

Noting that global conditions have "turned unfavourable again", the finance ministry report said that surging oil prices, rising global bond yields, "unsettled" trade relations with the US, and the AI bubble having "not begun its inevitable meaningful deflation" mean that India, and other developing nations, "faces a stiff challenge to attract capital flows".

"Indications are, however, that foreign direct investment inflows, on a net basis, should do better this financial year than last. Thus, short-term pressure on Indian assets, including the currency, remains," it further said. "Over time, as some of these clouds inevitably dissipate, India's intrinsic growth potential will earn the attention it deserves from investors," it said, adding that the country must keep working to become more competition-friendly, rather than business-friendly, as only a competitive economy will become a successful, innovative, and manufacturing economy.

"Improved governance and enhanced state capacity at all levels of the government hold the key to a competitive Indian economy." Despite its rapid growth, the Indian economy has been facing pressures on the external front, with the exit of foreign capital from domestic financial markets and subdued FDI inflows over the last couple of years exerting pressure on the rupee. The rupee is current trading at 95.98, lifted slightly by the RBI's concessional swap windows drawing $133 billion as Foreign Currency Non-Resident (Bank) deposits in just three months.

ISRAEL PM SAYS OMANI CO-PILOT UNDERWENT ISLAMIST INDOCTRINATION; SAUDI SAYS SUSPECT HANDED OVER TO UAE

Trump talks of Iran link, Netanyahu says flydubai co-pilot was radicalised

Reuters
Washington, October 1

US PRESIDENT Donald Trump said Iran may be linked to the flydubai co-pilot who tried to crash an Israel-bound plane.

The President was asked Thursday by reporters at the White House whether he had been briefed about any links between the pilot behind attack and Tehran. He said, "We're working on it right now...I would say the answer, based on what I'm hearing, is yes, but we're working on it right now," Trump said. He did not offer details. Asked if the US would retaliate against Tehran if it was behind attack, Trump said, "Oh they'll be hit, very hard, don't worry."

In a late development, Saudi Arabia said suspect in flydubai plane attack has been handed over to the UAE.

The co-pilot had undergone radical Islamist indoctrination and was clearly suicidal, Israel's Prime Minister said on Thursday. Disaster was averted on Wednesday's flydubai flight FZ1073 from Dubai to Tel Aviv after the wounded captain, Smit Machchhar, managed to unlock the cockpit door, allowing passengers to subdue the attacker. A reserve crew that had been aboard landed the plane, which had over 170 people on board, at Tabuk airport in Saudi Arabia.

"We know that he underwent Islamist radical indoctrination. That appears to be something we are gathering from his personal information," Israeli PM Benjamin Netanyahu said in an interview with Fox News.

Two Israeli security officials said Israel's initial assessment was that the co-pilot, identified by Israel as an Omani national, was likely acting alone, though the probe was still ongoing.

Netanyahu said it was clear that the co-pilot was suicidal. "It looks very likely that he was going to down the plane," Netanyahu said. Coupled with "the Islamist tendencies, that radicalization that are found in his background, I think that's ... a pretty good clue," he said.

The United Arab Emirates has started investigations seeking to establish the circumstances and motives and determine "whether the incident was linked to any terrorist activity or purpose, or involved prior planning or direction", the UAE state news agency reported Thursday.

An Israeli official said Tel Aviv was not receiving all the information it sought from the Saudis and the Israeli intelligence services, Mossad and Shin Bet, were probing the incident.

The Saudi government's media office did not respond to a request for comment, and Saudi Arabia has issued no statements on its investigations. Omani authorities have not commented.

Why co-pilot attacked captain remains a mystery, investigators search for motive Jerusalem: Investigators worked Thursday to determine why the Omani pilot stabbed the captain of a flight to Israel, causing the plane to plummet before others aboard landed it in Saudi Arabia.

"We felt helpless, suspended in midair, and I didn't know who to turn to. But it was all instinct to survive," Asaf Rajuan, who was among those who intervened, said. A regional official said the suspect, an Omani citizen, was under arrest and confirmed that Saudi authorities were working with countries, including Israel, to try to determine a motive.

He said the UAE, the US and Oman also were involved. "All possible scenarios, from terrorism to mental disorders, are being looked into. Nothing is ruled out for now," said official.

Israel Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu told a TV channel the suspect apparently got through a loophole in Israeli aviation rules that normally bar pilots from flying to Israel if they are from countries that do not have diplomatic relations with Israel — which Oman does not.

The co-pilot has not been publicly identified. Video shot inside the plane by Dr Shota Musayev, a dentist who treated Captain Smit Machchhar, shows the co-pilot on his knees, with his hands tied behind his back.

It was not clear what the co-pilot used as a weapon. Israeli intelligence officials were in Saudi Arabia to help probe the copilot, another regional official said. AP

A 'true hero': Israel President, PM, Speaker hail Captain Machchhar

Press Trust of India
Jerusalem, October 1

ISRAELI LEADERS have hailed Captain Smit Machchhar as a "hero" for thwarting an alleged attempt by his co-pilot to crash a flydubai flight carrying nearly 180 people, and wished him a speedy recovery.

"Despite being stabbed and seriously injured, he fought back, resisted, opened the cockpit door, and enabled passengers and crew to overpower the attacker - preventing a catastrophic mid-air disaster," Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said in a statement, hailing him as a "true hero".

"My salute to the Indian pilot Captain Smit Machchhar for his extraordinary bravery," Netanyahu said. Israeli President Isaac Herzog thanked Machchhar, who, he said, "with his last strength, opened the cockpit door and enabled the neutralisation of the terrorist".

"To Captain Smith Machchhar — thank you from the bottom of my heart for the bravery, determination, and actions that saved many lives. I wish you a full recovery and strong health. The State of Israel extends immense gratitude to you," he said.

Captain Smit Machchhar

Israel's Foreign Ministry called Machchhar a "hero" and hailed the collective efforts of the Indian pilot, Israeli passengers and Emirati crew in saving those onboard. "Captain Smit Machchhar... fought back after being stabbed in the cockpit. Despite being severely injured, he managed to unlock the cockpit door, allowing Israeli passengers and the Emirati crew to intervene and save all the passengers," it said in a statement.

"Together, their extraordinary courage saved 174 lives. Indian. Israeli. Emirati. Different nationalities. One extraordinary act of courage. We wish Captain Machchhar a full and speedy recovery," it added.

In videos circulating on social media, the pilot could be seen drenched in blood, wearing an oxygen mask and lying on his back in the galley of the aircraft.

Israeli Knesset Speaker Amir Ohana said the people of Israel are praying for Captain Machchhar. "In a moment of terror, he showed extraordinary courage. Today, our hearts are with him and his family," he said on X.

Israel's Ambassador to the UN Danny Danon described Machchhar as a "true hero" for fighting back despite his injuries.

Israeli politician Almog Cohen also praised Machchhar, calling him Israel's "hero of the day" and saying country owes him a "tremendous debt of gratitude". Cohen said he would propose naming a lounge at Ben Gurion Airport after Machchhar when Knesset convenes. He also wished the Indian pilot a "full and speedy recovery."

Putin warns West, says world living through a dangerous moment

Moscow: President Vladimir Putin said Thursday the world was living through a dangerous moment and warned the West not to escalate a standoff over Ukraine by threatening the Russian exclave of Kaliningrad, which Moscow has made clear it would defend with nuclear weapons if necessary.

Locked in a war in Ukraine which he said Russia had no choice but to launch in order to safeguard its own security, Putin said Russia had no plans to attack any European country and wanted to coexist peacefully.

But he reiterated that Moscow would resort to all weapons in its arsenal, including nuclear ones, if its most westerly territory — Kaliningrad, which is wedged between Poland and Lithuania — was threatened.

"If it comes to a direct attack on the Russian Federation ... we are referring to Kaliningrad... the question of Russian Federation deploying all the weapons at our country's disposal will, of course, inevitably and immediately be on the agenda," Putin told the Valdai Forum of international Russia experts in Moscow.

"And we will have to make use of our competitive advantages in this struggle. Yes, of course, France and Britain are nuclear powers — we understand that perfectly well..." he said. "But no one else possesses the kind of weapons that Russia has today. That is our advantage." REUTERS

Russian drone strikes school in Kyiv, students escape unhurt

Kyiv: A Russian drone smashed into a school in Kyiv and set it ablaze on Thursday morning, but all pupils were in a shelter at the time and no injuries were reported, Ukrainian officials said.

An important bridge over the Dnipro River was also struck in Russia's intensifying attacks on the city, Mayor Vitali Klitschko said. The Southern Bridge did not suffer major damage but metro traffic over it was temporarily halted. At the school, rescue workers picked through debris near the charred building, whose windows were shattered.

"They (Russians) spare no one," said school director Valentyna Chorna, who added over 100 students were present during the attack. "Children are our future, the future of our nation. In order to destroy a nation, of course, they need to destroy children." REUTERS

Pentagon creates new 'Autowar' command to expand AI, drone use

Reuters
Washington, October 1

US DEFENCE Secretary Pete Hegseth Wednesday announced creation of a new military command that would be dedicated to building and providing autonomous and robotic capabilities across US military.

The command, which Hegseth said would be called "Autonomous Warfare Command," highlights the rapidly changing nature of warfare and the need to make progress on systems like drones and the use of artificial intelligence.

Creating a new command is not common — the last one was US Space Command in 2019 — and the move reflects the Pentagon's push to shift from costly conventional weapons platforms to cheaper, AI-driven autonomous systems that have proved decisive in recent conflicts. Speaking in front of hundreds of junior officers and enlisted personnel at Quantico, Virginia, in a speech peppered with attacks on the media, Hegseth said the command would be led by a four-star officer.

"The pace of war is changing faster than the process to support it," Hegseth said in a speech called the "State of the Force," in which he announced other changes, including the creation of the office of religious affairs.

"Cheap compute, superintelligence, and advanced commercial manufacturing have enabled the proliferation of low-cost, high-precision strike," Hegseth added.

The US military currently has 11 combatant commands, which are responsible for different parts of the world and specific tasks.

Dual UK-Iranian national held over security incident at RAF Fairford

London: British police have arrested a dual UK-Iranian national on suspicion of plotting a terror attack following a security incident at a US-run air base on the weekend. The 27-year-old man was arrested in London Thursday, and police searched two properties in London.

On Sunday, five men, all in their 20s and from London, were arrested over the incident at RAF Fairford, which has been used by American bombers to strike Iran. They have since been released on bail. Counter-terror police said a second man, a 26-year-old UK national, has also been questioned.

"As we've made clear, we're looking at all possible angles — including possible foreign state involvement," senior national coordinator for counter terrorism policing for Metropolitan Police, Vicki Evans, said. AP

Iran won't shy away from talks with US, says Pezeshkian

Allies in Lebanon, Yemen, Iraq urged to be ready in case of attack: Officials

Dubai, October 1

President Masoud Pezeshkian at a press meet in Tehran. FILE

IRAN WILL never shy away from dialogue with the US, President Masoud Pezeshkian said on Thursday, as Tehran weighs a US response to its latest proposal to resurrect the collapsed ceasefire in the Gulf.

"We have never shied away from talks, and we never will, although the United States has targeted our country three times despite having signed an agreement," the semi-official Tasnim news agency quoted him as saying.

Meanwhile, Iran is preparing a broader and more forceful response if the United States resumes large-scale military attacks, sources said, while continuing a diplomatic push that Iranian officials privately see as unlikely to succeed.

The planning reflects a conviction within Iran's leadership that any renewed US campaign must be met with a stronger response than before, even as Tehran seeks to avert escalation through talks.

Senior commanders are reviewing plans to expand potential targets beyond US-linked assets to countries that support US military operations and possibly to locations outside West Asia, according to three senior Iranian officials and an insider familiar with the discussions.

Since President Masoud Pezeshkian returned from New York last week, commanders and senior officials have focused on the scope and timing of any response if Washington strikes again. No final decision has been made, but planning has intensified as neither side shows signs of willingness to compromise.

The deliberations follow seven months of conflict that began with US-Israeli attacks on February 28. Although an April 8 ceasefire ended the 40-day war, hostilities have continued sporadically since then.

Hamidreza Azizi, a senior Iran analyst at the International Crisis Group, said Tehran remained uncertain whether President Donald Trump would launch another major campaign or opt for more limited attacks, such as strikes on nuclear facilities. "But they seem determined not to respond symbolically to a symbolic move and instead to escalate in the hope of reestablishing deterrence," Azizi said.

Two of the officials said Iran instructed allied groups in Lebanon, Yemen and Iraq to be ready to support Iran in the event of a renewed large-scale US attack.

Tennessee death row inmate survives execution attempt despite two lethal doses

Kim Chandler & Kristin M Hall
Nashville, October 1

TENNESSEE OFFICIALS have not yet explained why what went wrong during the failed execution of Christa Pike, which was called off after she was given an initial and a backup dose of the drug meant to kill her.

Pike's condition was unknown Thursday. At one point during Wednesday night's execution attempt, she asked prison officials if her arm was supposed to feel that way, though it's unclear if it was after the first dose entered her body, as officials don't share that information. Later, more than an hour after the process began and nearly 30 minutes after a backup dose of pentobarbital was administered, she could be heard snoring loudly.

Pike, who was sentenced to death for a gruesome 1995 murder, was taken by ambulance from the prison to a hospital, where she was being treated, her attorneys said. It was the second time this year that Tennessee was unable to complete an execution, though in the other case, officials couldn't find a suitable vein for an IV line so the drugs weren't administered.

May Martinez, whose daughter was murdered by Pike and her boyfriend and who traveled to Nashville to watch the execution, told NBC

News that "it was a mess."

The failure, which one death penalty expert described as unprecedented, led Governor Bill Lee to order a review and to indefinitely postpone Pike's execution and Tennessee's lone other one that had been scheduled for this year. It also reignited the debate over the state's execution procedures, including its single-drug lethal injections.

"There are very few answers this morning. It's very early," Lee told reporters Thursday at an unrelated event, noting he had received no updates on Pike's condition. "The people of our state deserve to have those questions answered."

He called what happened

In this image from video provided by WBIR-TV, Christa Pike cries after being sentenced to death on March 30, 1996 in Tennessee. WBIR-TV/AP

"deeply disturbing" and said it appeared prison staff followed procedure.

Pike, 50, had been scheduled for execution Wednesday morning for the killing she committed at age 18 and would have been the first woman executed in Tennessee in more than 200 years. An appeals court stopped the execution an hour before it was to start, but US Supreme Court overturned that stay hours later.

Officials gave Pike two doses of pentobarbital, her attorneys said in court filings Wednesday. The drug has been used in executions in multiple states and by the federal government, but there have been concerns raised about the potential for "unnecessary pain and suffering."

The Tennessee Department of Correction said in a statement that it "followed every step of the State's lawful, established execution protocol approved by the Attorney General's Office."

Strapped to a gurney in the execution chamber, Pike described herself as at peace.

When asked if she had any last words, Pike said several things, including, "I'm at peace. I'm ready to be free. ... This is a happy day."

But she remained awake, and at one point complained about the feeling in her arm. The chamber's curtains were closed, suggesting it had been five minutes since the first dose was administered. But they were reopened three minutes later.

An hour after officials first raised the curtains, witnesses reported that a second dose of pentobarbital was administered. Pike could still be heard snoring behind a closed curtain until the microphone was cut off almost 30 minutes later.

Lawyers for Pike filed an emergency motion with the Tennessee Supreme Court seeking to immediately halt and stay the execution, saying she was in "unnecessary agony" and the procedure violated her right to be executed free of cruel and unusual punishment. They also filed motions with two other courts.

Last May, Tennessee officials called off the lethal injection of Tony Carruthers, who was convicted of kidnapping and killing three people in 1994, after executioners tried for over an hour but failed to find a suitable vein for a backup IV line. AP

Flawed execution: When lethal injections go wrong

BHASKAR SARMA

AUTHORITIES IN the US failed to execute a 50-year-old woman on Tuesday despite twice administering a lethal drug through injection. Christa Gail Pike had been sentenced to death for killing her classmate at the age of 18 in 1997. Following the execution attempt, Pike was taken to a hospital. Tennessee's Governor has ordered a probe and her legal team has moved the state's Supreme Court seeking a halt on the execution.

Botched executions in the US are nothing new, regardless of the range of methods that are authorised by different states. A study of 8,776 executions in the US between 1890 and 2010 found that 276 (around 3%) of them were botched. The latest case, however, is unprecedented, according to a death penalty expert quoted by the Associated Press. This is because no convict has ever survived once drugs are actually administered.

Execution methods in the US

Countries that provide for capital punishment generally operate on the principle of minimising suffering — though the punishment itself is ethically controversial.

In the US, capital punishment is legal in 27 of 50 states. These states authorise different, sometimes multiple, methods of execution — lethal injection, electrocution, nitrogen gas, firing squad and hanging.

The lethal injection method, adopted in 1982, became the primary execution method in the 2000s; it is authorised by all 27 states that retain the death penalty.

The lethal injection method itself follows two broad approaches: a three-drug protocol or a one-drug protocol.

In the first approach, a sequence of drugs is administered to a convict intravenously — first a sedative or an anaesthetic that is meant to render them unconscious, then a paralytic drug that stops muscle movement, and finally potassium chloride, which causes a cardiac arrest.

But as drugmakers grew unwilling to supply drugs, saying they were meant to save lives and not take them, many US states shifted to more accessible single drugs such as pentobarbital and midazolam — Tennessee adopted pentobarbital in 2024.

Pentobarbital is a barbiturate, a type of drug that can slow down activity in the brain and nervous system, and can be fatal in high doses on its own. But critics say pentobarbital and midazolam can cause excruciating pain, which would violate the principle of reducing pain and cruelty.

Lethal injections: The problems

In the case of lethal injections, convicts are secured to a table or gurney and IV lines are attached to them. This is where the problems come in.

The Death Penalty Information Center (DPIC), a non-profit organisation that documents capital punishment in the US, lists out example after example of lethal injection executions being botched — either failing to kill a convict, delaying their death or causing them unnecessary agony — primarily because execution teams failed to connect or maintain IV lines.

While there are multiple examples of such failures, one particularly harrowing case from Alabama in 2022 is illustrative of just how wrong things can go when execution teams lack sufficient competence.

In this case, officials tried and failed

'Sham' deals, inflated revenues: The Manchester City scandal

Shashank Nair

New Delhi, October 1

IN A 1,500-word statement this week, the Premier League said that Manchester City, the eight-time champions of England's top-flight football league, "systemically broke" more than a hundred financial regulations between the 2009-10 and 2017-18 seasons.

The allegations, essentially, are that City artificially inflated its revenue through "sham" sponsorship deals to disguise its losses and sought to cover this up. This has cast a cloud over the achievements of the Abu Dhabi royal family-owned club and sparked calls for severe penalties.

What are the charges against Manchester City?

The Premier League, through an independent panel that has been probing these charges, said that the club, owned by Sheikh Mansour bin Zayed al-Nahyan through the City Football Group, has committed Financial Fair Play (FFP) fraud over a decade. Sheikh al-Nahyan is Vice President and Deputy Prime Minister of the UAE.

Out of the many charges, the one that stands out is this: Between 2009 and 2018, Manchester City declared a commercial sponsorship revenue of $1.25 billion — more than that of traditional giants Real Madrid, Barcelona and Manchester United. The panel found out that the actual amount of sponsorship revenue was $157 million.

What are Financial Fair Play rules?

The PL has strict financial rules in place, known as Profit and Sustainability Rules. These draw upon the Financial Fair Play (FFP) rules instituted by Europe's governing footballing body, UEFA, in 2009 to ensure that European football clubs adopted financial sustainability and responsible governance. This broadly means that clubs can only make a certain amount of losses before penalties start to be put in place. The amount of money a club can spend on transfers is tied to the revenue it makes.

Manchester City allegedly onboarded commercial partners via "sham" contracts, inflated the sums of money those partners invested by adding money from their own purse, and showed that a commercial revenue of around $157 million was actually over $1 billion. The inflated sums were paid for by the owners themselves and received by the club for transfers and other activities.

If owners themselves were paying for inflated contracts, what is the issue?

By inflating their revenue, Manchester City essentially tried to fool the FFP model. The club's finances, bankrolled not by their

Looking back in anger

• Others have called for relegating the club to a lower division by deducting their points.

profits but by the wealth of their owners, were used to buy some of the best players in the world. And whenever those players failed to click, City had the resources to go and purchase replacements as well.

Many might argue that legacy clubs like Manchester United and Arsenal needed the competition of wealthy owners from different parts of the world to come in, and that a club with new owners would find the already full-to-the-brim revenues of the legacy clubs tough to compete against when FFP rules came into play.

The rich history of Koder House, a Kochi landmark now gutted by fire

Koder House in Fort Kochi was functioning as a luxury hotel.

Nikhila Henry

Hyderabad, October 1

PARTS OF Koder House, a heritage landmark in Fort Kochi that was functioning as a luxury hotel, were gutted in a major fire on Tuesday. The building is believed to have been constructed during the Dutch invasion of Kochi (1663 to 1795) and was later bought by SS Koder, the patriarch of a Paradesi Jew family, in the 19th century.

The Koders

While it is not known why the Dutch built the structure, SS Koder renovated and used it as his family home. "The Koders were Paradesi Jews or Jews who immigrated from outside India. Most of the immigration of the Jewish community was from Spain and other countries in Europe," K J Sohan, former mayor of Kochi and member of INTACH Kerala chapter, told The Indian Express. Heritage expert Bony Thomas, however, said that the Koders are believed to have migrated from near Iraq: "The family's roots can be traced back to West Asia."

Most Paradesi Jews, unlike the Malabari Jews of Kochi, immigrated to either their parent countries or Israel in the 1950s. However, Koder's family never left Fort Kochi, Sohan said. They were known to be one of the richest families in the area. One member, Samuel Koder, worked as the Cochin princely state's Honorary Consul to the Netherlands and as the municipal chairman of Fort Kochi. The family also brought electricity to Kochi's shores through the Cochin Electric Company. "They burnt coal and produced electricity and supplied (transmitted) it to most of Fort Kochi and Mattancherry islands," Thomas said.

Sohan said that the Koders were also traders with global connections. "They used to run a textile and crockery store, which doubled up as a luxury house store," Thomas said, "Before liberalisation, foreign goods were not available in Kerala or India. Koders imported many luxury items during this time and sold them to the local populace."

Unique structure

Koder House has been considered an integral part of Fort Kochi's cultural landscape, which was deeply shaped by the foreign powers who landed on its shores. MK Das's book Cochin: Fame and Fables (2024) states that who came first is contested, although recorded history starts with the Portuguese in the 1500s. "Evidently, they played their cards quite well. First they sought permission of the Cochin Maharaja to put up a factory which was readily granted. They then sought and got permission to construct a fort to help them fortify themselves and their power. First of its kind in the country, the fort was christened 'Emmanuel' after the then King of Portugal on 1 October 1503. The town also took its name, Fort Cochin, from it. It was the first European settlement in the subcontinent."

Koder House has simple architecture with balconies, with a guest house at its rear end. "The two structures are connected by a wooden bridge," said Thomas. The guest house has a courtyard with a small pond, or Mikvah, where the Jewish holy or ritualistic bath is taken. "This must be the only such Mikvah in Ernakulam," Thomas added. Kerala's fire service officers said that only the top floor was gutted in the fire, as the flames were prevented from spreading to the nearby historic structures by the Mikvah and the bridge.

Koder House also contained many historical artefacts, K J Sohan said. Each furniture piece and the tapestry inside were brought from across the world, he added: "It is a major loss of a heritage building".

What saved flydubai plane: Smit Machchhar, fliers' actions — and sheer luck

Sukalp Sharma & Anil Sasi

New Delhi, October 1

CAPTAIN SMIT Machchhar, the pilot of flydubai flight FZ1073 from Dubai to Tel Aviv, is being hailed globally for heroic actions that saved the aircraft from disaster, after his co-pilot allegedly stabbed him in an alleged bid to crash the aircraft.

Machchhar's most critical actions involved fighting back against the attacking co-pilot and, despite multiple stab wounds, unlocking the sealed cockpit door while raising an alarm. The courage and presence of mind displayed by a few passengers, and a stroke of sheer luck — presence of relief pilots on board — followed Machchhar's heroics in landing the aircraft safely at the Tabuk airport in Saudi Arabia.

The other pilot is an Omani person whose identity has not been revealed.

Captain Machchhar's actions

Perhaps the first and the most consequential action taken by Machchhar was to fight back. Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said the Indian pilot "fought back, resisted, opened the cockpit door, and enabled passengers and crew to overpower the attacker", and credited him with preventing a "catastrophic mid-air disaster". "He saved the lives of 174 people, including Israeli citizens and other nationals..." Netanyahu posted on X.

Then, while lying injured and bleeding on the cockpit floor, Machchhar managed to click open the release on the locked door of the cockpit. These doors are heavily reinforced and locked from the inside to prevent unauthorised entry into the cockpit, something that became a norm after the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks in the US. Without this action, no one on board the aircraft could have come to its rescue.

The underlying assumption of reinforcing the cockpit door and keeping it locked during flight is that the flight deck is occupied by trained pilots, and they need to be kept out of harm's way in order to maintain control over the aircraft even if there is an attacker or a hijacker in the cabin. In this case though, the threat was not outside the cockpit, but inside it.

The aircraft also transmitted the international emergency transponder code 7700 and later the code 7500, which communicates unlawful interference or hijacking. These signals were important because communication with the cockpit was reportedly disrupted during the incident, and these signals indicated to air traffic controllers and authorities about a problem on board. It is likely that Machchhar transmitted the codes while being attacked.

Heroic passengers and crew

A few passengers then did something out of the ordinary, even as the aircraft plummeted around 14,000 feet in a matter of seconds. Possibly being alerted by the commotion, they moved towards the flight deck to try and intervene. As Machchhar opened the door, they stormed the cockpit and helped overpower the attacking co-pilot.

The co-pilot was restrained by some passengers and crew, who tied his hands with whatever they could access, including head-phone cables. Meanwhile, one of the passengers, a dentist, tended to a badly injured Machchhar. One passenger, Yaniv Hayoun, a plumber, claimed he briefly took hold of the aircraft's controls while its nose was pointed down. Hayoun had never flown a plane before but had watched a popular TV series on air crash investigations. He claimed to have done two things — yank the copilot out of the cockpit and pull up the yoke (the steering wheel-like device) at a time when the plane was nosediving. By some accounts, he levelled the plane until a set of relief pilots on board intervened.

Presence of trained pilots

It was a stroke of sheer luck that two flydubai pilots were on board the aircraft as off-duty or relief flight crew — pilots who travel as passengers because they are scheduled to operate a subsequent flight. "The aircraft was successfully secured by on-duty Flydubai crew travelling on the flight, who diverted and landed the aircraft safely at Tabuk Airport (TUU). All passengers and crew are safe and accounted for," the airline said in a statement on Wednesday.

Once the cockpit crisis was brought under control, this other set of pilots took over the aircraft, landing it in Saudi Arabia's diverting Tabuk. Had another set of pilots not been on board the aircraft, the result would likely have been catastrophic.

Pak take volleyball, India take hockey; handshakes take the day

A different picture of the cross-border rivalry was on display in sports not named cricket

Mihir Vasavda
Nagoya, October 1

THE SCOREBOARD still read 25-18, the final point of Pakistan's 3-0 win over India. But as Amit Balwan Singh stood talking about the defeat, Pakistan's middle blocker Musaweer Khan ruffled his hair, Murad Khan consoled him and Abu Bakar Siddique walked over and patted him on the back. "The Indian players are like my brothers," Siddique said.

It was a gentle end to a match Pakistan had dominated, on a day that offered two different India-Pakistan results across two sports. In the morning, Pakistan beat India 3-0 in volleyball. In the evening, India beat Pakistan 4-3 in hockey -- a semifinal that provided a glimpse of what the rivalry between the two could still produce, with players high-fiving each other before the push-back and captains shaking hands at the start.

The two countries will meet again on Saturday, this time for the Asian Games cricket gold medal. There, the customary handshake has been absent in recent meetings, offering a different picture of the rivalry.

Asked in the context of the cricket teams' decision not to shake hands, Amit, an outside-hitter, said: "People look at India-Pakistan from a different point of view. But a sports-person has to think about his best performance. The relations (between the two countries) haven't been good since the beginning but a sports-person has to ignore all that and focus on the game."

The volleyball court offered a glimpse of what he meant.

Before the quarterfinal match, the teams exchanged pins and greeted each other. Once the whistle went, however, the familiarity gave way to the contest, with Pakistan attacking more cleanly and repeatedly finding ways around India's block. Pakistan took the first set 25-19, fought back from 16-13 down to take the second 25-23 and then pulled away early in the third to win 25-18.

The intensity was obvious during the match. Pakistan celebrated almost every point loudly, especially as India began to struggle in the third set. But the mood changed quickly once the contest ended. "We were relaxed throughout," Siddique said, as Pakistan recorded a third straight win over India at the Asian Games.

Friends within sport

At 19, Siddique is one of the younger players in the Pakistan team. Sharing the athletes' accommodation with the Indian side, he said, had given him a chance to learn from players he had previously known mainly as opponents. "We are staying at the same hotel. I am a junior, so I learn a lot just by watching how they conduct themselves. What they eat, what they do, how they kit up. It feels very good to share space with seniors. We all eat together at the mess," he said.

Siddique also spoke about

The intensity was obvious. Pakistan celebrated almost every point loudly, especially as India began to struggle in the third set. But the mood changed quickly once the contest ended.

Indian players with the familiarity of someone discussing teammates rather than rivals. "Mashallah, all Indian players are good. I have seen Chirag (Yadav, an outside-hitter) a lot, there's Muthuswamy (Appavu, a setter). Mashallah, he is also good. At CAVA (Nations League, last year when India had won), he was very good, outstanding. I saw him and wondered, 'yeh kya kar raha hai' (what is he doing)!"

There is, of course, an awareness among the players of what an India-Pakistan fixture represents beyond the court. Abu Bakar said the hype surrounding the matches was largely a product of the rivalry built around them.

"Of course, there is hype when India and Pakistan play. But that's because of the way this rivalry has been turned into animosity. So that's what stays with us, India-Pakistan, India-Pakistan. But trust me, our two teams have a very good relationship, gupshup karte hai (we do have chats)," he said.

More drama

There is familiarity and respect also because the players face each other in club colours. Indian and Pakistani spikers often ply their trade in volleyball leagues in central Asia. And, sharing a neutral ground has helped players understand each other better. "I know Amit because we played two years ago together in Kazakhstan," said Khan, who hails from Pakistan's volleyball-crazy district of Bannu, in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa. "What happens outside sport does not reflect on our relationship when we play."

Amit, who has played alongside Pakistani players at clubs in Iran, made the same distinction. "This is, of course, a very important match. As a sports-person, if we look at this match from that point of view, there will be more pressure. We can execute our skills if we play with a free mind. Out of the court, we speak to each other cordially. Sometimes, we end up playing for the same clubs abroad, like in Iran," he said.

A few hours later, the result was reversed on the hockey field, but the drama was turned up several notches. India raced to a 3-0 lead, only for Pakistan to fight back and level the match at 3-3. With 49.2 seconds left, forward Abhishek Nain's shot took a deflection off Su-fiy-an Khan's stick and found the net for a thrilling 4-3 win and sent India into Saturday's final, where they will face Malaysia.

When the match ended, the players, exhausted and overcome by emotion, shook hands before leaving the field.

The hockey and volleyball players were not alone. Earlier in the Games, the India and Pakistan table tennis players, too, greeted each other warmly, as did their squash players.

On Thursday, even as the results went one way in the morning and the other in the evening, the warmth stayed the same.

Late Abhishek goal saves India, revives rivalry

Prithish Raj
New Delhi, October 1

THE INDIA-Pakistan hockey rivalry used to serve dramatic matches before it turned into lopsided contests on a loop over the last decade. However, the semifinal of the 2026 Asian Games provided a glimpse of what the neighbours can potentially serve up. Pakistan came back from a 0-3 deficit to level the contest before Abhishek's last-minute goal took India to within one win of a successful gold-medal defence and direct qualification for the 2028 Los Angeles Olympics.

As the final hooter sounded, Harmanpreet Singh, Manpreet Singh, and Mandeep Singh looked more relieved than jubilant. The three most experienced members of the team know what the result meant with the Olympic quota at stake. "I'm happy and relieved, because we won 4-3. I think in the first half, we played really well: we were 3-0 up. But in the second half, I think we made some errors. They punished us. Definitely, Pakistan is a really good team, so if you make a mistake, they will punish you," Manpreet told reporters after India's nervy win.

He was right about the mistakes. After an almost flawless first half in which Harmanpreet scored from two powerful drag-flicks in the 5th and 13th minutes before Sukhjeet scored a field goal from Shilan and Lakra's pinpoint pass, the errors crept in.

The first mistake was a back stick in the final few seconds of the first half which allowed Pakistan a penalty corner that was eventually converted by skipper Abu Mehmood to make it 1-3.

India started in a lively fashion in the second half with Abhishek hitting the post in the 40th minute. But as the third quarter was about to close, the second error came.

Tempers flared up as Dilpreet Singh was shown a green card in the 43rd minute and Pakistan capitalised on the numerical advantage. India switched off in the last moments of the third quarter and Pakistan made it 2-3 as Hannan Shahid scored past a diving Mohith HS from a pass from Ali Ghaznafar.

With just a one-goal advantage now, the Indian team went into a shell. Instead of pushing forward, they sat back allowing Pakistan to dictate play.

The third mistake came in the 49th minute when the whole Indian defence stood still allowing Hannan to play a pass to an unmarked Rana Waheed to put it in an empty net to make it 3-3.

Pakistan kept their foot on the pedal, forcing goalkeeper Suraj Karkera into two saves before the Indian forward line came to life. Ali Raza was called into action twice to keep India at bay. However with less than 50 seconds to go, Abhishek took a shot which was deflected by Sufyan Khan, wrong-footing goalkeeper Ali Raza to hit the board and make it 4-3 as the defending champions broke into wild celebrations.

According to Manpreet, the idea to attack constantly brought the desired result for the team. "You just need to believe in your plans. You should not rush things. We know that if we play our game, we will score goals. That's what we did. Even at 3-3, we didn't panic. We thought, 'Just keep attacking. If we do that, they will make some mistakes and we will get the opportunity to score a goal.' That's what happened. They made a small error and we scored a goal," said Manpreet.

India will now face Malaysia, who defeated Korea 2-1 in the other semi-final. On paper, it shouldn't be a big problem for India but Thursday's game is a reminder that anything can happen.

Manpreet wants his team to play their normal game.

"In the final, you shouldn't get too excited. If you play your normal game, what you've normally been doing in the pool stage, I think it will be pretty easy. But if you make complicate things, it will make it difficult for the team."

The Indian team might have gotten out of jail in the semifinal, but the sparks of a cherished rivalry were visible for the last 30 minutes in the game.

Anahat wins another medal

Bhuvan Gupta
New Delhi, October 1

ANAHAT SINGH experienced the exhilaration of a hard-fought win in her singles semi-final. In the five days since, she has twice experienced the opposite, the shoe on the other foot.

First, the same Satomi Watanabe she had edged out in singles beat her in a five-game thriller in the Asian Games team event on Monday. Then Chan Sin Yuksaved four match points before leaving Anahat stunned in the team semi-final.

Joshana Chinappa had come to India's rescue against Japan but could not do so against Hong Kong. The disappointment doubled in the evening as the men's squash team, defending Asian Games champions, suffered a shock loss to Malaysia. Both sides had to settle for bronze from events that had promised more. Things looked different at the start, as Anahat held firm to force a deciding fifth game. She then found the forehand corner with disconcerting regularity in the closing stages to complete the turnaround, 9-11, 8-11, 11-6, 13-11, 12-10.

While Anahat's defeat hurt the women's team, it was Velavan Senthilkumar's 10-12, 11-6, 11-8, 11-9 loss to Ameeshenraj Chandaran that stung the men.

From selling milk to winning Asian Games silver – grappler Siwach's journey

Nitin Sharma
Chandigarh, October 1

IF SOMEONE had told Nitesh Siwach 11 years ago that he would one day win an Asian Games wrestling medal, he would have scarcely believed the prediction. After all, at that time, he had sustained a serious knee injury which kept the youngster away from the mat for more than 18 months.

It was then that Nitesh's father Anand and uncle Naveen asked him to assist them in their dairy work – which involved fetching buffalo milk from their village Jagsi near Gohana and selling it at their shop in Panipat. The 23-year-old's journey to the silver medal in the men's 97kg Greco-Roman category at Aichi-Nagoya has been an eventful one. Though he couldn't win the gold, he became the first Indian Greco-Roman grappler since 1962 (Ganpat Andalkar, 97-kg gold, and Malwa Singh 52 kg gold) to make the final.

"Nitesh suffered a knee injury in 2015. It was in a bad condition. Post the operation, he was at the village home and we asked him to help us with our dairy work. We would go on our motorcycle at 4am to buy milk from families nearby and sell it," Anand said, while reflecting on his son's achievement.

It's a story of determination and dedication to the sport, but the injury could have nipped a promising wrestling career in the bud, as Nitesh himself recalled after the medal in Japan.

"When the injury happened, I worked with my father and uncle. Then I asked my family to give me six months in wrestling. This medal is due to their and my persistence," the grappler told reporters.

On Thursday, Nitesh first scored a 7-1 win over Turkmenistan's Amanberdi Agamamedov before a 9-0 win by technical superiority over Hangzhou Asian Games bronze medallist Mongolian Gankhuyag Ganbaatar. But he lost the final to home favourite Yuri Nakazto 4-0.

It was Anand's love for wrestling that had led to Nitesh's initiation in the sport. He would accompany his father to village dangals and train at the local akhara before the family decided to send him to train under former national champion and coach Om Prakash Dahiya at Pratap Sports School in Kharkhoda.

Dahiya remembers Nitesh as a thin boy, whom he advised to become a Greco-Roman wrestler.

"His upper body muscles were strong but his opponents would often grab his legs. So I advised him to train in Greco-Roman," says Dahiya, a disciple of 1970 Asian Games heavyweight champion Chandgi Ram.

The coach talked about how his ward had worked on his upper body strength.

"Nitesh would train with a dummy weighing 100-120 kg trying throwdowns as well as upper side movements. I also send him videos of Greco-Roman wrestlers like London Olympics champion Ghasem Rezaei of Iran," says Dahiya.

Post his recovery from the knee injury, Nitesh would re-join training at the school and go on to win the cadet Asian silver medal in 2019. Following his selection in the national camp in 2021, the Haryana wrestler would win the U-23 Worlds bronze in 2022 before a bronze and silver at the U-23 Asian championships in 2023 and 2024. Earlier this year, Nitesh won the silver at the Asian Championships in Bishkek, an upgrade on his bronze medal in 2025.

While the Siwach family built a home in Panipat, Anand says the family also gave full attention to the youngster's wrestling aspirations.

"We would not attend functions or even celebrate festivals sometimes to support his training. We used to earn Rs 15,000 every month and most of it was spent on his diet. We would save milk and ghee and take it to Kharkhoda and later to nationals camps for him. I used to wrestle in village dangals and never fought a big fight. But Nitesh has realised my dream of winning a medal for India," the proud father adds.

Silver sailors Prince, Manu revel

Mumbai, October 1

Prince Noble was at a sailing regatta in Germany with his crew and cousin, Manu Francis, when he learned his father, Noble KG, had died snatched by the ferocious waters of the 2018 Kerala floods. The sky had crashed down on him and his family of a mother, two brothers and a sister, that day.

Prince leaned on his oldest friend, Manu.

On Thursday, Prince and Manu of the Army Yachting Node sailed their last four races of the Skiff 49er Dinghy event into suddenly gusting winds. In calmer conditions on Wednesday, they had led the fleet in five races and were looking at gold. On Thursday, gusts of 14-15 knots sent them to the edge of the 49er's trapeze. In the final race, they went from fourth place to second. It went to the wire, but they gave India its first sailing silver of these Games. "I knew something bad had happened in the floods, but not that he..." he trails off. "I wish I could've seen my father just once."

Sometimes I wish I had never gone to Germany and was with him. He always encouraged me, whether I was winning or losing. And I didn't win much back then. But his only thing was I should enjoy the sport. Result is in God's hands," Prince says.

Prince reads the Bible, and believes he won't win if he doesn't. On a boat that flies on water, belief and trust matter. "When things get tough, and you are dropping down the scoreboard, it can feel like you are sinking, so you pray to the Lord. You don't pray asking for a medal, but to give you strength to navigate the angry winds. That's what my father used to say. It's what we learnt in training in the Army. It's what I trust Manu to do as teammate," he says.

Fondest memory

It was Prince's fondest memory: countless days spent fishing with his father, who told him the sea was his friend, as they travelled out from inland Palakuzha in Ernakulam. They would also watch, fascinated, an uncle who repaired the powerboats that accompanied sailors. It was there his father first said he wanted to see Prince on boats with those soaring sails, calling it the most peaceful feeling he knew. His father's death drew Prince even closer to the sea.

Manu, Prince's cousin, a year older, was a sports-loving, cheerful influence on the quieter, more ruminative Prince. Wherever Manu went, Prince followed. He dragged him to cricket ("I was never any good at it," Prince laughs), to football and badminton, and finally to watch the Volvo Ocean Race of 2008, where bright, massive sails docked at Kochi and raced like aeroplanes on water. "It was a festival. We couldn't stop talking about it. We vowed to sail all our life," Manu recalls.

They entered a talent hunt run by the Kerala Yachting Association without knowing it was for sailing. Prince was the verge of an engineering admission when Manu received a recruitment offer from the Army, training in Mumbai. "It was the best option," Prince says. "They have legendary sailors, excellent coaches, knowledge, because this is a technically complex sport. Also, can you ever buy me a boat costing 45 lakh, like we sailed today?" he laughs.

Prince is helm, Manu is crew, the engine on the main sail. He is able to recall past conditions and how they negotiated the winds. "He is disciplined like an athlete," Prince says. Prince leans out on the trapeze wire, reading the winds and bringing power to the boat.

"Our communication is very solid. He's like my elder brother. Whenever we visited their home, he would get me to play with him. We don't even have to blink to communicate. We just understand each other. Of course we are two different people, so we disagree. But on the boat, we can overcome everything," Prince says. "There's a moment in sailing when the crew, the helm and the boat become a single person. In sync, and the boat literally sings, flies on water. I love that feeling."

Ronaldo leaves Portugal, says will reveal ‘truth in time’

Express News Service
New Delhi, October 1

CRISTIANO RONALDO on late Wednesday night said that he has left the Portugal national team training camp ahead of the country’s remaining Nations League matches, set for October 2 and October 5. In Portugal’s match vs Norway on Monday, Ronaldo was named on the bench by coach Jorge Jesus but did not play any part in the match, remaining as an unused substitute. Last week, he started in the match vs Wales but was hauled off at half time.

In a press conference on Wednesday, coach Jesus said that he was not planning to start Ronaldo in Portugal’s game against Denmark in the Nations League on Thursday, adding that there is no feud between the pair. After the said press conference, Ronaldo put out a post on Instagram saying that he would be leaving the Portugal camp which was preparing for the upcoming Nations League matches.

“After the press conference of the national team, and following a conversation with the President of the Portuguese Football Federation, I have decided to leave the national team training camp. In time, I will tell all the Portuguese the truth about the reasons that motivated me to leave the national team, to which I always devoted myself. Now is the time to wish Portugal and all my teammates good luck, without exception,” Ronaldo posted on Instagram. Ronaldo did not practice on Wednesday, though, and reportedly left the stadium where the team was preparing for the match. Jesus said in the pre-game news conference that every player knows the coach makes the decisions, and that Ronaldo told him he would abide.

The coach added the “rules are the same for everyone” and that Goncalo Ramos would start up front against Denmark if everything went to plan. “I don’t know what’s going to happen in the game,” Jesus said. “If we need him (Ronaldo) to play (at some point), he’ll play. If not, he won’t.” Ronaldo, the all-time leading scorer in men’s international soccer with 146 goals and pursuing the milestone of 1,000 career goals, didn’t play on Sunday in Portugal’s 2-1 win over Norway. He has not trained with the rest of the group since, sparking widespread rumors about a possible feud with Jesus. Jesus, who worked with Ronaldo for about a year in Saudi Arabia, said the player did not refuse to practice after having been left on the bench.

“It seems like there was an issue between us, but there was no issue,” Jesus said. “I’m the one who makes the decisions and everybody knows that.” Jesus acknowledged he had told Ronaldo he would likely play against Norway, but changed his mind because of the circumstances.

LONE NASIR waited decades for the moment. When it finally arrived, it required only two legitimate deliveries. Into the 11th over came Nasir. Facing him stood Sudip Kumar Gharami, a batter in rare touch, fresh off a century in the Duleep Trophy. First up, overstepping. The second delivery was left. On the third, Nasir induced just enough outswinging to lure Gharami into a shot he need not have played. The result — a thick outside edge. At 29 years and 26 days, Nasir had a First-Class wicket to his name. The delay owed nothing to a want of trying — this

Japanese university with more Olympic gold medals than India

Shigakkan’s 14 Olympic wrestling golds trace back to a president who found her athletes anaemic and decided to rebuild the sport from the ground up

Mihir Vasavda
Nagoya, October 1

TWO FLOORS beneath a grey, unremarkable building in a quiet corner of Obu, on the outskirts of Nagoya, a long corridor leads to one of Japanese wrestling’s great rooms.

There are no grand entrances or imposing facades. Just photographs along the walls, generation after generation of Japanese wrestling champions, their faces caught in moments of triumph, focus and action. There’s Saori Yoshida, widely considered the greatest of all time. There’s Kaori Icho. And further along, more champions, more history.

At the end of the corridor, a narrow stairway descends two floors to a wrestling hall. It’s an ordinary room. What happened inside it was anything but. Shigakkan’s women’s wrestling programme has produced 14 Olympic gold medals, India has won just 10 in Olympic history, along with generations of world and Asian champions.

To understand how that happened, one has to go back before the medals: to a university that was burned during World War II, to the long rebuilding that followed, and to a president who arrived expecting to find healthy athletes but instead found injuries and anaemia.

“I thought this should be a University of Healthy People, but I saw so many unhealthy individuals,” says Kuniko Tanioka, who became president of the university 40 years ago.

Tanioka, a Nagoya native, began her association with what was then Chukyo Women’s University 47 years ago, after graduating in biology from the University of Toronto. The place already had a strong sporting culture, particularly in athletics, but what she found troubled her. Young athletes were injured, some were anaemic and some had stopped menstruating after losing too much blood. “It was a crooked situation because the university offered courses in anatomy, physiology, elementary biochemistry, sports medicine, and nutrition,” Tanioka tells The Indian Express.

The university itself had been through a far greater rupture. Before World War II, its track and field team had sent three women to the 1936 Berlin Olympics, one finishing fourth or fifth. “But in the last year of World War II, America bombed Nagoya, and my university was heavily damaged. It took a long time to recover because all the buildings burned,” says Tanioka, also the honorary vice-president of the Japan Wrestling Federation.

The campus was eventually rebuilt on the outskirts of Nagoya, in what is now Obu. The war had cost Japan the 1940 Olympics, and Tanioka believes her university might have had Games medallists had they gone ahead. By the time Tokyo hosted the Olympics in 1964, the university was still recovering from the bombing.

Sport gradually returned to the university’s identity. “But in reality, they lacked nutrition, proper treatment, rehabilitation, and scientific knowledge,” she says. “I persuaded coaches, in vain, for long. Most of the time, they just told me, ‘we are professionals, we’ve always been doing it this way.’”

Eventually, she stopped trying and decided to build something herself. In 1988, the third year of her presidency, Tanioka established a new sport and team around three ideas: science, application and the independence of women.

That sport was wrestling.

At first, wrestling was hardly an obvious choice. Women’s wrestling had individual practitioners in Japan, but no established university teams and no regular home base. The national federation organised camps for a few weeks a year; the rest of the time, the wrestlers had nowhere permanent to train.

“But in the last year of World War II, America bombed Nagoya, and my university was heavily damaged. It took a long time to recover because all the buildings burned.”

really well, you must go for the trials’ That is where my journey started. After that, I gave the Under-19 trials, and luckily, in my very first year, I was selected by JKCA. The roadblocks, however, arrived later. “Whenever I had to play or attend trials, I had to travel around 60 kilometres to reach Srinagar. I could only afford either a bus ticket, or a ride in a shared Tata Sumo. I would leave my home at 6 in the morning, and not return until late at night,” he reflects.

Through that long climb, two men have stood beside him. His father, a teacher, was aware of the uncertainties cricket brought to a teenager from a remote district in northern Kashmir. Yet, he chose not to curb his son’s dreams, so long as he graduated. Raja Saleem, a rare pacer out of Bandipora to have made the state team, wanted nothing more than to see Nasir walk the ing, devising their own schedules and understanding their bodies rather than simply following instructions. “The students applied their classroom knowledge to the sport, making their own schedules,” Tanioka says. “That was key to our success.” By the time women’s wrestling got Olympic status, for the 2004 Athens Games, Shigakkan had already spent years developing that approach. With world champions emerging from the programme, the university created its Gold Medal Project, bringing together sports science, nutrition and other faculties around the same athletes.

One of the clearest examples was Saori Yoshida, one of the torch-bearers at the opening ceremony of these Asian Games. Her talent was evident from a young age, but she was too skinny, lacked stamina and struggled to build muscle. Then the coaches discovered what she was eating. “She only ate candy bars and skipped proper meals,” Tanioka says. When the coaches confronted her, Yoshida left the university and went home. Her father, who had also been her first coach, told her to return. The nutrition department then brought in student volunteers to prepare breakfast at 6am. The wrestlers ran from 7am to 8am, ate a carefully planned meal, went to class and trained again in the gym before having dinner prepared for them in the evening. Yoshida could not manage enough food in three meals, so she was given five. “The coaches said it was harder to make her eat than to teach her high-class skills,” Tanioka says. It worked. Yoshida began building muscle, her stamina improved, and by her second year she was a world champion, the first of 13 successive titles, three Olympic gold medals and four Asian Games titles.

Food remained part of the programme, but Tanioka did not want it to become another source of misery. In the early years, the wrestlers were made to eat large quantities of liver for its protein, minerals and iron. Yoshida hated it so much that she cried. Today, liver is rarely served. “We want the wrestlers to be happy,” Tanioka says. “Their lives are already strenuous. They are university students and must study.”

There are birthday cakes from a local shop and no blanket ban on sweets. Meals are built around protein, calcium and iron, with carbohydrates adjusted before competitions. Milk, yoghurt, cheese, chicken and eggs are staples. “They endure stressful practices, and eating should be enjoyable,” Tanioka says. “It’s also about setting up the right environment.”

The idea of how to build a wrestler begins even earlier. “We have wrestlers starting at the age of three,” says Kawase Katsuyoshi, the university coach. “They don’t grapple at that age, but the idea is to introduce them to the sport and get a feeling of the mat.”

Before they are taught technique, Tanioka adds, they are given a lesson in how to wrestle. They bow, shake hands and show the handkerchief before a bout, signifying that the wrestler is ready to clean up blood or fluids to keep the mat hygienic. “And you never touch the hair. They are strict about kids going against the rules. That reduces injuries,” Tanioka says.

Tanioka noticed the difference while watching younger women from other countries at a United World Wrestling workshop. “They were really fighting rather than playing wrestling,” she says. “In Japan, you don’t see that kind of scene. Every kid obeys the rules, avoiding rough games. They can grow as athletes without many injuries or fear, which is important.”

Nasir carried both legacies — a B.Sc degree, and three Irani Cup wickets. The other two batters undone by Nasir across the day were, fittingly, Rest of India’s two highest scorers — Shikhar Mohan and Ravichandran Aswan. With the scoreboard reading 106/2 at Lunch, the visitors enjoyed command over the game. In what was only his third delivery post Lunch, Nasir floated the ball well outside the off-stump, luring Mohan — who had shown remarkable restraint through a composed 60 — to play a drive. The southpaw’s fate was similar to Gharami’s — outside edge, caught by keeper Kanhaiya Wadhawan. Nasir’s delivery was a jolt of belief that put spring into the steps of the entire J&K attack. The contagion rubbed off on Umar Nazir, who sent both vice-captain Sarfaraz Khan (45) and Rishabh Pant (10) in quick succession. Rest of India lost six wickets in a span of 86 runs. Then came renewed resilience — on this occasion, orchestrated by Karnataka’s Smaran. The southpaw accumulated 68 in only 83.

Nasir delivered again, his traps making his preying pattern evident. Another outside-off delivery that invited a drive, another edge, caught by Samad in the slip cordon. Rest of India were bowled out for 237, while J&K are 21/2 in response.

Ishan sets up, bowlers whip it up: Ind v Pak in gold medal bout

Venkata Krishna B
Chennai, October 1

INDIA AND Pakistan will cross the path once again as they will face-off for the gold medal at the Asian Games on Saturday. Having received a bye till quarter-finals, which was washed out because of rain, defending champions India faced Sri Lanka in the semifinals on Thursday, whom they brushed aside with ease.

To put things in context, India are fielding their first-choice T20I squad led by Shreyas Iyer whereas Sri Lanka took the field at Nisshin with three debutants with none of their regulars featuring in the tournament.

Having taken a strong team to Asian Games, the gold is definitely India’s to lose. But still the unfamiliarity with the conditions and the pitch did have the potential to make it challenging. That they took the field with only Jasprit Bumrah as the lone seamer said much about how well they read the conditions. But going into the final, it is worth keeping an eye on the cracks that are all over the pitch.

Having largely remained indoors because of the torrential rains, India were in control the moment they posted 169/7 after being asked to bat first. On a pitch that had plenty of cracks that caused uneven bounce and spinners’ extracted square turn, Indian batsmen’s high-risk, attacking approach reaped their downfall. But Vaibhav Sooryavanshi ensured his team got a headstart with a quickfire 38 off 21 before Ishan Kishan’s unbeaten 80 off 46 deliveries took the game away from Sri Lanka. The chase happened to be a non-starter with Sri Lanka folding up for a paltry 45.

Ishan thunders

It was a day where India had to thank Ishan. India’s top three of Sooryavanshi, Abhishek Sharma and Sanju Samson came up with their usual intent. But on a pitch that was on the slower side, the Sri Lankan spinners ensured Sharma and Samson’s stay was minimal. While Sooryavanshi immediately found the range, it was only when Ishan arrived did India take complete control. Captain Shreyas Iyer too struggled for timing, falling early that put India in a spot of bother. But Ishan calmed any nerves with a typically attacking knock. He used his reverse-sweeps and explored the off-side field when Sri Lanka spinners tried to take the ball away from him. Whenever they landed in his arc, he happily freed his arms and swung straight, ensuring the pressure never got to India even as wickets kept falling. Like the top-order, Axar Patel, Shivam Dube and Tilak Varma didn’t contribute much, leaving the responsibility completely to Ishan. Purely given the conditions, this would be a knock that would give the left-hander plenty too cherish as more than the runs he made, it was his application that mattered the most.

Chasing 170, which was already a tall order, premier pacer Jasprit Bumrah straightaway got down to inflicting damage. In the first over, he trapped Sineeth Jayawardena with one that appeared to go with the angle before it nipped back in like it happened with Keaton Jennings in 2018. Two deliveries later, he found Sohan de Livera edge with Samson grabbing a diving catch. Those two blows in the first over meant Sri Lanka didn’t recover from the calamitous start, as their top three failed to score a run.

Of late, India’s fielding has been under severe scrutiny, but on the day they ticked boxes on the front. The three run-outs including two direct hits were a testimony to that. Once Bumrah provide the breakthroughs the spinners took over. In all, five of their batsmen were dismissed for zero with Nuwanidu Fernando being the lone one to touch double figures. BRIEF SCORES: India 169/7 in 20 overs (Ishan Kishan 80 not out, Vaibhav Sooryavanshi 38) beat Sri Lanka 45 in 9.5 overs (Abhishek Sharma 2/2, Jasprit Bumrah 2/7, Axar Patel 2/8) by 124 runs.

India to open CWC 2027 campaign against Aus

Venkata Krishna B
Chennai, October 1

INDIA WILL open their 2027 ICC World Cup campaign against defending champions Australia on October 7 in Cape Town, which would be the first game of the group stages.

Before the group stages begin with 12 teams, there would be a Super Series – which will be the preliminary round for the three lowest-ranked qualified teams – that will begin on October 2 in Windhoek, Namibia.

The Indian Express understands that as part of the preparations, India will head to South Africa way in advance where they will play the Proteas in a 6-match ODI series at key venues including Johannesburg, Cape Town and Centurion. India, which finished runners-up in the 2023 edition which it hosted, is placed in Group A alongside Australia, Pakistan, Afghanistan, Zimbabwe and Qualifier A. After playing their opening fixture against Australia at the picturesque Cape Town on October 7, they will head to the Bull Ring Wanderers for the high-octane fixture against Pakistan on October 10. Shubman Gill & Co then will take on Afghanistan on October 14 at Centurion. They will then face Qualifier A at Bloemfontein before ending the group stages against Zimbabwe at the Mosi-oa-Tunya Stadium, which is currently under construction near Victoria Falls. The Group B consists of South Africa, England, Sri Lanka, New Zealand, Bangladesh and Qualifier B.

With one year to go for next year’s 50-over World Cup, the International Cricket Council on Thursday released the schedule in Cape Town. The tournament to be co-hosted by South Africa, Zimbabwe and Namibia sees the World Cup returning to Africa after the continent hosted it for the first time in 2003. While Kenya had been one of the co-hosts and made the semi-finals, this time it is Namibia which gets to host the event. Apart from the opening round it will also host three group matches.

In Zimbabwe – Harare, Bulawayo and Victoria Falls will be the host cities while South Africa will remain the major host. The semi-finals will be played at Cape Town and Centurion before the Wanderers in Johannesburg hosts the final on November 21. In all 8 venues in the Rainbow nation will be used.

Super 7 stage

The top three teams from each group and the best fourth-placed team will make the Super 7 phase that has been introduced for the first time.

Unlike the Super 6 stage which existed in the World Cup till the 2003 edition, teams that make the Super 7 stages won’t be carrying forward their points they collect in the group stage.

For the Super 7 stage, which will see each team play six matches between October 25 to November 14, the ICC has also released the seedings. Being the top-ranked team in ODI rankings, India will be A1. The others are A2: Australia, A3: Pakistan, B4: England, B1: New Zealand, B2: South Africa, B3: Sri Lanka.
