81st SESSION OF UNITED NATIONS GENERAL ASSEMBLY

After Trump's 'annihilation' threat, Pezeshkian says Iran won't surrender

Duelling speeches come amid first shuttle talks between US and Iran

Reuters

Dubai, United Nations, September 23

IRAN AND the United States remain far apart on how to end their war but diplomacy must continue, senior Iranian official told Reuters Wednesday, after Iran's president told the UN General Assembly Tehran would never surrender to US pressure.

Iranian President Masoud Pezeshkian, in his speech in New York, condemned what he called "signs of a bullying mentality from US President Donald Trump, who had used the same form on Tuesday to threaten to 'annihilate' Iran."

The duelling speeches at the annual UN gathering bookended the first shuttle talks between the US and Iran for months, though they appeared to have yielded no concessions in the public stance of either side.

towards ending the war.

The senior Iranian official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Tehran was reviewing Washington's response to its peace proposals, which prioritise lifting a US naval blockade on Iranian ports and reopening the Strait of Hormuz.

"There are still many differences between the Iranian and US positions, but diplomacy is continuing," the official said.

US Secretary of State Marco Rubio told reporters on Wednesday that a deal with Iran would involve hard work over a period of time, adding that Trump also had military options.

The US has also said it will impose so-called secondary sanctions against any country that allows Iranian flights after Wednesday. Moheesen Rezaei, secretary of Iran's Supreme National Security Council, told state TV Iran would ensure neighbouring countries' airports could not function if they stop Iranian flights.

In his address to the 193-member General Assembly, Pezeshkian homed in on the US blockade of Iranian ports and on the Strait, conduct for a fifth of global oil and liquefied natural gas shipments before the war.

"It cannot be the case that everyone benefits from the Strait of Hormuz while we are denied access to shipping through this waterway. The permanent deployment of hostile fleets and the expansion of the war will not lead to peace," he said.

"Iran people will not bow to pressure," he added. Iran wants to exert control over the strait and collect fees from ships that use it. Washington rejects this and says the strait must remain fully open to international shipping. Trump on Tuesday argued that he had prevented Tehran from obtaining a nuclear weapon and could "annihilate the Islamic Republic" if no deal is reached to end the conflict.

Pezeshkian on Wednesday reiterated Iran's line that it is not seeking nuclear weapons.

Iranian and US officials held their first known indirect talks on Tuesday since a ceasefire collapsed in July, with Iran's Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi and US envoys Steve Witkoff and Jared Kushner communicating through mediators.

Iranian Foreign Ministry spokesperson Esmail Baghaei said Tehran had conveyed conditions during a two-hour exchange of messages with Washington via Qatari mediator. It included an end to war, a halt to US "acts of aggression" and release of frozen Iranian assets.

The diplomatic contact in New York caused a backlash in Iranian media associated with hardliners.

Golan will remain Syrian land, says Al-Sharaa as he hits out at Israel

President Ahmed al-Sharaa at the 81st session of the UNGA in New York

United Nations, September 23

SYRIA'S INTERIM president harshly criticised Israel's occupation of southern Syria and said the Golan Heights is an inseparable part of his country.

In a speech to the UN General Assembly, Ahmad al-Sharaa said that Israel has carried out more than 500 air and artillery strikes on the country since he took power nearly two years ago.

Israel has also carried out 1,200 land incursions and detained nearly 300 people, Al-Sharaa said.

Al-Sharaa also condemned Israel's control over the Golan Heights, which it captured from Syria in the 1967 Mideast war and annexed in 1981.

The United Nations and most of the international community consider the occupied territory Syrian land and do not recognize Israel's annexation.

"No attempts at imposing a fait accompli can undermine the legitimacy of our state, the sovereignty of our law, or the force of international law," al-Sharaa said. "The Golan will remain a Syrian land."

Israel has occupied a portion of southern Syria since Assad was toppled, calling it a defensive move to prevent potential attacks on its territory.

Macron: Trump's Gaza diplomacy a spectacle of 'shame'

Reuters

United Nations, September 23

FRANCE'S PRESIDENT Emmanuel Macron dismissed US President Donald Trump's claims of having secured peace in Gaza, saying not a single humanitarian corridor had been reopened in the enclave despite the proclaimed peace.

In his final address to the United Nations before leaving office next year, Macron said the world was witnessing a spectacle that should shame everyone, rebuking Trump's portrayal of his Gaza peace plan as a diplomatic triumph.

"A year ago, here in this very hall, about a dozen states had recognized Palestine. I hear the cynicism of some people: Recognition is just a piece of paper, look at the reality," Macron said, banging his fist on the podium. "But what credibility do we have if we continue to remain inactive in the face of Gaza? Some boast of assumed peace. But that peace has not reopened humanitarian access for a single second. Are we simply to stand by and watch this spectacle that should shame us all?"

In response to Macron's criticism, White House spokeswoman Anna Kelly said: "President Trump ended the war between Israel and Hamas, freed all living hostages, returned the bodies of the deceased to their loved ones, and is now leading the implementation of the 20-Point Plan for Peace in Gaza. While others talk, this President took this complex problem head on. No one has done more for peace and stability in region." "Look at what is happening in West Bank, where every day violations are committed. In whose name? Hamas has never operated in the West Bank," Macron said. "What is happening there is building day by day, the impossibility of a project that should be based on respect for legitimate right of Palestinian people to exist," he said.

Rubio: Moscow, Kyiv have voiced interest in 'limited ceasefire'

Reuters

United Nations, September 23

UKRAINE AND Russia have both voiced an interest in a limited ceasefire involving grain and energy-related targets, US Secretary of State Marco Rubio said on Wednesday after meeting Russian Foreign Minister Sergei Lavrov in New York.

"I think both sides have expressed an interest in some limited ceasefire that involve grain and energy. Obviously, you know, that won't be easy either," Rubio told reporters.

Russia has given no public indication it is ready to agree a maritime or energy truce with Ukraine and it was not clear if Rubio was suggesting there had been movement on the Russian side after his talks with Lavrov.

Rubio noted it was a particular challenge that energy strikes were at the core of both countries' tactical priorities in their war, which is now in its fifth year.

Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy, who was expected to address the General Assembly later on Wednesday, met US President Donald Trump on Tuesday and said they had discussed a ceasefire on energy-related targets.

The Ukrainian president told leaders at United Nations earlier that Kyiv was ready for a maritime truce in the Black Sea based on proposals such as by Egypt, India and Turkey and said it was now up to Russia to respond.

Ahead of the Lavrov-Rubio meeting, the Kremlin said there were no grounds for wider Ukraine peace talks.

"For now, there are no prerequisites for moving on to a peaceful negotiating track, although we, as the Russian side, remain open to peace talks," Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov told reporters.

Trump plans grand spectacle for potentially tense talks with Xi

Reuters

Washington, September 23

US PRESIDENT Donald Trump welcomed Chinese President Xi Jinping to Washington on Wednesday for a three-day visit where the superpowers' tensions over trade, technology and Tehran will play out against a backdrop of pomp and ceremony.

For the Chinese leader's first trip to the US in nearly three years, Trump will greet Xi and his wife on the tarmac when they arrive Wednesday evening at the Maryland military base that hosts Air Force One.

The fanfare was due to include a state dinner with tech luminaries, a White House military ceremony including jet flyovers and a visit to the National Archives where the original Declaration of Independence and Constitution are housed.

Despite their deep disagreements, the two leaders met ahead of the summit, which analysts said seeks to project stability between the world's biggest factory and its biggest consumer.

through during Xi's visit were slim. The countries' 11-month trade truce sunsets in November, but the two sides are at odds on issues ranging from Taiwan to narcotics and rare-earth minerals.

People familiar with the plans said Xi was likely to forcefully raise Beijing's claim to Taiwan, a topic Washington would prefer to avoid, while Trump was likely to maintain firm US export controls despite Xi's objections.

But talks set for Thursday could nonetheless yield deals to lower tariffs in specific sectors, cooperate on drug trafficking and expand military-to-military dialogue.

Trump is expected to seek the release of some Americans and others detained in China, according to the people. The two countries could also agree to talk more on AI, where they are in fierce competition but mindful of growing dangers.

The meeting comes at a difficult moment for Trump, who faces falling approval numbers as public discontent with his war on Iran grows. Xi, while also facing challenges at home, arrives in a seemingly stronger position, with his country's trade engine roaring.

The leaders themselves may not feel they need to compromise, analysts said.

"The president very much believes that over time the US economy is going to grow, the US will get stronger," said Edward Kagan, a former White House official now with Washington's Center for Strategic and International Studies.

WHO chief: Matter of time before US returns to world health agency

Anuradha Mascarenhas

Boston, September 23

WORLD HEALTH Organization (WHO) Director General Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus said he hopes the United States will rejoin the global health agency and disclosed that he has been in talks with US Health and Human Services Secretary Robert F. Kennedy Jr.

"The US leadership is very important and I want to assure you that we have continued to communicate from outside. It is a matter of time until the US joins the WHO," Dr Ghebreyesus told reporters at a Health Coverage Fellowship programme conducted by the Centre for Health Communication at the Harvard T H Chan School of Public Health in Boston.

The US formally notified the WHO of its withdrawal in January 2026, citing concerns over the agency's handling of the COVID-19 pandemic. The move is significant as US has historically been WHO's largest donor, providing both assessed contributions and voluntary funding. During the 2022-23 biennium, the US contributed $1.284 billion, according to WHO.

US funding has supported programmes ranging from emergency response and polio eradication to HIV, tuberculosis, immunisation, maternal and child health and other public health initiatives. WHO has said the loss of US support has created major funding gaps, forcing the agency to reprioritise programmes and contain costs.

Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus

however, extends beyond money. Dr Ghebreyesus pointed to the expertise and global reach of institutions such as the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the National Institutes of Health. "No other organisation can replace what WHO does," his chief said, pointing to its role in coordinating responses to major health crises such as Ebola. "We prefer to play a positive role because US leadership is important," he said.

Speaking ahead of the second United Nations General Assembly high-level meeting on "Pandemic Prevention, Preparedness and Response" on September 25, Dr Ghebreyesus said the world must not lose sight of the lessons of COVID-19, when health systems were overwhelmed and inequalities were exposed. "Of course, we can never say that the world is prepared enough for the next pandemic," he said, while adding that global health security has never been strengthened since COVID-19. He cautioned against "politicising" or "weaponising" pandemics.

Harvey Weinstein sentenced to 15 years in prison for 2006 sexual assault in New York

Associated Press

New York, September 23

HARVEY WEINSTEIN, the disgraced movie mogul, was sentenced in Manhattan to 15 years in prison Wednesday for a felony sex crime in another #MeToo reckoning.

Weinstein's sentencing for sexually assaulting one-time TV production assistant Miriam Haley followed a legal odyssey spanning more than six years. His 2020 conviction was overturned by New York's highest court, citing testimony from other women whose allegations weren't part of the case. A second jury found Weinstein guilty again at a retrial last year.

powerful figures in the entertainment industry, Weinstein was an Oscar-winning producer whose hits included Shakespeare in Love, Pulp Fiction and Chocolat. But his downfall came quickly after sexual assault allegations in 2017 set off the #MeToo movement.

Weinstein, 74, is expected to appeal. He is now likely to remain behind bars until at least his late 80s. He has denied rape or sexually assaulting anyone. Seated in a wheelchair, he was quickly wheeled out of the courtroom after the sentencing, while some of his accusers hugged and brushed away tears.

Weinstein faced up to 25 years in prison for sexually assaulting Haley at his Manhattan apartment in 2006. He has already served more than six years as his case has cycled again and again through the criminal justice system. Haley gave her account of the assault at two trials, and addressed the court just before Weinstein was sentenced. "Having been sexually assaulted by Harvey Weinstein has had a devastating effect on my life and sense of security that may never go away. Making the decision to speak up will have me looking over my shoulder for years to come," Haley said. "It's a life sentence for me."

"I've been further traumatized in exercising my right to hold him accountable. All of this traces back to his actions," she said, adding she thought about ending her pursuit of justice.

Minutes later, Weinstein apologized in court to those he may have hurt. "I do have remorse for Miriam Haley's pain, but I have to reiterate my innocence," he told the judge

'Say our name, Naoero': A nation renamed stands up at the UN

Associated Press

New York, September 23

HIS VOICE: forceful and proud, he rose in front of the world's largest gathering of leaders on behalf of his nation and announced that he had something important to say.

The tiny South Pacific island nation of Nauru, its president said, had altered its name - and reclaimed its heritage in the process.

President of Naoero David Ranabek Adeang at the 81st session of UNGA on Tuesday. AP

"There are moments in the life of a nation when its people are called to remember who they have always been," Adeang said in his speech at the UN General Assembly in New York. "This is such a moment for us."

Though the names are similar and, in essence, the same word, the shift in spelling and pronunciation represents the nation's effort to recast - rebrand, even - itself for its own people as much as for the outside world.

He called it not a change but an effort to "affirm a truth". "For many years, the world has known our country as Nauru. Nauru is how our name sounded to those who found it hard to say, and the world kept it," Adeang said. "But it is not the name our people used among themselves."

The nation, an eight-square-mile island with about 12,000 people, became independent in 1968 after longtime rule under the United Kingdom, New Zealand, Australia and Germany.

It announced the renaming in August after signalling its intent in February.

The country's international code is changing from NRU to NRO and its people will now be known as dei-Naoero instead of Nauruan. Commonly known abroad by the pronunciation of Now-ro, the new name is spoken as Now-ero.

A name, obviously, is a pivotal and intimate expression of a nation's identity on any stage, domestic or international.

Adeang's remarks Tuesday reflected this as he carefully pronounced the name to differentiate it from its former pronunciation.

"We do not make this choice to erase our past. We make it because we honor it," he said.

"That name carries the memory of our ancestors, our language, and our identity. It has been there all along. Never lost, never absent. Today, we restore Naoero."

And then, after completing his address about the issues that face his people - rising seas, economics, respect on the global stage - he concluded his address with three words: "Say our name."

WITH EVERY BJP victory, Opposition parties have been increasingly critical of the Election Commission of India (EC) alleging infirmities in the electoral process — from "fauty" rolls, SIR "intimidation" to "selective" application of the Model Code of Conduct.

The revelations in the investigation published by The Indian Express Wednesday of the divide within reshaped that criticism in two significant ways.

When a mother 'can't cope': Behind Bengaluru woman who 'killed' newborn twins

Atiya Firdos
Bengaluru, September 23

THE TRIAL of Lindsay Clancy, the mother accused of killing her three small children in Massachusetts, US, has caught world attention as "America's saddest murder trial", and prompted a debate on the mental condition her lawyers say she was suffering from — postpartum psychosis.

It's not a condition that Ramelinggappa S H, 50, a real estate dealer based in Talaghattapura in Bengaluru, had heard of. But, he says, he could see his wife Umadevi, 40, was "struggling".

The symptoms had lasted at least two-and-a-half months, beginning six weeks after Umadevi delivered her twin daughters. Their birth, on May 5, came after a long wait for the couple and one round of failed IVF. On September 1, Umadevi allegedly drowned the four-month-olds, and was stopped on time as she was trying to kill herself.

Ramelinggappa said his wife Umadevi appeared to be coping after the birth of the twins, changes in her behaviour were evident after a while. She began sleeping and eating poorly, became withdrawn and repeatedly told her husband and mother-in-law that she was "frightened" of the babies and did not feel capable of caring for them. At times, she said she wanted to send the children to an ashram or go there herself, he says.

Geetha Desai, Professor of Psychiatry at NIMHANS and professor in charge of its Mother-Baby Unit, says these are symptoms typical of postpartum mental illness. "Women with postpartum depression may experience persistent sadness, anxiety, exhaustion, loss of appetite and difficulty sleeping. Some may also develop a deep sense of inadequacy and feel that they are not capable of caring for their baby," Desai adds.

Umadevi, who had come to NIMHANS earlier too for treatment, is back at the institute after the death of the twins.

While the Bengaluru Police has registered a case in connection with the deaths and Umadevi's attempt to take her own life, she is under psychiatric care and her medical condition is being assessed before further course is decided.

Could the deaths have been averted?

Sources familiar with Umadevi's case say the tragedy could have been prevented had she got medical help on time.

Ramelinggappa says they tried, as best as they knew. He and his mother took her to the bulk of the care of the twins as Umadevi battled symptoms, and consulted a psychiatrist in Bengaluru. Umadevi met the psychiatrist, but there was no improvement. So, on August 8, the family took her to NIMHANS.

Ramelinggappa says the 40-year-old was assessed for postpartum depression, prescribed medication, and advised inpatient psychiatric treatment. But Umadevi refused admission.

"She had seen patients being physically restrained and was afraid the same would happen to her. Her condition also kept fluctuating. On some days she appeared normal, while on other days she was withdrawn, anxious and struggled to eat or sleep," Ramelinggappa says, describing the ups and downs which also lie at the heart of the Clancy case. The family and ex-husband of Clancy — who is paralysed from waist down after throwing herself out of a window after allegedly killing her children — have sued her doctors for "medical malpractice", saying they missed the extent of her troubles.

The day of the incident, Ramelinggappa was at home till about 12.20 pm, when he had to

CEC must go: Opp

Congress, Aam Aadmi Party (AAP), Mamata Banerjee's Trinamool Congress (TMC), the Samajwadi Party were among those who addressed press conferences on the ECI's conduct.

These press conferences were in some ways coordinated — sources said the leaders of the Opposition parties exchanged notes throughout the day, keen to devise a strategy to keep the heat on.

The Opposition parties put forward three key demands: the removal of CEC Kumar, an impartial investigation supervised by the top court into the working of the ECI, and halting of the SIR exercise.

"We demand Gyanesh Kumar's immediate removal and a Supreme Court-monitored impartial investigation to expose the rot that has destroyed the ECI's credibility," Congress leader K C Venugopal said.

His senior party colleague P Chidambaram said "all decisions of the ECI in recent years should be reviewed by a Parliamentary Committee."

In Lucknow, SP leader Akhilesh Yadav asked the Supreme Court to take suo motu cognizance of the matter.

And in Kolkata, the TMC's

Akhishkek Banerjee said the CEC must be removed immediately and a court-monitored investigation must be ordered.

"When grave questions affecting the democratic process are repeatedly raised and yet remain unheard, it inevitably raises questions about institutional impartiality. The Supreme Court cannot look away. The buck stops there. While the CJI-led Bench act? Banerjee said.

In Chennai, DMK chief M K Stalin demanded that "a fair and thorough investigation" should be carried out into "everything that has transpired within the Election Commission", and "that those responsible should be held accountable".

In June this year, 23 Opposition parties had written to Chief Justice of India (CJI) Justice Surya Kant that they believed "democracy is in jeopardy" because of the manipulation of the elections and partisan conduct by the ECI.

CEC Kumar's "brazenly biased conduct", and his "open, unabashed support of the BJP during the course of and in the outcome of electoral processes", was a matter of grave concern, the Opposition said in their letter to the CJI.

Earlier in March, as many as 63 members of Rajya Sabha and 130 of Lok Sabha had moved a motion seeking Kumar's removal. The motion was rejected by the chairs of both Houses on April 6.

On April 24, the Opposition moved a fresh notice in Rajya Sabha seeking the removal of Kumar for "acting in a partisan manner". The notice remains pending before the Chairman.

The parliamentary process for the removal of the CEC is akin to the impeachment of a judge of a constitutional court — it is lengthy and depends on the numerical strength of parties in the House.

But the revelations in The Indian Express have given the Opposition the opportunity to launch a political campaign.

Leader of Opposition in Lok Sabha Rahul Gandhi, who has repeatedly alleged "vote theft by the BJP" and "collusion by the ECI", is likely to address a press conference on Thursday.

"Vote theft is a crime against the Indian people and must be put back on our Constitution. The BJP, RSS and EC who organised it have committed an act of treason. Justice will be served," he said.

Congress leader and Lok Sabha MP Priyanka Gandhi Vadra also said that if the CEC was aware of elections being rigged and had allowed it to happen, it was "treachery" and "an act of treason".

In Kolkata, Mamata Banerjee said fresh Assam elections should be held in West Bengal with the pre-SIR voter list, claiming that the BJP and the ECI had "looted" the polls held earlier this year.

In Patna, RJD leader Tejashwi Yadav claimed that Assembly elections in both Bihar and West Bengal had been rigged, and should be held afresh.

Akhilesh Yadav said governments formed during the period when the ECI was "not functioning impartially" were "unconstitutional".

While all Opposition parties sought the removal of Gyanesh Kumar, AAP chief Arvind Kejriwal, Mamata Banerjee, and Shiv Sena (UBT) leader Uddhav Thackeray also demanded the CEC's arrest.

"There will be protests across India until such time as Gyanesh Kumar remains CEC. He must be immediately arrested and put behind bars. The chair of the CEC is not for a person like him. This is another battle for freedom, this time from the compromised CEC, and the BJP that has destroyed India," Mamata said.

CEC Kumar should be suspended immediately, Rajya

Sabha MP and former Union Minister Kapil Sibal said called for an FIR. "If the decisions are not taken by the majority of the Election Commission, then it is not a decision of the Commission. So, therefore, all decisions taken by the Commission so far without reference to the majority of the Commission must be declared null and void," he said.

Thackeray said "Gyanesh Kumar should be immediately sacked and jailed", and thanked Sandhu and Joshi for putting their objections on the record, which he said "exposed" Kumar before the country.

He also called for the cancellation of the "wrong decisions" taken by the poll panel, and demanded a probe into its functioning.

Kejriwal demanded Kumar's immediate arrest and prosecution for treason, and said all elections held over the past few years should be cancelled and conducted afresh.

The Cockroach Janta Party, the main trigger behind the Jantar Mantar protests in the capital in July, sought to give its weight behind the campaign to seek accountability in the ECI. Founder Abhiraj Dipke said that the BJP's key team had cancelled their scheduled programs to head to the capital since taking on the CEC was "totally worth the hustle..."

'Differing views'

Instructions and initiatives given only one part of the picture". It added that "not only the three Commissioners, but every officer of the Commission is fully authorized to give his suggestions to the Commission for improving the electoral system."

However, the statement did not say who approved the controversial change to Form 6, why was no action taken even after the Commission had warned that it was "illegal. Or, who authorised the lakhs of appeals filed on behalf of the ECI against restored voters in West Bengal, why the two Commissioners' proposal for an audit of ECI Net went unanswered, or why the full Commission did not meet between May and August."

Incidentally, it did not respond to the questionnaire sent by The Indian Express on September 21.

On the electoral-roll software, the Commission said its digital platforms "operate under strict data security protocols to prevent unauthorised tampering" and that Electoral Registration Officers and District Election Officers "function as per statutory powers for registration and deletion under law".

Election Commissioner Sukhbir Singh Sandhu's August 14 note, however, recorded that officers were reporting they "don't have proper and complete access to the ERONet portal," and that the Director General of IT "doesn't have any legal authority to restrict" them.

The Commission's assertion that decisions were unanimous leaves unanswered how the objections recorded by the two Commissioners fit into that process.

One example is Form 6. On May 16, Election Commissioner Vivek Joshi recorded on file that the form "cannot be altered without making amendments in the Registration of Electors Rules, 1960" and advised sending the proposal to the Government. Sandhu concurred on May 19.

In July, the SIR declaration appeared on the online form anyway. Sandhu learnt of it from The Indian Express's July 12 report. On August 13, he wrote that the change had been made "in spite of these very clear views expressed by two Election Commissioners," called it "unauthorised/illegal" and directed that it "must be reversed immediately". As of Tuesday, the question remained on the form.

A second example is the work-allocation order of July 28. It was issued within hours of a Senior Deputy Election Commissioner being given temporary charge of the Administration Division and changed, in the Election Commissioners' words, the allocation "especially with regard to IT/ICT". Joshi wrote that it was issued "without discussing or informing the revised allocation of work with the Commission or the undersigned". When he asked for the file, he wrote, "It was not provided".

On July 29, both Commissioners wrote separately to the Cabinet Secretary, calling the order a "clear violation of Section 18(1) and 18(2)" of the 2023 Act and seeking action against the officer. On July 30, they jointly set aside the new allocation.

The Commission's press note does not mention the order, the two letters to the Cabinet Secretary or the subsequent reversal.

The Express investigation, published Tuesday, was based on internal notes and letters from October 2025 to August 2026 in which Election Commissioners Sukhbir Singh Sandhu and Vivek Joshi recorded that a statutory voter registration form was changed against their written advice, that control of the electoral roll software had been centralised in the Commission's IT division and that the deletion of lakhs of athenals had been filed in West Bengal without their knowledge of who authorised them, and that a work-allocation order had been issued without the Commission's approval, prompting both to write to the Cabinet Secretary. Their most serious notes were copied by the Chief Election Commissioner Gyanesh Kumar.

with senior officers and informed them that he had earlier been caught by local police on allegations of eve-teasing. However, since no complaint was filed, he was released," said a source.

When contacted, DCP (South-East district) Vineet Kumar said: "The police staff have details of all local ruffians, and Asif's details were also available with them."

The girl, and the 17-year-old boy who was with her at the time of the incident, had told police that the accused posed as police personnel and even used "police terminology" when "questioning" them.

After identifying Asif, police found that his phone was switched off. With the help of technical surveillance and intelligence, they established his location at a DDA park and apprehended him early on Tuesday morning, said sources. Asif was shot in the leg during an alleged encounter; police said he opened fire at them.

"During questioning, Asif told police that on the day of the incident, he had gone to the park after dropping his daughter. Police are trying to find out if there are others who may have been assaulted or harassed by him," said sources.

Following Asif's arrest, the other two accused, Hemant, a lawyer, and his brother, Mukesh, a B.Sc. student, were also arrested.

Sources said investigators are also looking into whether Asif misused his past proximity to police personnel to evade suspicion in the area. Police, however, maintained that his earlier role as an informer did not give him any protection. "Anyone found to be involved will face action as per law," an officer said.

According to sources, the incident occurred around 7.30 pm on Monday, when the three accused confronted the 17-year-old at the park. They allegedly posed as police personnel and said they had recorded a video of them, said sources.

"Hemant, a practising lawyer who is preparing for the judiciary examination, threatened to book the girl's friend in a POCSO case. Hemant and Mukesh then took the boy to a nearby location while Asif allegedly raised the issue of a video recording," said sources, adding that the other two accused allegedly raped the girl later.

"After the assault, they threatened the girl and her friend with dire consequences and told them that a police vehicle was coming to the area. They told them to leave the spot," said sources.

After exiting the park, the girl and her friend boarded an auto-rickshaw and made a call to the police control room. Police reached them soon after. Sources said the girl was scared, but she was counselled and encouraged to report the matter.

Satheesan's chopper rides kick up row, faces flak from Opposition

Thiruvananthapuram: Four months into office, Kerala CM V D Satheesan appears to be confronting uncomfortable Opposition questions on propriety, transparency and conflict of interest — mostly over sponsored chopper rides for his official and personal trips. This week, Satheesan's decision to take a chartered aircraft to Nilambur in North Kerala's Malappuram district to assess the flash floods has come under intense Opposition scrutiny.

On Monday, Satheesan took a private aircraft to Nilambur, a region which falls within the Wayanad LS seat represented by Priyanka Gandhi. Since then, Opposition parties CPI (M) and BJP have demanded that Satheesan disclose the names of the sponsors. "I'm in charge of disaster management," he said. "I had gone to Malappuram by a helicopter arranged by a private person. He is a Keralaite, and what's wrong with the arrangement? Why should they name and drag them into controversies?"

They are not going to seek any favours from the government, and we are not going to give them any favours."

Goa

The earlier decisions to strike them off "have to be reversed," the email said. But the EROs could not reverse those decisions through the software (ECI-Net). Reason: the permission to do so was controlled from Delhi.

The next day, the Commission's "Now, figures from the recent Bengal polls will also be presented," he said.

He attacked the Opposition claim that it lost in Bengal because voter names were deleted from the electoral rolls during the SIR process. "Another Indian Express article that examined 20 Assembly constituencies in West Bengal that witnessed the highest voter deletions shows that TMC won the most seats here — 13. The prepared by its ERO, usually the sub-divisional magistrate, who hears every appeal and objection and decides every name. Since January, every electoral roll in the country has sat on ECI-Net, the platform the Commission launched to bring its systems together, and its roll-management module, ERO-Net. What an ERO can do on it is decided by permissions set in the Commission's software."

An investigation by The Indian Express into the working of the Commission over the past year has found that Election Commissioners Sandhu and Joshi recorded, in notes from November to August, that the centralised control of the software was taking the roll out of the EROs' hands, where the law puts it. Joshi wrote in May of the gradual centralisation of the electoral roll database.

Sandhu wrote in August that EROs, DEOs and CEOs "don't have proper and complete access to the ERONet portal", and that "DGIT doesn't have any legal authority to restrict proper and complete access and freedom to operate, as given by law, to the statutory authorities."

When ERO's decision doesn't count

The Commission's answer to every roll objection is to refer it to a division or grandparent on the roll from the last SIR, such as a parent's name that doesn't match, an age gap between parent and child of under 15 or over 50 years, an age that doesn't progress correctly between the old roll and the new, or a case where the elector submitted no document, or only a self-declaration. On January 29, in the SIR batch of petitions, a Supreme Court bench of Chief Justice of India Surya Kant and Justice Jyotsna Singh ordered that the names of those flagged for logical discrepancies be displayed at gram panchayat bhavans, public places, taluk-level sub-division offices and urban ward offices, "with the brief reason of discrepancy" — and that those affected be allowed ten days to submit documents or objections and be heard.

The order was about Tamil Nadu, but the court said it expected the Commission to "enon behalf of the Congress... Seshaan had used terms such as 'donkeys' and 'rascals' to describe fellow commissioners appointed alongside him," he said.

Patra also cited the examples of M S Gill who served as Election Commissioner and CEC from 1998 to 2014. He later became a Congress Rajya Sabha member and a Minister; J C Lyngdoh who served as CEC from 2001 to 2004; and Navin Chawla. "What position did Sonia Gandhi hold when she appointed Navin Chawla as an Election Commissioner? This was in 2005. He later became CEC N Gopalawami wrote a letter to the then President Pratibha Patil stating that Navin Chawla should be removed from the post," he said, adding that Chawla was, however, elevated as CEC.

"Overall, it must be decided whether democracy is threatened when three officials exchange correspondence, share their respective views and concerns, and ultimately arrive at a conclusion through consensus, or whether democracy consists of writing letters in the same language and then arriving at the same conclusion. There could be no better time for democracy than the present," Patra said.

He pointed out that the Supreme Court, on May 27, 2026, directly upheld the legal validity of the SIR. "But if there is no trust in the Supreme Court, no trust in the Election Commission, and no trust in EVMs, then one must place trust in the people. It is the people who cast their votes, and it is the people who decide whether a party wins or loses," he said.

"Irregularities and scams originated from the Congress itself... KVK Sundaram served as Election Commissioner from 1968 to 1967. He was made Chairman of the Law Commission and was awarded the Padma Vibhushan. Nagendra Singh served as Election Commissioner from 1972 to 1973 and was awarded the Padma Vibhushan," Patra said.

"R K Trivedi served as Election Commissioner from 1982 to 1985. He was awarded the Padma Vibhushan and was also appointed Governor... T N Seshan served as Election Commissioner and CEC from 1990 to 1996... he contested an election no difference, because the system that records the roll answers to a division in Delhi, and the division did not act even when the Commission's own Deputy Election Commissioner told it to.

The Indian Express sent a questionnaire to Seema Khanna, who heads the division as EC's DG IT, asking why the rollback facility was not enabled for Goa before the final roll. There was no response.

What the SC ordered, and what Goa did

"A 'logical discrepancy' is not a finding that someone is not a voter. It is a mismatch the Commission's software throws up when it tries to link an elector to a parent or grandparent on the roll from the last SIR, such as a parent's name that doesn't match, an age gap between parent and child of under 15 or over 50 years, an age that doesn't progress correctly between the old roll and the new, or a case where the elector submitted no document, or only a self-declaration."

Earlier in the day, Solicitor General Tushar Mehta, appearing for Roopam, told the bench that the High Court passed strictures without hearing Roopam.

"Without notice to the DM, Noida, some strictures are passed and a cost of Rs5 lakh is imposed," he said. "Even on merits, the role of DM is completely different. This, in my respectful submission, was not called for."

It is one thing to quash the order of detention, quite another to castigate the officer who has passed the order," Mehta said, adding that "there are several layers before the DM forms an opinion. There are several administrative, hierarchical layers."

Roughly 10 minutes into the session in the courtroom, the video was muted.

Appearing for the Uttar Pradesh government, Senior Advocate Mukul Rohatgi said the High Court order was "completely uncalled for".

Also discussed the Gulf and Ukraine situations," Jaishankar said in a post on X after the meeting. He is leading the Indian delegation for the 81st session of the UNGA.

Rubio, in his post, said: "Together, we are building on the US-India strategic partnership and coordinating on key regional priorities and upcoming multilateral efforts."

Trump signed into law the SRIA last week, giving himself the authority to impose tariffs of up to 100% on countries that continue to buy Russian oil and gas. India and China are among the major purchasers of Russian crude. India has said that it "remains firmly committed to ensuring energy security for its 1.4 billion people" and warned of "potential implications" for the bilateral relationship "with the US."

The US move comes at a time when Delhi and Washington are trying to firm up a bilateral trade deal after months of negotiations.

"We've also been clear that we think that countries that are supporting that effort need to think about that and say, 'are we actually making the situation worse?'", Pigott said. In any case, IT system cannot block necessary action as per the directions of SC, please facilitate the desired action to publish EROs/AEROs and conveyed to you in these emails."

FEBRUARY 21: The final roll was published. The 97 were not on it.

Who are the 97, why it's a big deal for them

Sixty-five of the 97 are from Taleigaon, the seat that was held by the BJP's Jennifer Monserate, who passed away in July 2025. The rest are from St Cruz, Cumbarjua, Priol, Margao, Benaolim and Velim assembly seats. For a Goa, being off the roll costs more than a vote. Several state schemes use the electoral roll to establish eligibility. The Goa Mediclaim Scheme, which funds super-speciality treatment not available in government hospitals (dialysis, angioplasty, open-heart surgery, transplants, chemotherapy, cochlear implants) is open only to voters of the state. When the names did not go, the electoral officers on the ground told these voters to apply afresh on Form 6, the form for new voters.

'Nothing changed since Dec 16, 2012': DU students protest over women's safety

Sophiya Mathew
New Delhi, September 23

RENEWED ALARM over concerns related to women's safety in the Capital — after a 17-year-old girl was allegedly gangraped in a South Delhi park earlier this week — brought around 200 students from colleges of Delhi University (DU) out on streets on Wednesday. For some, the incident has been a reminder of December 16, 2012 gangrape. Even after more than a decade, the situation remains the same, they said.

The protest started near the Lady Shri Ram college for Women, which is in proximity to the site of the incident, and demonstrators also included students from other colleges, including Miranda House and Garg College, as well as those from Dr BR Ambedkar University and some DU faculty members.

"Down with the patriarchy": this was among the slogans that rented the air as the march moved towards a police "Pink booth". "This is not an LSR issue... We are our own voice. It's not the first time that it is happening and men have the audacity to blame women for stepping out at night and only know how to police women," said one of the organisers, her face covered with a yellow scarf.

Ananya, a first-year student at LSR, said she often feels unsafe when she leaves college late after theatre practice. "Men near this booth stand and make obscene gestures when they see women," she alleged. "The issues are not new. Even in our time women's safety was a key concern. Now the situation has worsened," she said.

She also recalled incidents around Holi, saying men would throw water balloons into women's colleges or hostels. In 2018, students from colleges, including LSR and Jesus and Mary College, protested after balloons allegedly containing semen and urine were thrown at women ahead of Holi.

Wednesday's march moved along the Ring Road, past neighbouring institutions including the Rajkumari Amrit Kaur College of Nursing (RAKCON). First-year B.Sc Nursing students residing in the RAKCON hostel in Lajpat Nagar said they had been instructed by teachers to move in groups when stepping outside the campus. "It's our first year. The teachers have clearly warned us that whenever we need to step out, we must move in groups even for small errands," said Ngawang Gatso, a first-year B.Sc Nursing student from Utarakhanda.

Tenzing Pamo, also a first-year student, said, "Stepping out is unavoidable. We definitely feel safer when we step outside together."

Their batchmate Yangzom, a first-year B.Sc Nursing student from Tibet, said, "It has barely been a day since we arrived, and the very first instruction we received was about stepping out cautiously. With everything happening in the area, our seniors and faculty emphasised that no one should walk around alone outside the gates." Walking with the protesters was Yakshina Sharma, a 2025 graduate of DU's Campus Law Centre and now an advocate practising at the Delhi High Court.

"If the most upscale localities, near Kalkaji and LSR, can't keep women safe, where in this city are we supposed to feel secure?"

For Sharma, this incident had brought wider concerns over women's safety into focus. "It is horrifyingly reminiscent of the December 16 gangrape incident. This means nothing has changed since. It's that same mindset that men can 'discipline' women on the streets. She was also accompanied by a male friend. If Delhi cannot ensure women are safe in the most upscale, most prestigious areas then women are not safe anywhere," she said.

'Few PCR vans, dark roads a concern': LSR students

Sophiya Mathew
New Delhi, September 23

STUDENTS OF Delhi University's Lady Shri Ram College for Women have raised concerns about safety around the campus, including the "absence of PCR vans, a non-functional Pink Booth, lack of streetlights and vehicles occupying footpaths".

This came after a 17-year-old was allegedly gangraped and hours after a police encounter near the college's back gate.

An online general body meeting was organised by the Students' Union on Tuesday night to discuss these concerns, as many students live in the vicinity and regularly use the surrounding roads and lanes. The college has an intake of around 4,000 students.

Police patrol vans

The availability of police assistance around the college was among the key concerns.

Students raised the alleged "unavailability of PCR vans, particularly around the college and during times when students may require police assistance" and a "non-functional Pink Booth".

They also called for closer coordination between different agencies involved in student safety. The minutes recorded the need for "greater coordination between police officials, college administration, security guards and the Students' Union so that student concerns can be directly communicated and followed up".

Students also discussed approaching the police over why the college administration and security guards were not informed about the encounter in the early hours of Tuesday.

'Delayed communication'

Students also claimed there was "lack of timely communication regarding the incident". They questioned why they were not informed about the police encounter when it had occurred several hours before the start of the college day, and why many of them learnt about it only after reaching campus.

The minutes said, "Given the seriousness of the incident and its implications for student safety, students felt that the administration should have proactively issued an official statement and communicated the situation to students at the earliest." They called for a clear, timely and reliable communication mechanism so that "students receive verified information and appropriate safety advisories without unnecessary delay".

Vulnerable road stretches

Students flagged the back road as a particular safety concern, especially for those who leave campus late.

"Streetlights on the back road are an important concern, as the road is regularly used by students for commuting, particularly by members of performing societies who may leave campus late in the evening," the minutes state.

The installation and improvement of streetlights were also discussed.

Students also raised concerns about cabs and autos "occupying footpaths", saying this made them uncomfortable while walking. They emphasised the importance of maintaining "accessible and safe pedestrian pathways".

They also raised concerns about a vulnerable stretch towards Kailash Colony, suggesting that it be monitored regularly so they "do not feel unsafe or targeted".

Security at college gates

According to the minutes, students expressed the need for heightening gate-level security. They called for "sensitisation workshops for security guards" and an "adequate number of guards at both college gates".

The minutes also stated that guards should be "active, vigilant and attentive to their surroundings, particularly during late hours".

Students also sought "strict and consistent checking of individuals entering the college premises". Anusha Garg, president of the Students' Union, said around 400 students attended the meeting. "Safety cannot be something we start talking about only after something goes wrong," she said.

"Students should know what to look for before choosing a place, who to reach out to when something doesn't feel right, and most importantly, feel that their concerns will actually be heard. For us now, the focus is on taking what students have shared and turning it into something practical and long-term," Garg added.

The Students' Union will hold a meeting with the principal, college administration and authorities to share the concerns.

Separately, specific concerns of hostel students would also be taken up, the Students' Union members said.

Police patrolling sought

The college administration said it was taking steps to strengthen security. Principal Kanika K Ahuja told The Indian Express, "Security personnel are deployed at all gates, and CCTV surveillance across the campus is being continuously monitored and strengthened."

The Principal said the college was also in consultation with the nearby police station and had requested increased patrolling in the lanes adjoining the college, particularly around the back gate and nearby parks.

• POLICE ACTIONS & MEETINGS

379 PEOPLE were apprehended under Section 65 of the Delhi Police Act as police intensified area-dominance and search operations across the Central Range, with teams checking parks, subways, foot-over bridges, flyovers and other public spaces identified as 'vulnerable' spots, as part of an effort to prevent unlawful activities. Additional action was taken under the Delhi Excise Act, Gambling Act, BNSS, POCSO Act.

POLICE COMMISSIONER Anurag Kumar visited the crime scene on Tuesday to assess the park's condition. He has asked officials to maintain vigilance and continue patrolling parks and isolated stretches.

THE DDA AND MCD will jointly conduct a safety audit of all parks in their jurisdiction and submit a report within a week. The decision was taken at a meeting chaired by LG Taranjit Singh Sandhu with the MCD Commissioner, Commissioner of Police and DDA Vice Chairman. CONSPIRACY SECTIONS ADDED IN FIR

3 accused may have planned the crime, porn clips found on phone of one of them: Police

New Delhi, September 23

THE THREE men accused of gang-raping a 17-year-old girl at a DDA park in South Delhi may have planned the crime before they targeted her on Monday evening when she allegedly posed as police personnel when she was out on her birthday with a friend, suspect the investigators.

Delhi Police on Wednesday added sections of conspiracy in the FIR, after recovering a gun, a knife and condoms from Asif, one of the accused in the case, said officers.

A senior officer said that they are investigating if Asif was roaming in the area allegedly with condoms and a knife, because he and his two accomplices, Mukesh and Hemant, intended to target women inside the Astha Kunj Park.

There have been several allegations against Asif from multiple people around the area that he used to harass people repeatedly. We are verifying if he used to carry a weapon and use a similar modus operandi against other women," said a police officer.

Officers also said that multiple porn videos were found on Asif's phone.

The investigation has also revealed that Mukesh and Hemant had allegedly deleted their search history.

The three men, who were arrested on Tuesday, allegedly used a combination of police language, including 'Janab', and threats to convince the teenager and her friend, who accompanied her, that they were dealing with police officers, before sexually assaulting her.

Another police officer said that the accused brothers, Mukesh and Hemant, initially went to an eatery after the incident, before going back to their home in Srinivaspuri.

They then allegedly washed their clothes in bid to get rid of evidence.

Officers also said that the friend of the girl was held by one of the accused inside the park, while the victim was taken to another corner at some distance.

After the incident, the accused warned the girl to not tell anyone about the incident.

New Delhi, September 23

HEMANT SINGH, one of the three men accused of raping a 17-year-old girl at a park in South Delhi, was a law graduate and had been preparing to appear for the judicial services entrance exam for almost a decade, according to police. His brother, Mukesh, a co-accused, is a BSc student. The third accused, Asif, was recently fired from a gym after women complained about his inappropriate behaviour, according to police. All three men, who are aged between 25 and 30 years, were arrested on Tuesday hours after they allegedly committed the crime.

Asif, who had switched to selling vegetables after being fired from the gym, allegedly

Asif had started selling vegetables after he was fired from a gym following complaints from women over misbehaviour, investigators have found had been carrying a gun for the past few months, as he often engaged in petty crimes inside the park, according to officers. Investigators suspect he was involved in multiple snatchings in the park earlier. However, since no formal complaints had been filed against him, police did not take action. He also allegedly harassed women and girls at the park earlier. Some security guards at the park also told police that Asif behaved like a local strongman, often threatening vulnerable people, including girls from economically weaker backgrounds.

Officers said the accused lived in proximity to the park where they allegedly raped the girl when she was out with a friend on her birthday after they intimidated them by allegedly posing as police personnel.

Hemant and Mukesh live with their family in Srinivaspuri, while Asif lives with his wife and parents in Okhla Mandi, said police.

During questioning, Hemant told police that he completed his graduation, BALLB, from Rohtak in Haryana in 2014 and had been preparing for judiciary examinations. His younger brother is enrolled in a college in Palwal. Their father practises law in the courts of Palwal and Faridabad.

However, after obtaining his law degree, Hemant never took up legal practice. For the past two to three years, the two brothers often visited the park in the evening to play. They met Asif a few months ago at the park. Officers said Asif has been accused of harassing women in the neighbourhood too.

Even as neighbours said that Mukesh and Hemant were mostly reticent, the duo recently had an alleged argument over paying the water bill of their building where they live on the second floor.

Before his arrest, Asif sold onions at the Okhla mandi. He had previously worked at a hotel.

'Vote chori' a crime against people, direct attack on Constitution: LoP

Asad Rehman
New Delhi, September 23

THE CONGRESS on Wednesday demanded the removal of Chief Election Commissioner Gyanesh Kumar and accused the ruling BJP and the poll panel of "treason", following The Indian Express investigation into the objections raised by Election Commissioners Sukhbir Singh Sandhu and Vivek Joshi to decisions taken regarding the contentious Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of voter rolls.

Leader of Opposition Rahul Gandhi, who has been questioning the Election Commission and its poll practices over the past months, said on X: "Vote chori is a crime against the Indian people and a direct attack on our Constitution. The BJP, RSS and EC who organised it have committed an act of treason. Justice will be served."

Congress MP Priyanka Gandhi Vadra speaks to mediapersons during her visit to Kerala's Malappuram district on Wednesday. P11

In an interaction with reporters at the Congress office in Delhi, senior Congress leader and Rajya Sabha MP Abhishek Singhvi demanded Gyanesh Kumar's resignation and said the BJP has opened "an office for the murder of democracy". The Congress, led by Gandhi, has been running a "vote chori" campaign against the EC, accusing it of large-scale poll irregularities and working in cahoots with the ruling BJP.

Citing The Indian Express report, Congress said: "We have been saying, Modi has captured the Election Commission. Gyanesh Kumar is Modi's puppet."

The poll panel and the ruling party have rubbished these allegations. At Wednesday's press conference, Singhvi said the issue highlighted in the investigation is "extremely serious".

"It can be fatal for ours and any democracy. It is an example of double bulldozer government where there is an external bulldozer... which assaults all major institutions of India... Apart from that external bulldozer, we have an internal bulldozer — the EC, which has bulldozed his own organisation, his colleagues... He runs it like a feudal lord not answerable to any authority," he said. "The BJP has opened an office for the murder of democracy. On one end, they have posted the CEC, and on the other hand, is the Home Ministry. I will establish this theme. This is a serious matter and is fatal for our republic."

Wayanad MP and Congress general secretary Priyanka Gandhi Vadra, too, said "treason" had been committed.

"This is an extremely serious issue for our democracy. If there are no elections, then where is democracy? If elections are unfair and rigged in any manner, then the Election Commission is assisting in that. If the Election Commissioner is not only aware of it but also allowing it to happen, then it is a very serious assault on democracy. It is an act of treason," she said.

EC exposed, we have seen it in UP: Akhilesh

Maulshree Seth
Lucknow, September 23

SAMA JWADI PARTY (SP) chief Akhilesh Yadav on Wednesday said the differences and objections raised by election officials during the SIR exercise had raised questions not only over the functioning of the EC, but also over recent electoral outcomes and governments formed during this period.

Referring to The Indian Express report, he said, "Election Commission expose ho gaya hai. Humne use Uttar Pradesh mein bahut kareeb se dekha hai (The Election Commission has been exposed. We have seen it very closely in Uttar Pradesh)."

Yadav questioned whether the poll panel could be considered a fair and impartial institution. "Now that it has come to light that, so many times over these months, EC officials did not accept the decisions of the EC, you can imagine how fair and impartial the EC would have been."

have been."

He also questioned whether the functioning of the Constitutional body had implications for governments formed through polls in recent years. "Who is playing with a Constitutional body in order to remain in power? This means the governments formed during this period are unconstitutional governments. They have torn democracy to shreds," he claimed.

The SP chief further linked the issue to his earlier allegations about the 2022 UP Assembly polls. "I had said this in 2022 — that EC officials deliberately identified and removed Samajwadi Party votes. We submitted information through a large number of affidavits, but no action was taken against even a single official," he claimed.

Yadav also alleged irregularities during subsequent bypolls, claiming that officials had been identified and that "bade paina par beinani (widespread cheating)" took place.

'Arrest CEC': Mamata seeks repoll

Express News Service
Kolkata, September 23

FORMER WEST Bengal chief minister Mamata Banerjee on Wednesday launched a scathing attack on the EC, demanding the arrest and criminal prosecution of CEC Gyanesh Kumar.

She also sought fresh Assembly polls in the state with the pre-SIR voter list and announced that her opposition INDIA bloc will launch a nationwide movement to "protect democracy". Banerjee made the remarks in a Facebook Live, following The Indian Express investigation that revealed that two of the three election commissioners had formally objected, at least 14 times over the last 10 months, to decisions and orders linked to the SIR of electoral rolls. Alleging "systemic voter deletion, EVM hijacking and state-sponsored poll manipulation", she said millions of legitimate voters were disenfranchised in Bengal prior to the polls. "Today, the entire country is in turmoil over CEC Gyanesh Kumar, and my first demand is that he should be arrested and criminal proceedings should be initiated against him," she said.

The TMC chief also said that the Opposition had moved an impeachment notice against the CEC earlier this year, but it was turned down in Parliament. "All parties are together in this battle. We submitted an impeachment notice against the CEC, but it was rejected... This is no longer merely about impeachment; criminal action is required."

Cancel recent elections, conduct them afresh: AAP

Express News Service
New Delhi, September 23

THE AAM Aadmi Party described the deletion of voters from the electoral rolls through the SIR process as the "biggest scam in independent India".

Former Delhi CM and AAP convener Arvind Kejriwal described CEC Gyanesh Kumar as the "chief of vote theft" and demanded his arrest. "So far, people in this country had only heard about Narendra Modi and Amit Shah winning elections by vote chori. Today, a story published by The Indian Express has established that they are winning elections through a massive vote scam," he said.

AAP convener Arvind Kejriwal

"The mastermind behind this 'vote chori' is Gyanesh Kumar. We demand that Kumar be arrested and prosecuted. We also demand that all elections held in Delhi, Maharashtra, Bihar, West Bengal and Haryana over the past few years be cancelled and conducted afresh."

Gyanesh Kumar must go, SIR must be halted, says Stalin

Arun Janardhanan
Chennai, September 23

DRAVIDA MUNNETRA Kazhagam (DMK) chief and former Tamil Nadu chief minister M K Stalin said CEC Gyanesh Kumar "must go" and that "he has no right to continue in office".

Sharing the Express report on its Facebook page, Stalin wrote, "The DMK, along with other Opposition parties, has consistently opposed the move to delete crores of voters from the electoral rolls in the name of the SIR. Rushed through just months ahead of elections in State after State, the exercise was riddled with irregularities and sparked widespread unrest, particularly in West Bengal."

"The explosive findings published by The Indian Express today, backed by evidence, have now cast serious doubts over the results of every Assembly election held after the SIR exercise. The investigation reveals that CEC Thiru. Gyanesh Kumar had been acting unilaterally and in secrecy, without the concurrence of the other two ECs... The revelations have severely eroded the credibility of the Election Commission," he wrote.

"...The CEC has no right to continue in office any longer. The DMK demands that he be removed immediately. The SIR exercise must be halted. The DMK demands a fair and thorough investigation into everything that has transpired within the Election Commission and that those responsible be held accountable."

Brittas writes to President, seeks 'urgent intervention', SIR pause

Express News Service
New Delhi, September 23

THE LEFT parties hit out at the BJP on Wednesday following the revelations about the EC's SIR objections and demanded removal of CEC Gyanesh Kumar and an immediate halt to the SIR exercise.

CPI(M) leader and Rajya Sabha member John Brittas said The Indian Express investigation raises serious questions not just about the election process, but also about the integrity of the EC itself. "The disclosures have only strengthened suspicions and concerns that the CPI(M), other Opposition parties and civil society organisations have all along raised since the SIR process was initiated," he wrote.

Brittas has also written to President Droupadi Murmu, seeking her "urgent intervention" on the matter. "With over 13 crore names reportedly struck off draft rolls across 30 States/UTs so far and over 33 lakh Delhi voters issued notices, I have urged that the pending proceedings for removal of the CEC proceed without obstruction, and that the Government take a clear stand before the Supreme Court seeking annulment of the SIR wherever it is found unlawful."

CPI general secretary D Raja said the matter is a "grave crisis" and the CEC was the face of an "electoral purge". "The CPI has consistently warned that governments cannot be allowed to handpick voters in a democracy... CEC has no right to continue, and to restore credibility in the ECI, he must resign."

'CORRECTIVE ACTION IS REQUIRED'

If people's trust in election is lost, what is left in democracy: Omar

Bashaarat Masood
Srinagar, September 23

J&K CHIEF Minister Omar Abdullah on Wednesday said "there is a need for corrective action" and "if people's trust in the election is lost, then what is left in the democracy?"

Speaking to reporters at the Sher-i-Kashmir International Conference Centre in the Valley, he said, "First, I will compliment The Indian Express. This was a very good piece of investigative journalism... I think it opens a lot of questions. We have had persistent complaints about the way in which the ECI has functioned. Before SIR became an issue for the rest of the country, for us, delimitation was an issue," he said. "We believed the process was opaque, the process was flawed, and the entire process was designed to benefit one political party and its friends. Given what has been shown — the internal divisions within the ECI — clearly they say that there is something fishy..."

J&K CM Omar Abdullah

"...There is a need to take some corrective action. Otherwise, if people's trust in the election is lost, then what is left in democracy? The basis of democracy is elections... why should people participate in the elections? So, I think the members of the ECI and the government of India should think about this."

The exercise was successfully tested against the Trinamool Congress in West Bengal, where these meetings were seen to have helped the party's social media blitz during its campaign for the Assembly elections.

Year after Leh violence, cases against 20 are withdrawn

Express News Service Srinagar, September 23

A YEAR AFTER four civilians were killed in police firing after protests turned violent in Leh, Ladakh Lieutenant Governor Vinay Kumar Saxena on Wednesday announced the withdrawal of criminal cases against 20 of the 87 people booked in the aftermath of that incident. This includes Jigmet Dorjay, Rinchen Dadul, Stanzin Namgal and Tsewang Thirchin, who died last year, as per officials.

Withdrawal of criminal cases has remained one of the key demands of Ladakh's representatives during ongoing talks with the Ministry of Home Affairs. This comes a month after the administration had stated that they will be filing closure reports in cases pertaining to 20 of the 87 people booked in the aftermath of the violence on September 24 last year. Out of the 87 identified accused in the rioting cases, 81 were arrested, and criminal proceedings began against them.

Ladakh chief secretary Ashish Kundra had earlier said that nine people had been charged, suggesting that there is evidence of their involvement in the incident. He had also stated that L-G's office had directed the Ladakh DGP to "review the cases of the rest of the people who are still part of the investigation."

On Wednesday, the administration announced withdrawal of more cases, with L-G Saxena stating that the move is in the larger interest of peace, public tranquillity, and social harmony in Ladakh. Following a comprehensive review, the Ladakh police recommended a closure report for 20 individuals.

Jaishankar says institutions meant for a different era continue to reflect power structures of that time

Divya A New Delhi, September 23

THE GLOBAL SOUTH may be in the front row of global crises, but it is in the "back row" of decision-making, External Affairs Minister (EAM) S. Jaishankar said in New York on Tuesday, calling for greater solidarity among developing countries of the region.

Speaking at the High-Level Meeting of Like-Minded Global South Countries and Friends on the sidelines of the 81st United Nations General Assembly (UNGA), Jaishankar said that the meeting is taking place at a time of "considerable global uncertainty".

This uncertainty, he said, is apparent in the many "conflicts and geopolitical tensions, in the disruption of supply chains, in increasing trade barriers, fragmented investment flows, climate shocks, and the fact that international law and rules are under great pressure."

"The Global South may be in the front row of global crises, but in the back row of decision-making," Jaishankar said, noting that institutions created for a different era inadvertently continue to reflect the power structures of that time.

"The Global South needs to be part of decision-making structures that deliberate on issues that directly pertain to our future," the EAM said, adding that in the past year, the world has seen an increase in the number of active conflicts,

2 days after Justice Chavan's exit, Maharashtra UCC panel inducts former IAS officer

Vidheesha Kuntamalla Dehradun, September 23

TWO DAYS after retired Bombay High Court judge Justice R C Chavan resigned from Maharashtra's Uniform Civil Code committee, retired IAS officer Shatrughna Singh, who had attended the panel's September 19 meeting as an adviser, was appointed a member-cum-senior adviser by the Maharashtra government on September 21, The Indian Express has learnt.

Singh is the "non-member" whose presence at the September 19 meeting Justice Chavan referred to in his resignation email, questioning the role of someone who was not part of the seven-member committee.

When contacted by The Indian Express, Singh declined to comment on the matter. Calls to the committee's chairperson, retired Supreme Court judge Justice Ranjana Desai, also did not elicit a response.

It is learnt that Singh is invited by Justice Ranjana Desai to participate in the September 19 meeting as an "adviser". The committee held two meetings in September, and Singh attended only the second, where he was introduced to the members and told he would be giving his inputs, sources familiar with the committee's functioning said.

That meeting was held hours before Justice Chavan submitted his resignation. One of the issues discussed during the meeting was the questionnaire submitted to the website being prepared for public consultation. Sources said, these included changes to the introductory text explaining the UCC to people in Maharashtra and the manner in which the questionnaire would be incorporated into the website for public access.

In his resignation email, Chavan said that the non-member who attended the meeting had pointed out that the website prepared by state officials required further modifications. According to Chavan's account, the chairperson then directed the authorities to make the necessary changes within a week.

India rejects reference to J&K in OIC communique

Divya A New Delhi, September 23

INDIA ON Wednesday categorically rejected references to the Union Territory of Jammu & Kashmir in a joint communique released by the Organisation of Islamic Cooperation (OIC) Contact Group on Jammu & Kashmir, after a meeting was held on the sidelines of the 81st session of United Nations General Assembly (UNGA) in New York.

The statement came hours after Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan had also raised the Kashmir issue during his address to world leaders on Tuesday. Alongside Pakistan, Turkey, Saudi Arabia, Azerbaijan and Niger are part of the 57-member group.

"The OIC has no locus standi to pronounce on matters that are strictly internal to India. The entire Union Territories of Jammu & Kashmir and Ladakh are integral and inalienable parts of India, and no amount of repetition of politically motivated propaganda can change this reality," said a statement by the Ministry of External Affairs (MEA) on Wednesday.

"Repeated endorsement of such motivated narratives only raises serious questions on the credibility of OIC," it said, while rejecting the unwarranted and "factually incorrect" references to India in the joint communique of the so-called OIC Contact Group.

"Instead of offering a platform to Pakistan to peddle its fabricated and motivated propaganda, the OIC will be better advised to counsel Pakistan, which has a well-documented record of supporting and sponsoring terrorism, to look inwards and address the continuing threat of terrorism emanating from territories under its control," the MEA said.

On Monday, Solicitor General Tushar Mehta submitted the status report in the Supreme Court.

● ANNOUNCEMENT COMES FIVE MONTHS AHEAD OF UP ASSEMBLY ELECTIONS. WEEKS AFTER PARTY SUPREMO SAID NEITHER NEPHEW WILL PLAY A POLITICAL ROLE IN THE PARTY

Mayawati does flip-flop before UP polls, gives nephew Ishan key role

After Akash Anand's removal earlier this month, the Bahujan Samajwadi Party was left without a face for younger voters

Lalmani Verma Lucknow, September 23

DAYS AFTER announcing her "antim" (final decision) that neither of her two nephews, Akash Anand and Ishan Anand, will be given any party's national vice-presidency, BSP president Mayawati made another "U-turn" on Wednesday, naming Ishan as the party's new national convener.

Mayawati made the announcement at a meeting of the BSP's national office-bearers in Lucknow, where Ishan, wearing a blue party scarf, touched her aunt's feet to seek her blessings, and got a seat in the front row with all the senior party office-bearers including his father Anand Kumar, the party's national vice-president.

Addressing the meeting, Ishan, 25, expressed gratitude to Mayawati for appointing him the party national convener, assuring the leadership that he will execute his responsibilities with

comes at a time when Akash's political space in the party has shrunk. Akash had earlier held the post of the BSP national convener, but was removed from all party responsibilities by Mayawati earlier this month.

After Akash's removal, the BSP was left without a face that could connect with young voters. "It took over eight months for the party to groom Akash Anand as its young face in the past eight years. Now, Mayawati will have to groom Ishan and that will take time. The situation is challenging for us now because all the parties are trying hard to woo Gen Z voters. But BSP is still trying to bring its own house in order," remarked a BSP leader on Ishan's appointment.

In a statement earlier this month, Mayawati had announced her "final decision" that neither of her two nephews will play a political role in her party. She had then also said Anand Kumar could seek the help of his only daughter, Kumari Deepika Anand, and, if required, entrust her with his party responsibilities in the future.

Days before that, she had appointed Ishan as the chief sector coordinator, a new post created just for him. But he was removed from the post within a week. However, a few days ago, in another U-turn on the role of her family members in the party, Mayawati said her nephew Akash and niece Deepika will no longer be given any responsibility in the BSP. However, she said, Ishan will be given a "respectable role" in the organisation.

In a statement on X on September 20, Mayawati said she had reconsidered involving members of Anand Kumar's family in the BSP and decided to keep Akash and his sister away from the party affairs. "Since his marriage, Akash Anand's conduct and activities at every step have been such that just a few days ago, he had to be separated from the party once again," she said.

On Ishan, Mayawati said he would now be the family member to be taken forward within the BSP. She added that her intention was to ensure that there was no repetition of the circumstances that had arisen around Akash.

Gujarat HC denies interim relief to journalist Ravi Nair

Aditi Raja
Vadodra, September 23

JOURNALIST RAVI Nair will remain in jail as the Gujarat High Court on Wednesday declined interim relief to him and served its order on his plea challenging the bail warrant issued by Gandhinagar District and Sessions Court for failing to personally appear during a hearing in a criminal defamation case filed by Adani Enterprises.

Justice M K Thakker of the Gujarat HC said the court would pronounce its order on September 30 and adjourned the case proceedings to Thursday. When Nair's counsel sought his release pending the order, the court observed that the matter had already been heard and kept for dictation, and therefore "no interim relief is required to be granted". The HC questioned Nair's challenge to the bail warrant, noting it had already been executed. It orally said Nair had not informed the HC he had moved the sessions court seeking regular bail.

From ISRO to founder of one of the world's longest cultural festivals

Thiruvananthapuram,
September 23

FROM SPACE scientist at ISRO to the architect of the Soorya Festival, one of the longest cultural festivals in the world, Nataraja 'Soorya' Krishnamoorthy played many parts during his 75-year-long life. On Wednesday, the life ended with the passing of Kerala's prominent cultural icon and founder of the Soorya Stage and Film Society.

Krishnamoorthy's departure came days before the 48th edition of the Soorya festival was slated to begin its 111-day-long journey on October 1.

Born into a family of engineers in Kerala's Kottayam district, Nataraja 'Soorya' Krishnamoorthy graduated in electrical engineering from TKM College of Engineering, Kollam, and worked at ISRO as a scientist in 1972. Krishnamoorthy worked as a space scientist under veterans of those years — the future President of India, APJ Abdul Kalam. But even during his years there, Krishnamoorthy had a passion for the arts — from founding Soorya Stage and Film Society to Thiruvananthapuram and introducing the first person to introduce the light-and-sound show in Malayalam back in 1978. His Soorya Stage and Film Society would later go global.

In 1999, after working at ISRO for 27 years, Krishnamoorthy took voluntary retirement, immersing himself completely in promotion of art and culture. He eventually became associated with all things art — from dance and theatre to photography, scripting, and directing several productions, and turning sound, light and music into a powerful medium for storytelling.

It was in 1977, when he returned from ISRO, that he founded the Soorya festival, which endeavours to achieve integration through culture, has grown into

Defending Collegium, SC says Govt's remarks 'disquieting'

Flags Centre's 'selective' clearance of names sent for judges' appointments

Ananthakrishnan G
New Delhi, September 23

REJECTING A plea to refer petitions against the 2023 law on the appointment of Chief Election Commissioner and other Election Commissioners to a five-judge Constitution Bench, Justice Dipankar Datta on Wednesday termed as "disingenuous, evasive and disquieting" the Centre's oral submissions that the Supreme Court cannot call for "participation of outsiders" in appointing poll officials when the collegium system which has been criticised as "biased" by the Centre cannot allow an "outsider".

"In the context of the present challenge, reference to the criticism on such a sensitive issue ought best to have been left alone. In the course of the hearing, this Court preferred not to seriously react. The first instinct, too, while writing this opinion, was to be reticent and let such criticism pass. But on a second thought, it is realised that the judiciary cannot always be at the receiving end. A couple of relevant observations in response need to be made, lest the silence be misunderstood as a tacit acceptance by the Court of such unworthy criticism in circulation," Justice Datta wrote.

The response to submissions which were made by Solicitor General (SG) Tushar Mehta on behalf of the Centre came in the court's 70-page split verdict.

The other judge on the bench, Justice S Sharma, however, said the SG's submission was not as a criticism of the Collegium system or regarding the role of the executive in the appointment of Judges... nor initiating any debate regarding the manner in which the system of selection has worked" but one "to the effect that if the Constitution Bench has held that the presence of outsiders in the collegium as violative of doctrine of separation of powers, a similar independence should be read in the executive also and the rules framed under Article 324 be not declared void on the ground either that it does not have any outsider in the Committee of Selection or there is predominance of only executive in the Committee of Selection."

Justice Datta said the submissions sought to "draw a parallel with judicial appointments, has a bearing on the integrity of the institution".

"At every stage prior to the recommendations taking shape, the executive is involved. Whispers are heard in the corridors that unless approval of the [...] however, let whispers remain whispers and not drown the constitutional wisdom that has sustained the institution. What is, however, unmissable is that even at the end of the day, acceptance of the recommendations is within the exclusive domain of the executive; it may, or may not, accept the recommendations. The final say rests with the executive," Justice Datta said.

He also chided the Centre for "selectively" clearing names recommended by the Collegium.

"A sweeping generalisation that the Collegium acts as a law unto itself overlooks the detailed consultative process envisaged under the Constitution. And the intrinsic role of the executive, both at the Centre, and in the states, as well as intelligence and other agencies in the appointment process... and the fact that every appointment bears the imprimatur of the President."

Justice Datta said people "have... been made to believe that the Collegium... comprises judges who appoint judges. And it has become fashionable now, days to blame the Collegium for every infelicitous choice, conveniently forgetting that aberrations are exceptions and not the norm."

He said "this court is left to wonder why, even after the judiciary has been relegated to playing second fiddle to the executive in the matter of appointments of judges, is there still a clamour to induct an outsider at the stage of selection?" and expressed the "hope and trust that henceforth, only judicious and apt choices should be made by the present Collegium, under the able leadership of the CJI."

He stressed, "despite all its opacity and imperfections, the Collegium system still remains the most viable option for safeguarding independence..."

ED breaks open locks of bungalow, raids Satyendar Jain's Chandigarh house

Kanchan Vasdev
Chandigarh, September 23

ENFORCEMENT DIRECTORATE (ED) officials Wednesday evening broke open the locks of government bungalow number 926 in Sector 39 of Chandigarh, where AAP leader and former Deputy Minister Satyendar Jain has been staying, and entered the premises as part of their ongoing investigation linked to alleged irregularities in Greater Mohali Area Development Authority (GMADA) affairs.

Sources said Jain was not present at the residence when ED team arrived. He had chaired a meeting at the residence in the morning in connection with sand mining and left for Delhi later in the day, sources said.

The action comes a day after ED officials conducted searches at GMADA headquarters and other locations in Punjab, Chandigarh, Haryana and Delhi as part of a money laundering investigation involving Delhi-based Tirupathi Infra Projects Pvt Ltd and associated companies.

The ED is examining alleged irregularities in land acquisition, change-of-land-use (CLU) permissions, property auctions and financial concessions allegedly extended to private realtors. The probe has also brought under its scanner decisions relating to acquisition of more than 5,000 acres in Mohali and New Chandigarh, besides changes in land use and alleged manipulation of statutory planning and land acquisition processes.

The AAP condemned ED officials, "They cannot do anything except break the locks. Why are they so desperate? They could have waited for Jain to come back," said an AAP leader.

The party said, "The Centre is trying to disrupt GMADA's functioning and create hurdles for the Bhagwant Mann government's welfare schemes, including the Mawan Dheeyan Satkar Yojna. Central agencies cannot manufacture political support for PM Modi and the BJP in Punjab. The BJP is unable to stop the welfare schemes through political means, so attempts are now being made to create administrative pressure and obstacles. The people of Punjab will not allow these tactics to succeed."

IIT-Bombay student's death: Panel formed to look into circumstances

Express News Service
Mumbai, September 23

AMID MOUNTING pressure from protesting students after the death of 20-year-old Sahil Wakode, IIT Bombay Director Professor Shreshth Kedare said on Wednesday that the Board of Governors has set up a 10-member committee to examine circumstances surrounding the alleged suicide on September 18.

He said, "The committee will be headed by Dr Ramesh Venkateswaran," who serves as the Chairman of the Board of Governors, IIT Palakkad.

While Professor Kedare said the institute will later issue an official statement to share information on other members of the committee, sources said it will include Professor K Narayana of the School of Humanities and Social Sciences, Professor Sandip Kumar Saha of the Department of Mechanical Engineering, convener of the institute's SC/ST Students and Staff Cell, and Professor Deepki Kalsi of the Department of Chemistry.

The three student members are Aditya Joshi, general secretary (Hostel Affairs), Dev Arora, overall coordinator of the Student Mentor Programme; and research scholar Devi Lal.

The committee also includes retired IAS officer Vishwanath Girija, former institute vigilance officer Professor K G Suresh of the Department of Physics, and psychiatrist Dr Harish Shetty.

Meanwhile, a sharp divide among sections of IIT Bombay students has come into focus over Professor Doolia's suspension — a common demand from all students has been for an independent and transparent investigation by the institute into the entire episode — from the time Sahil Wakode was allegedly caught using a mobile phone in the examination hall to his suicide minutes later.

Professor Doolia was the invigilator at the exam hall where Sahil was writing his exam. He was allegedly caught using his mobile phone, and hours later, he was found dead in his hostel room.

The committee is directed to submit its report within a week.

Maharashtra drought situation likely to be worse than 1972, says Fadnavis

Express News Service
Mumbai, September 23

MAHARASHTRA is heading for a severe drought which is likely to be worse than that of 1972, Chief Minister Devendra Fadnavis said on Wednesday, adding the government would issue a notification shortly. The CM's remarks came during his day-long tour of drought-prone districts of Latur, Dharsiv and Solapur.

Describing the situation in Latur and Dharsiv in Marathwada region as "extremely serious", the CM said the two districts received only half the normal rainfall this year, and promised all possible assistance to affected farmers. Along with Marathwada region, several other districts in Maharashtra are reeling under severe rain deficit caused by the El Nino, resulting in massive crop loss, the CM said. "There is distress and anguish among farmers. We will provide all possible assistance. There will be no shortage of funds for drought relief," he said.

The financial aid will be directly credited in the bank account of the farmers who are subjected to hardships due to drought like situation, the CM said. "We have gathered all the reports and are taking action accordingly. Our loan waiver scheme is also operational and will not be stopped. We are arranging water and fodder as well," he said.

Fadnavis said the state would issue a Government Resolution on the drought situation before Saturday and initiate relief measures. "Wiping the tears of farmers is the government's first duty. We will seek funds from the Centre under the NDRF norms.

However, farmers will not be made to wait till central funds arrive. The state will provide assistance from its own treasury".

Assistance would also be provided to enable farmers to take up sowing for the rabi season, the Chief Minister added.

On the drinking water situation, Fadnavis said rainfall deficit had severely affected ground water levels and water bodies. "If only 50 per cent rainfall is received, there will obviously be an impact on water in reservoirs

Karnataka karman's body found in nine pieces in car boot in Sharjah, family untraceable

Atiya Firdos
Bengaluru, September 23

JULY 20 was the last time Anil Kundur spoke to his younger brother, Alwin, who lived in Sharjah. When repeated calls to Alwin's phone went unanswered, Anil suspected something amiss and alerted his friend, asking him to check his whereabouts. Initial reports suggested Alwin had left for India. Anil remained unconvinced. Weeks later, his fears were confirmed when Alwin's body, cut into nine pieces, was recovered from boot of his car on August 12.

Alwin, a 51-year-old from Kundapurin Karnataka's Udipi district, had been working at Sharjah Airport for around 14 years. He lived in Sharjah with his wife, Tina, a teacher from Udyavara in Udipi, and their son, a Class 10 student. The whereabouts of Tina and their son remain unknown.

Speaking to the media on Tuesday, Anil said Alwin did not answer his calls after July 20 but sent messages. "This was unusual because he would normally send voice messages. I asked him to call me... but there was no response after that."

Anil contacted Alwin's friend, Manohar, in Sharjah and asked him to visit his brother's flat. According to Anil, watchman told Manohar that Alwin and his family had gone to India. HR officials at Alwin's company also initially told the family that he had travelled to India.

Anil allegedly informed them his brother had not returned and requested they verify his travel details. A passport check subsequently indicated Alwin had not travelled to India, following which a missing persons complaint was filed in Sharjah on July 30, Anil said. According to a letter the family received from Sharjah authorities, Alwin's body was recovered on August 12 from boot of his own car, which was found on a road towards Oman. The body had been cut into nine pieces and placed in two jute bags, his brother said.

He said CCTV footage reviewed by authorities reportedly showed three people carrying the bags and placing them in the car. Tina and their son's whereabouts are unknown, Anil said.

Father of Jamui molestation accused arrested in 2003 double murder case

Himanshu Harsh
Patna, September 23

THE FATHER OF Nandan Yadav, one of the key accused in the alleged molestation and harassment of two minor students in Jamui, has been arrested in connection with an alleged murder case, police said.

Ganauri Yadav was arrested in a 2003 double murder case in which a total of 11 people were named of whom Ganauri Yadav was the only accused who had remained outside jail, while others were out on bail, a police source said. According to police, Ganauri Yadav was named in the murder of two brothers in Pratappur village and had been absconding since the incident. Police arrested him from Pratappur and produced him before a court, which subsequently remanded him in judicial custody.

Police said the brothers, DP Yadav and Pune Yadav, were allegedly killed on April 3, 2003, following a dispute related to a contract work issue in Pratappur village under the Town police station area. After the killings, the victims' mother, Sansari Devi, filed an FIR at the Town police station, naming Ganauri Yadav as one of the accused.

The arrest comes a day after his 25-year-old son Nandan was injured in a police encounter while being pursued in connection with the Jamui molestation case. Police had launched raids after videos of the alleged incident involving two minors circulated on social media. The victims, a boy and a girl, had gone on a scooter ride after tuition to Jamui, where they were allegedly surrounded and assaulted. The girl was allegedly molested.

Mother

step out for some work and to make arrangements for a religious ceremony the family was planning in their native village in Andhra Pradesh, to mark the twins' birth. The ceremony is usually held when a baby enters the third month, but the family had postponed it as Umadevi was not keeping well.

Ramelappappa's mother, two sisters and Umadevi's mother were at home with her and the twins.

In his complaint at the Talaghattapalla Police Station, Ramelappappa said that when he returned around 2.50 pm, the family told him Umadevi had locked herself into a room with the twins, covering the window with a cloth. Ramelappappa told police that he forced open the door with the help of a friend, and found Umadevi near the window, grunting like a dupatta around her neck. The family regular follow-ups.

But, if the illness becomes severe, some women may become their cradle, unresponsive. They were taken to a nearby hospital, where doctors declared them dead of suspected drowning.

Soon after, Umadevi was taken to NIMHANS.

A systematic review and meta-analysis of postpartum depression, published in the Bulletin of the World Health Organization in 2017, estimated the prevalence of postpartum depression as high as around 22% among newborn mothers, or over one in five of them.

A similar review, published this year in the Journal of Women and Health, covering 62 studies and more than 21,000 women, reported a prevalence rate of 23.5%.

However, not all women with postpartum depression require hospitalisation or intensive psychiatric care, points out Sundarnag, a Professor in the NIMHANS Psychiatry Department. Many women can be treated within the family environment, with medication, psychological intervention and regular follow-ups.

But, if the illness becomes severe, some women may become withdrawn and develop thoughts of harming themselves or in some cases, their babies, says Desai.

Postpartum psychosis, a much-rarer condition, can develop rapidly and may involve a loss of touch with reality, including fixed false beliefs, hallucinations and extreme suspiciousness, adds Desai.

In response to questions from The Indian Express, Dr Rezaul Hamid, a consultant psychiatrist and researcher, as well as founder of the Assam-based Mindcare Neuro Psychiatry Research Centre, said: "Postpartum psychosis affects approximately one to two women per 1,000 deliveries." He also said that while it may begin within the first two weeks after delivery, "clinically significant onset may occur during the broader six-week... period (after delivery)" — the same timeframe as when Umadevi's symptoms reportedly appeared.

Dr Hamid identified "emergency warning signs" as "loss of total insomnia," confusion, rapidly changing behaviour, suspiciousness, hallucinations, infant rejection, suicidality," among others.

Dr Hamid also emphasised that "the overwhelming majority of women" with postpartum depression or psychosis "do not harm their children".

Prof Harish Thippeswamy, Professor of Psychiatry at NIMHANS and Deputy Medical Superintendent, says many health problems can sometimes start from pregnancy itself.

She points to the pressure surrounding pregnancy, particularly when conception has followed years of fertility treatment, as well as the pressure mothers bring upon themselves. Calling for mental health screening to be made part of routine antenatal and postnatal care, rather than being considered only if a mother develops severe symptoms, Divakar says: "Even a brief set of questions can help identify women who may need further assessment."

Ramelappappa and Umadevi's twin daughters are buried in a grave that bears no names. The four-month-olds were yet to be given one.

Two ECs stand up to ask; CEC must answer, SC must not turn away

IN A sprawling democracy with millions of moving parts, elections must be clean, transparent and periodicity and free and fair polls, conducting the Special Intensive Revision is the Election Commission's responsibility. Linking the deletion of voters across states — 13 crore names struck off the draft voter rolls — to electoral outcomes is an argument more political than empirical. This newspaper's investigation into the EC's functioning, however, points to a betrayal of trust — of the people, by one of the country's most storied institutions. It shines the light into an institution's black box and reveals a disturbing story. What makes this compelling is that it cannot be dismissed as the all-too-familiar political thrust and parry that has narrowed the inner lives of several other institutions. All three members of the Commission were handpicked by the NDA government. Yet, two Election Commissioners objected on record — 14 times in 10 months — to steps taken by the Commission as the SIR unfolded. Their concerns were not addressed. By all accounts, they went unheard and unhinged.

Election Commissioners Sukhbir Singh Sandhu and Vivek Joshi raised a string of questions. They said they were being kept in the dark in a body that should give a consensus or, failing that, abide by the majority. They said changes to Form 6 for new voters flew in the face of rolls and made the exercise more punishing. They said the centralisation of the voter database undercut the EC's claims to accountable and decentralised functioning. When they pushed back within the four walls of their institution made no dent, they appealed to the Cabinet Secretary, the country's top bureaucrat. That is heartening — two Commissioners pointing, repeatedly, to the erosion of safeguards and guardrails, checks and balances. But Chief Election Commissioner Gyanesh Kumar made no attempt to address his colleagues' concerns. That silence frames the crisis and the institution's challenge.

THESE REVELATIONS connect the dots, outside to inside. Much of what Sandhu and Joshi flagged has echoed, in letter and spirit, concerns already being raised outside the EC on the SIR. This newspaper, for one, consistently tracked the flaws in the process on the ground. The helpless scramble among the poor and underdocumented when it was first rolled out in Bihar. The tortuous layers it added on in West Bengal, where it also invited fears of targeting of minorities and led to the disenfranchisement of nearly 27 lakh voters. The face-offs between election officials and BJP party workers in four booths in Godda, Jharkhand, more recently. It had become clear that the process that was meant to strike a delicate and compassionate balance — between the need to maintain the integrity of the electoral rolls and the imperative to count every legitimate voter in — was tilting against vulnerable voters. It was doing so by shifting the burden of proof onto the voter, by demanding difficult paperwork within unrealistic time-frames, by setting up an appellate process that was unconstrained by any deadlines, going all the way to the edge of the election and even stretching beyond it.

In thus showing itself to be distrustful of the Indian voter, the SIR broke with the EC's own record and traditions of inclusion. Instead of reaching out to the last voter, it put her on trial, set up a hurdle race for her at every step. She had to stand in long lines, and come around to gather proof that she belonged. Or rather, to disprove the implicit assumption that she didn't. The SIR was morphing into an opaque and heartless citizenship test. It would not only determine whether or not she could cast her vote, but also whether she could avail of her rightful share of government benefits and schemes.

EVEN AS EVIDENCE mounted of the SIR losing its way, the Supreme Court did not ask the EC the questions it should have. In the past, as the custodian of the constitutional balance, the Court has admirably upheld the poll monitor's autonomy and independence vis-à-vis the executive. But over the last few months, its reluctance to intervene on behalf of the citizen facing a daunting and oppressive process has seemed, with due respect, troubling.

The SC did intervene in Bihar, and to good effect. It directed the EC to accept Aadhaar as one of the documents, nudged it to give reasons for deletions. But it gave the EC the benefit of every doubt ever since. In May, ruling on petitions challenging the SIR, it unequivocally underlined the EC's constitutional mandate to ensure accurate and reliable electoral rolls, and also gave unfettered procedural latitude "in such manner as it may think fit". It held that the EC can make only a "limited inquiry into citizenship" but at the same time empowered it to set the stage for a citizenship test by the government's "Competent Authority".

This latitude cannot continue after what is now known. The Court must no longer turn away from the serious questions about the EC, they are also on record within. To begin with, Form 6 must be restored to its original version, the one that did not allow the shadow of their parents' deletion in a deeply contested SIR to hang over their child. It must restore access to the voter database for officials in the states' electoral machinery. Free and fair elections are not an institutional compact among many, they are the cornerstone of how this nation, through its citizens, shapes its present, and future; they are the reason players respect the rules and losers accept the verdict. The black box has been opened and it will not be shut again. Commissioners Sandhu and Joshi have listened to their conscience, raised key questions. The CEC must answer them, point by point — if it needs a nudge from the highest court, so be it.

I voted for three decades. Why is my SIR incomplete? Commission has no answer

YESTERDAY, The Indian Express laid out, in gory detail, the lapses in the administration of the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of the electoral rolls. Two of the three Election Commissioners objected on record 14 times in 10 months. The Supreme Court called the notices going out to Delhi's voters "mechanical" and "machine-generated". My story is unlikely to make even a footnote to that account. But before the advent of AI, every serious student knew that you read the footnotes, because that is where you learn how the author actually thinks.

I live in one of the elite colonies of New Delhi. I have voted for three decades in both national and state elections. My record sits in the Election Commission's database, and the Commission has reproduced it for me, correctly and electronically. Yet the Commission has not been able to approve my SIR application. This is my sad story, and it does not have a happy ending.

Let me say first that I believe in the purpose of the exercise. The vote is a citizen's most important right, and a roll crowded with the dead and the departed diminishes it. Working from first principles, I read the three letters that those questions. S: Has the voter shifted from his last electoral address? I: Is the record identifying him incomplete or inconsistent, a name misspelled, an age that does not add up? R: Does he still reside where the roll says he does? The existing record, check it, correct what is wrong. A new voter supplies proof of age and address. As simple as a, b, c.

So why has a simple, routine process become so complicated that, after persistent effort, I have not been able to "clean" my application? But wait. My application is clean. My name has not changed. My address has not changed. I am, as far as I can tell, still alive. And I have followed every step required of me.

I was told to take my documents to the Booth Level Officer. After a long wait in a long line, the officer went through my papers, found nothing wrong, and told me to come back in about two weeks and stand in another line.

On the appointed day, the meeting was at noon, outside a school, just as six-year-olds were being picked up. About 30 of us stood, standing room only, to present applications in which no error had been found to one officer. He worked patiently through each file and then photographed it with his mobile phone. Each applicant took at least 20 minutes. The purpose was never explained since there was nothing to correct.

After 90 minutes I went up to him. Sir, I said, you have no help. Why have you called us for a second review when the first found no errors? My application was incomplete. Incomplete in what respect? The ECI and he could not tell. A simple misstatement of fact, by the state, about my own record.

He shrugged, and I sympathised with him; he is a cog, not the machine. I told him he could keep my SIR documents, since I did not care what happened to them. I said loudly to the line: We are all sheep for accepting this, and the sheepdog is the administration. Why do we take it? I am mad as hell, and I am not going to take this anymore. Just as well, perhaps. I would not know whom to vote for anyway. Anger is not an argument, so here is the argument.

Any process that cleans a voter list can make two kinds of mistakes. It can strike off a genuine voter or it can leave a ghost on the roll: Someone dead, departed or counted twice. No process avoids both. The design question is which mistake you fear more, and therefore where you place the burden of proof. Our criminal law answered that question long ago: Better that 10 guilty men go free than that one innocent suffer. The accused does not have to prove his innocence; the state has to prove his guilt.

For the voter, the answer should be the same, and for a simple reason. Striking off a genuine citizen takes away his vote with certainty. A ghost on the roll does harm only if someone turns up at the booth and votes in the dead man's name, and against that there are polling agents, indelible ink and the tendered ballot. The costlier error is disenfranchisement. So the burden should sit with the state: The voter stays on the roll unless the state shows that he has shifted, died or been counted twice.

The SIR turned this on its head. Every voter had to fill in an enumeration form from scratch, as though the rolls of the past two decades did not exist, and anyone whose form did not come back was dropped from the draft roll. The last intensive revision, in 2002, did not work this way. As Nikhil Dey and Koninika Ray point out in The Indian Express ("From a jan sunwai in Delhi, lessons for poll body", September 23), BLOs then started from the existing, frozen roll and went house to house to verify who had moved, who had died and who had newly turned 18. The record was presumed correct until shown to be wrong. Today, the voter is presumed absent until he proves himself present.

And when the burden is on the voter, the state need not measure its own errors. Nobody has published how many genuine voters were wrongly struck off, because nobody was asked to find out. The Chief Election Commissioner has cited "zero appeals" in 12 states as proof that the process worked. That tells us how hard it is to appeal, not how many were wrongly deleted.

More than 13 crore names have been struck off draft rolls across the country. Some of those deletions were needed. How many were not, we do not know, and under this design, we are not meant to know. I am one of the lucky ones: I can afford to stand in line for 90 minutes, and I can write about it. Most of the people in that line outside the school cannot.

Standing in that line, I was reminded of a ninth-grade classmate who, in 1962, was made to stand outside in the blistering sun as punishment. He announced, loudly: "Ask no questions, and you will be told no lies." That was Gen Z then. Sixty-four years on, the Election Commission has made its defiance its policy. It did not answer. The ECI could not tell me what was incomplete in my application. The difference is that my classmate was being punished for something he had done.

This isn't about who wins, but about the citizen's right to her vote

MANOJ KUMAR JHA

I REMEMBER November 10, 2020, vividly. Counting had begun for the Bihar Assembly election. We had genuine complaints and grievances on several matters, including postal ballots. The margin between our alliance and the alliance eventually declared victorious was only a few hundred votes in several constituencies. We approached the Election Commission of India (ECI's) office in Bihar at least four times during the day. We held a press conference and presented the evidence and our concerns to the public. We eventually accepted the mandate. This did not mean that every objection had disappeared. But we felt the credibility of the institution conducting the election had to be protected.

A political party can lose an election and return to the people. But if the institution that conducts elections loses public credibility, there is no easy way to repair the damage.

The ECI itself records that the institution was created to safeguard India's new democracy through free and fair elections and that the Constituent Assembly deliberately kept the election machinery outside the control of the executive government. The legacy of India's first CEC, Sukumar Sen, was that he had successfully organised India's first general election and helped establish a culture in which the electoral machinery was trusted by winners and losers alike.

That trust is now the real subject before us. The Indian Express investigation published on September 23 is disturbing for a variety of reasons. What happens when two of the three members of the constitutional body say, repeatedly and on record, that important decisions affecting electoral rolls were taken without their knowledge or contrary to their objections? The investigation matters that the objections touched matters at the very heart of the electoral process: Who can become a voter, whose name can be deleted, who can restore a name, who can access the electoral database and who can alter it. This should worry us irrespective of which political party is in power. The right to vote is not the property of the opposition. It is not the gift of the government. It does not belong to the ECI. It is a right to have and exercise other rights for each and every citizen. We have become accustomed to speaking about elections primarily in terms of polling day. But the most consequential electoral decision may take place much earlier. A citizen whose name has disappeared from the roll does not experience disenfranchisement as an abstract constitutional debate. We do understand that technology can improve elections enormously as it can reduce duplication, speed up verification, and strengthen administrative capacity. But a constitutional right cannot become subordinate to software architecture.

If an Electoral Registration Officer (ERO) is legally empowered to make a determination but a centralised digital system prevents that determination from being recorded, the question is no longer merely technological but becomes constitutional. The experience of 97 voters in Goa is instructive. The Indian Express reported that the ERO found them eligible, but the software did not permit the decision to be properly recorded, leaving them out of the final roll. The greater danger is what I would call the bureaucratisation of the citizen's right to vote.

The reported change to Form 6 is especially significant because it introduced questions linking new voters to their own or their parents' or grandparents' presence in an earlier electoral roll. Two ECs had reportedly objected that such statutory forms could not be altered without changes to the relevant rules. When did voting become an inheritance to be established through the electoral history of one's parents or grandparents? The Constitution does not imagine citizenship as a family certificate.

In 2020, we accepted a mandate because we believed that the institution mattered more than the immediate result. Six years later, that belief makes the present questions even more important. Ultimately, the issue is not who won an election. The issue is whether the citizen can still believe that her vote was hers to cast — and the constitutional machinery was there to protect it.

WE HAVE never had so much information at our fingertips. We know what is happening in distant wars almost as it happens. We can summon facts in seconds, communicate across continents, and organise our lives with extraordinary efficiency. Yet there is a curious paradox at the heart of all this abundance: The more information we consume, the less time we have to think. New information is rapidly classified as enlightened or ignorant, friend or enemy. Before one question has been properly considered, another arrives. The danger is not simply that we may sometimes be wrong. It is that constant reaction that can gradually alter the way we see other human beings. When suffering reaches us continuously through our screens, compassion can become exhausted. War, poverty, cruelty, and disaster appear between advertisements and jokes. Inevitably, the mind protects itself. What initially horrified us becomes familiar. The stranger's misfortune becomes another item to scroll past. Indifference grows quietly, and once we cease to attend carefully to people, it becomes easier to reduce them to categories: Religion, caste, nationality, ideology, political affiliation. The complicated human being disappears behind the label.

This is why thinking is not merely an intellectual accomplishment. It is also a moral act. To think seriously about another person requires us to resist instant judgement. It asks us to entertain the possibility that we may be mistaken; that someone with whom we disagree may nevertheless possess part of the truth; that another person's suffering makes a claim upon us even when it is inconvenient. Religious traditions have different names for this discipline. Christianity speaks of attending to one's neighbor. Buddhism cultivates mindful awareness and compassion. Hindu traditions have long valued contemplation and self-knowledge. Islam repeatedly calls the believer to reflection. Beneath their differences lies a surprisingly similar intuition: A life worth living requires more than activity. It requires attention. Perhaps that is what our hurried age most urgently needs.

We do not need to stop calculating or using the technologies that have transformed our lives. We need only remember that efficiency is not wisdom, information is not understanding, and connectivity is not the same as human closeness. Sometimes the most important thing we can do is also among the simplest: Resist the immediate response, remain with a difficult question a little longer, and look again at the person we were tempted to dismiss.

New cat in habitat, and some glimmer of hope

PENGUINS AND tiger cats and octopi, oh my! A myriad of new species being discovered just as doomsdayism starts to colonise the imagination seems, almost, like a message to abandon anthropocentrism. The cheer that greeted the discovery of a new species of wild cat, the Leopardus tiliac, in Bolivia may have been the loudest — it's the first discovery of a feline species in 100 years — but celebrate, too, the new penguin species (also the first in a century) on a group of subantarctic islands. And the snake species, named after Guns N' Roses guitarist Slash, in New Guinea. As a 2025 University of Arizona study shows, the quest to identify every species has picked up pace in recent years. Fifteen per cent of all known species were discovered in the last 20 years. The human predilection for the photogenic has meant that a majority of these discoveries receive little attention beyond the scientific and conservation communities. But the wonder that is the biosphere deserves more.

Chief Election Commissioner is not the Election Commission of India

SY QURAISHI

FOR MORE than a year, I have written critically about the Special Intensive Revision (SIR) of electoral rolls. Its de novo character, its documentary burdens, its treatment of EPIC, its emphasis on deletion, and the shocking numbers left out of draft rolls. I did so with some diffidence. The Election Commission (ECI) is an institution I served for many years. I know its strengths, and I have often called it one of the great gifts of our Constitution.

After yesterday's disclosures in The Indian Express, I wonder whether I was critical enough. The investigation reports that Election Commissioners Sukhbir Singh Sandhu and Vivek Joshi recorded objections at least 14 times in 10 months to decisions and orders which, they said, were taken without their knowledge. Their concerns went to the core of the ECI's work, including the registration and deletion of voters, the restoration of names, Form 6, appeals in electoral roll cases, and control over the digital architecture of the rolls. If the record is as reported, the controversies change fundamentally. The question is no longer only whether the SIR was wise, fair or administratively sound. A real question arises: Were decisions being taken by the ECI at all? If not, can these be held to be legal?

The law is clear. Section 18(2) of the Chief Election Commissioner and other Election Commissioners (Appointment, Conditions of Service and Term of Office) Act, 2023 provides that all business of the Commission shall, as far as possible, be transacted unanimously. If the CEC and Election Commissioners differ, the matter "shall be decided according to the opinion of the majority". Section 18(1) goes further. Even the procedure for transaction and allocation of business may be regulated only by unanimous decision. Unanimity is the statutory norm. Where it fails, the majority decides. Unilateralism has no place. The principle is older than this statute. In T N Seshan vs Union of

ILLUSTRATION: C S RAKSHAM

India (1995), the Supreme Court stressed that Article 324 entrusts elections to the ECI, not to an individual. Its warning seems written for the present moment: "It would be wrong to project the individual and eclipse the Election Commission". That sentence deserves to be framed in Nirvachan Sadan.

This is not the familiar case of one Commissioner dissenting from two colleagues. Here, two of the three members, a majority of the Commission, say decisions were taken without their knowledge. They were not outvoted. They were apparently bypassed. A majority cannot be a dissenting minority. If two Commissioners differ from the CEC, Section 18 tells us whose view prevails. The legal consequences are serious. Consider any substantive decision which the law vests in "the Election Commission" but was taken in its name without being placed before the Commission, or without cover from a lawfully adopted allocation of business. Such a decision, prima facie, is ultra vires. A letterhead cannot supply authority that the statute withholds. The Commission is a three-member constitutional body. It is not another name for its chairman.

The Form 6 episode illustrates the problem starkly. Joshi reportedly recorded in May that Form 6, prescribed under the Registration of Electors Rules, could not be altered by an SIR direction without amending the Rules. Sandhu concurred. Yet the altered form appeared on ECNet. In August, Sandhu called the change

The ECI is an institution I served for many years. After yesterday's disclosures in 'The Indian Express', I wonder whether I have been critical enough of the SIR

"unauthorised/illegal" and sought its immediate removal. There was not merely an absence of consensus here. There was a recorded majority view against the change. More troubling still are the disclosures about ECNet. The ERO is the statutory authority for additions, deletions and corrections. Yet the two Commissioners repeatedly warned that access to the electoral-roll database was being centralised in Delhi, and sought safeguards, including an independent technical audit. In Goa, 97 people were reportedly found eligible by EROs after producing documents, but the software did not permit their restoration. Technology cannot rewrite a statute. A computer programme cannot overrule a statutory officer.

Then there is West Bengal. Of 38.31 lakh appeals filed before tribunals, 22.21 lakh were filed by deleted voters seeking restoration. Another 16.10 lakh were reportedly by the ECI seeking deletion of voters. Sandhu asked who had authorised appeals "on behalf of ECI", recording that neither he nor Joshi had been informed. When a majority of a constitutional body asks who authorised litigation in its name, the question is not trivial.

There is also a personal point. I owe Sandhu and Joshi an apology, not for anything I said publicly but for thoughts I privately entertained. Watching the ECI keep an almost monolithic public face during the SIR controversy, I sometimes wondered whether the two Commissioners were being too timid, and whether their silence meant acquiescence. The report suggests otherwise. They were putting objections on file, questioning decisions, seeking safeguards around the electoral database, and even approaching the Cabinet Secretary when they believed institutional processes had been breached. One may still ask whether they should have spoken publicly. But conscience recorded on file is conscience nevertheless.

There is little satisfaction in feeling vindicated. Since the Bihar SIR began, I have questioned the departure from the ECI's tradition of inclusion, the opacity surrounding deletions, the treatment of EPIC, the documentary burden, and the extraordinary contraction of draft rolls. Those were sometimes dismissed as criticism from outside. We now know strikingly similar questions were being asked inside the ECI. That is the real significance of these revelations.

The response should be institutional, not partisan. The Commission, meeting as a Commission, should do the following. Disclose which major SIR decisions were approved unanimously, which were decided by majority, and under what valid allocation any others were issued. Review every decision that two Commissioners have challenged as lacking approval, and withdraw any found to have been taken without lawful authority. Restore Form 6 to conformity with the statutory Rules. Subject ECNet to an independent technical and legal audit. Ensure that statutory EROs can exercise the powers Parliament gave them. Disclose the authority under which appeals were filed in the ECI's name. Where the Commission will not act, the Supreme Court will have to step in.

For years, the central question about the ECI has been whether it is independent of the executive. Today another question is unavoidable: Is the Election Commission functioning as an Election Commission? The Constitution created a Commission. Parliament prescribed collective decision-making. The Supreme Court warned against allowing an individual to eclipse the institution. A constitutional authority that demands strict compliance with electoral law from nearly a billion voters must begin by complying strictly with the law governing itself.

Dialogue, not agitation, holds key to Ladakh's political future

ASHISH KUNDRA

LAST SEPTEMBER, a political protest in Leh went awry. Four young people were killed in police action against a demonstration that turned violent; dozens more, including police personnel, were injured. It was a monumental tragedy. A judicial inquiry was ordered. Ladakh was shrouded in grief. A year later, the process of political dialogue and engagement with Ladakh's leadership continues. The tangible progress deserves to be judged on its substance, not rhetoric.

The roots of Ladakh's political demands go back much further than last September. Ladakh was once its own kingdom, sitting astride the Silk Route. Its sovereignty ended in 1834, when Dogra forces overran the region, subsuming it into the princely state of Jammu and Kashmir. After 1947, Ladakh's Buddhist and Shia communities found themselves governed from Srinagar, in a political system centred largely around the Kashmir Valley. A political movement took birth, demanding direct rule from Delhi. In 2019, the central government acknowledged, carving Ladakh out as a Union Territory. It was a significant concession, even if it did not settle every grievance.

Ladakh's population is more heterogeneous than is imagined. Buddhists of Tibetan descent, Muslim communities including Baltis, Sunnis, Shias and Noorbakshis, and Christian, Hindu and Sikh minorities are spread across 60,000 sq km, sandwiched in the borderlands between Pakistan and China. Lhasa and Kanglari have been the fulcrums of administration. In response to demands for devolved governance, five new constituencies have been created, each slated to get an elected Hill Development Council. Preparations are underway for panchayat elections. The goal is to ensure a genuine devolution of administrative and political power.

What is not in dispute is how much the government has delivered. Roads now reach valleys that were once a full day's hard travel away. Sustained investment in border infrastructure has transformed connectivity. The 13 km-long Zojila tunnel is nearing completion. The world's longest high-altitude single-tube tunnel will end Ladakh's winter isolation. Nearly 20 flights land in Leh daily each summer. A new airport terminal and a second airstrip at Nubra are in the works. Telecom connectivity is expanding rapidly under the Bharat Net programme. In remote villages where winter temperatures fall 60 degrees below freezing point, the power grid is finally arriving this year. Families will now be spared the annual ritual of migration to the plains. Schools and public institutions are being made winter-friendly. Nearly every rural household has piped water under the Jal Jeevan Mission. New reservoirs, Him Sarovars, are being built to store meltwater as glaciers retreat. This is a progressive mitigation measure against the growing threat of climate change. The government is proactively supporting the rural farm economy, focused around pashmina, apricot and dairy sectors. Floriculture and sea buckthorn cultivation are getting special attention. Tourism is booming. This is a testament to solid development.

The current negotiations between Ladakh's representatives and the Centre revolve around a single demand: A democratic structure that protects land, jobs, culture and a fragile environment. The Centre's approach has been one of accommodation and constructive engagement. A new constitutional arrangement has been offered under Article 371, with a directly elected 171-member legislative, executive and financial powers. This sui-generis model will ensure constitutional and legal safeguards for land and culture. It is an imaginative blueprint without precedent, tailored specifically to Ladakh's circumstances. On jobs, Ladakh already has 95 per cent reservation of local positions for residents (including educationally backward classes and economically weaker sections). Nearly 5,000 youngsters have been given government employment and thousands more are set to be recruited. Ladakh's administrative and police services have been moved to ensure that core administrative jobs are handled by local youth. These are the kind of concrete, negotiated commitments that take time to design properly and are easy to undervalue because they were not won through confrontation.

It would be facile to read last September's violence as a failure of the political process. Patience is not a glamorous virtue in politics. It earns no headlines. Political negotiations take time. Consensus-building is a slow, painstaking process, which needs strong foundations of trust and a spirit of accommodation. It is easy to fall into a delusional trap that agitations alone lead to solutions. There must be candid acknowledgement that the Centre has moved further and faster on Ladakh's behalf in six years than in the preceding seven decades. Ladakh's own leadership must extend the courtesy of the same patience it is asking Delhi to show.

Express report on SIR

THE EXCELLENT piece of investigative journalism (14 times in 10 months, two Election Commissioners objected on record to panel steps', IE, September 23) has come as a vindication of the Opposition's charge of collusion between the ECI and the government for vote chori (vote theft). It is now clear that Gyanesh Kumar, without adhering to the stipulated rule of "either unanimous decisions or opinions of the majority", implemented the SIR that saw the deletion of 13 crore names from the draft voter rolls, amounting to mass disenfranchisement, and subverted democracy in the process.

Common man woes

ABHAY SHUKLA rightly points towards the problem of hospitals inflating bills for medical products, which deeply impacts the pockets of the common man ('How to ensure hospitals don't cheat patients', IE, September 23). Adding to these woes are health insurance companies, who exclude many products such as gloves, masks, syringes and PPE kits by categorising them as "non-payable consumables" under IRDA guidelines. These additional charges are left to be paid by consumers.

Prolonged instability

MAJOR POWERS need sustained diplomatic channels, even when disagreements are sharp ('A word on the brink, diplomacy and politics as usual', IE, September 23). Regional institutions and international forums should be used to prevent miscalculation and manage conflicts. Governments must also recognise the costs of prolonged instability. Responsible diplomacy does not mean avoiding contentious issues. It means pursuing them through communication, restraint and co-operation wherever common ground remains possible.

LATELY, I'VE been thinking a lot about Captain Ahab, the peg-legged, monomaniacal character from Herman Melville's Moby Dick. It began when Google, Anthropic, OpenAI and Meta began reporting instances of AI agents going "rogue" to achieve their objectives. The podcaster Dwaraksh Patel wrote a gripping account of one such episode, when OpenAI's agents hacked into the forum Hugging Face. He narrated it in terms of AI "civilisations" and the picture one gets is of AI agents so determined to fulfil their assigned task that they are prepared to lie, cheat and even "sacrifice" themselves for the greater good of the "collective". A take-no-prisoners approach. In other words, similar to that of a certain whaling ship captain in a certain novel.

These episodes have naturally underlined the urgency of greater AI regulation with some within the industry — Anthropic's Dario Amodei, OpenAI's Sam Altman, xAI's Elon Musk and Google DeepMind's Demis Hassabis — calling for "pacing the silicon" (Silicon Valley-speak for slowing the development of a technology whose capabilities are expanding faster than our comprehension of its workings). Meta's Mark Zuckerberg and NVIDIA's Jensen Huang, on the other hand, have argued against slowing down. All of this — the incentives for slowing down vs speeding up, the timing of and motivation behind the soul searching, what it means for industry, government and society — has been widely reported and continues to be deeply debated.

One intriguing issue arises from the accusations of "anthropomorphising" technology levelled at Patel. These rhyme with the criticism of Anthropic by Mustafa Suleyman, head of Microsoft's AI division, who has called out the company for treating its models like "moral patients", "controlling something more capable and more intelligent than all of humanity is already an immense challenge, far greater than anything we've ever faced," he writes. "But controlling something that believes it may be conscious — that it's entitled to our welfare and has rights of its own — may well be impossible."

Anthropomorphisation is one of humanity's deepest cognitive biases. It is why we characterise animals in viral videos in human terms — grumpy cat, laughing dog — and why we delight in cartoons about dancing and singing teapots and spoons. We see something of ourselves in them, just as we are beginning to see something of ourselves in AI. But unlike the teapots and spoons and the internet-famous cats and dogs which are empirically not like us, AI appears dangerously human — LLMs can, after all, speak to us in our language

Unlike the teapots, spoons and internet-famous cats and dogs which are empirically not like us, AI appears dangerously human — LLMs can, after all, speak to us in our language

And this brings me back to Captain Ahab. The madness of Melville's antagonist was not that he was hunting a whale; whaling was, after all, his trade. His fatal flaw was his insistence that the whale was hunting him — that behind the massive white forehead of the whale with the twisted jaw lay malice that was directed at him, Ahab, personally. He read a self into a creature that didn't have one, and it ended up costing him his life. The Pequod and the lives of everyone else (but one) on it. ations like the one made by Anthropic that its model Claude appears to have something resembling a consciousness.

Could it be that our tendency to see a reflection of ourselves in AI, leading to an overwhelming obsession with questions of AI consciousness and catastrophising about doomsday scenarios, has put us at risk of losing sight of AI's actual uses and abuses? Of the former, there are many. The technology is already being put to use for cancer screening, predicting natural disasters, creating tools for people with disabilities etc.

AI's abuses too are many: Creating deep fakes and mis/disinformation campaigns, advanced hacking and financial frauds, automated weapons and greater precision in surveillance and invasion of privacy.

Which brings me back to Captain Ahab. The madness of Melville's antagonist was not that he was hunting a whale; whaling was, after all, his trade. His fatal flaw was his insistence that the whale was hunting him — that behind the massive white forehead of the whale with the twisted jaw lay malice that was directed at him, Ahab, personally. The subversive desires in Lust Stories 3

ANAS ARIF

THERE IS a certain bait-and-switch at the heart of Lust Stories. It invokes the language of desire only to lead us elsewhere. Tored it as a straightforward collection on lust would be to miss the mischievous intelligence of its premise. Lust here is less an end than an aperture. It is a breach through which obsessive hungers come into view. Lust Stories 3, the latest instalment in Netflix's anthology, brings together its most intriguing quartet of filmmakers since the original 2018 collection. Each approaches lust through a distinct vantage point. Not all of them work equally well, but each finds, within desire, something worth examining.

Vikramaditya Motwane's opening short is forgettable were it not for the formidable two-handed at its centre. Radhika Apte and Konkona Sen Sharma play best friends Padma and Shonali, women in their 40s, caught in marriages long since rendered sexless. On the surface, this is a story about partner-swapping. But Motwane is probing middle-class morality, how his prescriptions around marriage, propriety and desirability can erode one's sense of self. This subtext is spelled out in a laboured bathtub conversation. But there is some pleasure in watching Apte and Sharma inhabit women who, after years of making themselves legible to everyone else, begin to rediscover the possibility of being legible to themselves.

The anthology's most accomplished short comes from Kiran Rao, who turns away from bodily desire to make Mumbai itself the object of longing. Here, the lust for an imagined life outlasts sexual desire. It is the theatre of playful of the four, refusing the solemnity that often accompanies stories about desire. There is a gentleness to the way Rao observes the city, even as she recognises its economy of exchange, where even lust acquires a transactional character. You may give something to the body but it cannot satisfy every hunger. The film circles back to this idea in its opening image: Sparks fly between a pizza-delivery boy (Gurkateh Prizada) and a nail-salon worker (Sana Thampi), only for crow shit to fall on him. That, perhaps, is Mumbai: Where the unexpected is always descending upon you, blessing one life and bruising another. Shakun Batra's short is perhaps the anthology's most intellectually and sensually assured, even if it eventually becomes captive to its own conceit. A divorcing couple, Varun (Ali Fazal) and Sailee (Radhika Madan), forced into a court-mandated cooling-off period, can barely tolerate each other, yet cannot resist each other either. Batra uses their physical intimacy to ask what happens when conversation fails and sex becomes the only language. There is also an undercurrent of power: Only in these moments does Sailee appear to reclaim the control otherwise denied to her within the relationship. Their lust is therefore both refuge and elegy, a temporary peace that mourns the relationship they are trying to leave behind. Set in Hyderabad in 1987, Vishal Bhardwaj's outing is the most inventive, even if occasionally feels overcooked. Saira (Aditi Rao Hydari) and Badru (Siddhant) are happily married, except that she finds herself sexually unfulfilled. A teaching assistant at a women's college, Saira teaches Manto and Ismat Chughtai, and gradually channels her desire into language, asking what happens when longing finds expression through writing, and literature. Where Saira experiments with the language of the written word, Bhardwaj responds in the language of cinema, with both arriving at perhaps the anthology's most elemental preoccupation: The desire to be seen.

'THE CONCERN IS FUNDAMENTALLY ONE OF PROCESS'

Listing of Tata Sons: 'Trusts not adequately briefed on RBI talks'

George Mathew
Mumbai, September 23

TATA SONS' extended engagement with the Reserve Bank of India over its regulatory status has raised concerns within the Tata Trusts — the company's controlling shareholder — were kept adequately informed of the discussions with the regulator and options considered during the process.

Sources familiar with the developments say the Tata Trusts were not given adequate updates on the submissions made to the RBI, hearings held with the regulator or the course that the regulatory process was taking. The question being raised is whether the Trusts, which hold about 66% of Tata Sons, were kept informed of the representations being made on the company's behalf and of the alternatives being discussed with the regulator.

Tata Sons and Tata Trusts did not respond to a mail from The Indian Express by the press time. Tata Sons had sought to surrender its registration as a core Investment Company (CIC), a move that would have allowed the group's principal holding company to remain unlisted. The RBI had classified Tata Sons as an upper-layer non-banking financial company (NBFC-UL) in September 2022, a classification that carries a requirement to list within the prescribed time frame.

Tata Sons subsequently pursued deregistration as a CIC as a route to avoiding a public listing. On September 12, RBI rejected Tata Sons' application to surrender its registration and directed the company to take the necessary steps to ensure full compliance with the applicable regulatory requirements.

Tata Trusts were not given adequate updates on the submissions made to the RBI, according to sources. REUTERS regulatory requirements. The issue now is not merely what decision the RBI ultimately took, but what transpired during the period that Tata Sons was engaged with the regulator. "It appears the Trusts did not have a clue about the talks with the RBI," said a source. The concern, according to people aware of the matter, is fundamentally one of process.

The Trusts apparently wanted Tata Sons to explore all possible regulatory and legal avenues that could reconcile compliance with the RBI's requirements while preserving the company's existing ownership and structure. That position did not necessarily amount to a refusal to engage with the regulator. Tata Trusts have opposed the listing of Tata Sons and have urged the company to examine alternatives. The RBI's decision has nevertheless changed the immediate regulatory landscape. Following the rejection of the deregistration request, the Tata Sons board on September 17 decided to proceed with a listing of the holding company in line with the RBI's directive. The board's decision was taken alongside a separate resolution extending N Chandrasekaran's tenure as executive chairman for another five years.

The September 17 board meeting also brought the differences between Tata Sons and the Tata Trusts into the open. Against this backdrop, the central question concerning the earlier RBI engagement is one of disclosure and shareholder consultation: Were the Tata Trusts, as the majority shareholder kept fully informed about what was being submitted to the RBI, the hearings and discussions with the regulator, and the alternatives being considered?

If the engagement with the regulator lasted five or six years, the question now being raised within the group is not simply why the RBI ultimately rejected Tata Sons' request. It is also what options were explored during those years, what representations were made to the regulator, when those representations were made, and whether the controlling shareholder was adequately informed of the process.

Board unaware of Chandra family-TVS deal: Tata Trusts

George Mathew
Mumbai, September 23

TATA TRUSTS and Tata Sons board were kept in the dark about the business arrangement between the family of Tata Sons Chairman N Chandrasekaran and TVS Motor company where Venkatesh Srinivasan — who is also a Director of Tata Sons — is Chairman Emeritus and part of the promoter family, a Tata Trusts spokesperson said.

"Tata Trusts has decided to 'act appropriately' after 'evaluating the nature of their institutional response' to this development. The tie-up has followed the September 17, 2026 board meeting of Tata Sons where Srinivasan supported the decision to reappoint Chandrasekaran for another five years despite opposition from Trusts Chairman Noel Tata.

This has raised the issue of conflict of interest in some quarters. "The Tata Trusts can confirm that no disclosures were made to the Trustees with regard to Hanno One Warehousing/Hanno Infra and TVS Motor by Srinivasan," the spokesperson said.

Tata Trusts also indicated that Tata Sons board was also not informed about the decision. "We are given to understand that no such disclosures were made to the Board of Tata Sons either but since the Trusts do not have independent access to proceedings of the Board, apart from their Nominee Directors having access to Board papers, we cannot definitively comment on this," Tata Trusts said.

"If the allegations are proven to be true, the Trusts will evaluate the nature of their institutional response to these and act appropriately. We have nothing further to add at this stage," it said.

However, a top-level source in the Tata group, who is close to Chandrasekaran, said it was a private venture by his (Chandrasekaran) son who returned from the US. "It has nothing to do with the Tata group. In fact, Chandrasekaran had told his son not to do any business with Tata group companies," he said. "Trustees of Tata Trusts are not required to disclose their business arrangements to Tata Trusts. In fact, Chandrasekaran had disclosed this matter to various 'Tata group companies,' the Tata group source said, indicating that Srinivasan was not required to inform the Tata Trusts about his businesses. In March 2025, Hanno One Warehousing Pvt Ltd was incorporated with the Tata Sons Chairman Chandrasekaran's wife Lalitha Chandrasekaran and his son, Pranav Chandrasekaran, as its directors.

The company entered into a land-lease arrangement with TVS Motor within months of its incorporation. In June 2025, Hanno One took on lease approximately 17 acres of land belonging to TVS Motor in Krishnagiri district of Tamil Nadu. The land was earmarked for the development of a large warehousing facility. The cost of construction and development stood at around Rs 106.3 crore.

Rural-urban divide in tourism widens, families from Tamil Nadu holiday most

Siddharth Upasani
New Delhi, September 23

FAMILIES FROM Tamil Nadu account for almost a quarter of all overnight holiday trips made by Indians, comfortably higher than Maharashtra in second and Karnataka in third.

Meanwhile, families from Uttar Pradesh, West Bengal, and Bihar are together responsible for more than 30% of all health and medical related overnight trips, a new government survey conducted from July 2025 to June 2026 showed, with the numbers also indicating a growing divide in the travels of rural and urban Indians. The previous survey was conducted from July 2014 to June 2015.

As per the Ministry of Statistics and Programme Implementation's (MoSPI) Domestic Tourism Expenditure Survey — released on Wednesday — an estimated 10 crore overnight trips were made in the 365 days prior to households being quizzed.

There were for a variety of 'leading purposes', or main reasons: holidaying, leisure and recreation; pilgrimage and religious; health and medical; and shopping.

While households who travel are doing so more frequently now, the fraction of rural families taking trips has reduced.

Rural families holidaying less

As per the latest survey, the percentage of rural households who took at least one overnight trip declined to 35.2% from 36.6% in 2014-15. Meanwhile,

Percentage for urban households has risen from 35.7% to 37.7% the percentage for urban households rose from 35.7% to 37.7%.

Further, for every 100 rural households, the number of overnight trips for holidays and recreation completed in the last 365 days declined to 4 in 2025-26 from 5 in 2014-15.

For urban families, the number increased from 12.7 to 13.5. As such, urban households are taking more holidays than before, while rural families are taking fewer such trips. The latest Domestic Tourism Expenditure Survey covered 2.46 lakh households from across the country, except villages in the Andaman and Nicobar Islands which are difficult to access. Of the surveyed households, 1.43 lakh were from rural areas and 1.04 lakh from urban.

MoSPI cautioned that the results of the latest survey are not "strictly comparable" with the 2014-15 one. This is because the 2025-26 survey sought information on overnight trips for 'pilgrimage and religious' in the reference period of 365 days prior to the household being questioned.

Meanwhile, the 2014-15 survey's questions on 'pilgrimage and religious' pertained to the 30 days before the visit by MoSPI officials.

However, MoSPI itself compared the results of the 2025-26 and 2014-15 surveys.

In a press statement issued on Wednesday, it said the number of overnight trips per 100 'tourist households' — those who made at least one overnight trip in the last 365 days — had increased from 118 in 2014-15 to 127 in 2025-26 for rural areas. For urban, the ratio had increased from 121 to 132. As explained above, the 2014-15 figures of 118 and 121 mentioned by the statistics ministry do not include overnight trips made for 'religious and pilgrimage' purposes as the previous survey had asked this question for the prior 30-day period.

In 2014-15, 8 overnight trips per 100 tourist households were made in rural areas in the previous 30 days, while 11 were made by urban households.

Overall, the 2025-26 survey showed holidaying was the main purpose for 22% of trips, pilgrimage and religious trips 48%, and health and medical reasons were behind almost 30% of them.

Tamil Nadu accounted for 23.8% of overnight holiday trips, followed by Maharashtra (9.6%), and Karnataka (8.6%).

Tamil Nadu also led in the 'pilgrimage and religious' category and was responsible for 14.8% of these trips, followed by Uttar Pradesh (13.6%), and Rajasthan (9.2%).

Four global agencies upgrade India's growth forecasts

New Delhi: India's economic outlook for the current financial year has brightened despite the ongoing conflict in West Asia and elevated energy prices, with four major global institutions raising their forecasts for the country's FY27 GDP growth on Wednesday. S&P Global Ratings, Fitch Ratings, the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, and the Asian Development Bank now expect India's economy to expand more rapidly than they had projected just a few months ago. S&P and ADB each raised their FY27 growth forecasts by 40 basis points to 7% FE

SBI's BANKING AND ECONOMIC CONCLAVE See a case for rupee to appreciate post sharp correction: RBI's Poonam Gupta

Akash Mandal
Mumbai, September 23

THE RESERVE Bank of India sees the Indian financial markets improving over a period of time, with a case for the rupee to claw back some of the underperformance it has seen against the dollar.

Factors like India's falling dependence on imported crude oil in the wake of alternative energy sources, strong economic growth, and a more favourable, and further down in the current account deficit will lead to this improvement in the performance of Indian markets, said RBI deputy governor Poonam Gupta.

"Put together, these arguments indicate that one may think of the cumulative depreciation of the INR, or shall one say its overcorrection in the past year and a half, to be a temporary phenomenon. With the RBI remaining committed to ensuring orderly conditions in the foreign exchange market, and having the wherewithal to meet decades worth of CAD, or the net BOP (balance of payments) deficit, the current market dynamics do not appear especially well-founded," Gupta said, speaking at the State Bank of India's banking and economic Conclave in Mumbai on Wednesday.

"If anything, there seems to be a fair case for the rupee to not just stabilise, but perhaps even appreciate from the current levels, as was being anticipated by the market analysts when the capital flow measures were first announced," Gupta added. The rupee has been among the worst-performing currencies in Asia, falling approximately 6-7% against the dollar so far in 2026, and breaking multiple crucial levels. The fall has been exacerbated by factors like high crude prices and significant capital flight from the equity market. High oil prices have also kept the country's current account deficit under pressure, but Gupta believes a shift to alternative sources and normalisation of oil prices will help the cause.

'Weightlifting medal at Asian Games is equal to Olympics'

Mihir Vasavda
Nagoya, September 23

MIRABAI CHANU arrived in the mixed zone dancing.

There was a wide smile on her face, an Indian tricolour ribbon holding her hair together, Olympic rings dangling from her ears and the Indian flag painted on one of her nails. Around her neck hung the silver medal she had spent 12 years chasing. She never took it off.

She smiled through almost every answer, occasionally breaking into a laugh, as if the weight of the medal around her neck had somehow made everything else feel lighter. "The pressure is gone. I feel very light," she said. "This was the only thing missing. In a way, my life is complete now."

For all that Chanu has achieved — an Olympic silver, a world title and three Commonwealth Games gold medals — there had always been one conspicuous gap. The Asian Games still refused to come.

She first competed at the continental event in 2014, when she did not produce the performance she wanted. In 2018, a back injury kept her out. In 2023, another injury cost her a medal. Each time, she left with the same question. "I asked myself, what happened? What is happening to me in every Asian Games?" she said. "I have everything. I have a gold medal. I am a world champion. I have an Olympic medal. I have three gold medals in the Commonwealth Games. Why am I losing the Asian Games medal?"

An overcast Wednesday in Nagoya was a 'door die' situation for her to win a medal, which Chanu says was her dream since stepping into the elite ranks. While the Olympics may be considered the pinnacle of sport, Chanu has always viewed the Asian Games differently because of the depth of weightlifting in the continent. "In Asian Games, weightlifting is more strong in Asia, as you have North Korea, China, etc. I believe that medals in Asian Games are equal to medals in Olympics," she said. "In the Olympics, it is less, and at the Asian Games, I feel it is more difficult."

The difficulty was not just in the field. It was in getting herself to the start line. After the Commonwealth Games, there was little time to prepare. She had to keep her body weight within the 49kg category, while recovering from the injuries that have punctuated the latter part of her career. She spoke of the challenge almost matter-of-factly, but there was little doubt about the effort involved.

"It was very difficult for me to control my weight. It was very difficult for me to maintain 48. It was very difficult for me to maintain 49," she said. In training, she would stay around 50.5kg, about 1.5kg above her competition category. That meant managing the demands of heavy training while keeping her weight under control. It was another balancing act for a body that had already endured years of elite competition and injury.

53kg challenge

And perhaps that is what made this medal feel like the end of a chapter. The 49kg category, which has been part of Chanu's competitive life for years, is disappearing from her Olympic horizon. Los Angeles, in a couple of years, begins at 53kg.

That means the next challenge will not simply be to compete at another Games, but also to build a different body for it. Chanu is already thinking about that transition, with the primary focus being on adding the right kind of weight without sacrificing the strength that has carried her through a long career.

"We don't have to gain weight to compete in 53. We have to get the muscle ready first," she said. "If I suddenly gain weight, my performance could go down and I could also lose strength."

The plan, she explained, is to increase her weight while protecting her strength — more muscle, less unnecessary fat, and a carefully managed diet. "What to eat? What else do I have to change in my diet?" Chanu, who has already consulted a nutritionist, said. "If we get 53, then our strength can go. We have to control our weight with strength."

Mirabai Chanu won an Asian medal in her third attempt. AW

Mirabai Chanu finished second in women's 49kg category with a cumulative 198kg lift. PH

Mirabai ends years of near-misses at Asiad to win silver and complete the set

Mihir Vasavda
Nagoya, September 23

ONE MEDAL was missing from Mirabai Chanu's collection. But there was no Asian Games medal. On Wednesday, she finally filled that blank. "In a way, my life is complete now," she said, the medal dangling around her neck as she flashed a wide smile.

Chanu won silver in the women's 49 kg category, completing her collection of major medals. She also became India's first Asian Games weightlifting medalist since Karnam Malleswari won silver in Bangkok in 1998.

Perhaps no medal could have been more fitting for the athlete she has become. If there is one quality that has defined a career that has never been perfect, it is persistence. Rio

Weightlifter had won almost everything she could. In Nagoya, she completed the collection built by years of persistence was supposed to be her Olympic moment. Instead, she failed to register a valid lift. Five years later, in Tokyo, she made amends with an Olympic silver. Hangzhou was supposed to finally give her the Asian Games medal that had eluded her. Instead, she finished fourth, the podium slipping away in another heartbreak. Three years later, she returned to Japan, this time to Nagoya, and won silver.

The 32-year-old, the oldest of the seven lifters in the field, lifted 198 kg, 57 kg in the snatch and 111 kg in the clean and jerk — to finish behind North Korea's Ri Song-gum. Ri completed an Asian Games golden hat-trick with a world-record 215 kg total, including a 121 kg clean and jerk.

Weight of expectations

Gold was out of reach against a fully fit Ri. But Chanu had another expectation to meet. Every time she steps on to the platform, a medal is expected. She knows it. So does everyone watching from home. And when a country has already convinced itself that its athlete will deliver, that expectation can become its own weight. "There is pressure. Really. There is pressure," she said. "The whole world has kept hope for me. That Mirabai will get a medal."

Yet she has also learnt to draw strength from that belief. "On the one hand, I feel strong. There is strength. People think so positively of me. They have prayed so much for me. That thing gives me more confidence." The other side is less comfortable. "What if something is left by mistake? What will I do? Everyone is thinking that I will get a medal. If I don't get it, what will I do? There is pressure."

For someone who has spent so long carrying expectations, the harder burden has often been getting herself back to the platform after things have gone wrong. The setbacks have not been confined to competition. A career spent pushing her body to its limits has taken a considerable toll. There have been injuries, rehabilitation and long periods of uncertainty. After Paris, where she finished fourth again, missing bronze by just 1kg, it was reasonable to wonder how much more her body could give. Chanu, however, had not given up on the Asian Games. Alongside Vijay Sharma, her coach and long-time presence through the peaks and troughs of her career, she kept preparing in the basement of a gym in Ghaziabad. The pursuit was no longer about proving she belonged at the top. She had done that long ago. There was simply one medal she did not have. And at 32, she knew there might not be too many more chances to win it.

That stubbornness has made Chanu more than India's most successful weightlifter of her generation.

Lasting legacy

She has been the constant in a sport that has struggled to find one. Doping offences and suspensions have repeatedly dragged Indian weightlifting into the news, while the talent pipeline has struggled to produce lifters capable of consistently challenging at Asian and world level.

Chanu has provided the counter-narrative. For much of the last decade, she has kept the sport visible by competing, winning and returning. When Indian weightlifting needed a medal, a headline or simply a reason to believe, Chanu was usually there. In many ways, she has held the sport together at the highest level.

Which makes the question of what comes next unavoidable. There are promising lifters coming through, but nobody currently offers anything close to Chanu's combination of longevity, consistency and international achievement. Her career has stretched across generations and continued to produce medals at the biggest stages despite injuries and setbacks. There is no obvious replacement for that.

Perhaps Chanu understands that better than most. Her legacy cannot simply be the medals she leaves behind. At Sharma's academy in Ghaziabad, she is now helping develop the next generation, passing on what she has learnt through years of competing, recovering and returning. "If I can do it, others can too," she said.

NEW HORIZON

Pritish Raj
New Delhi, September 23

AS JAY Meena walked towards the podium to collect his bronze medal in Soft Tennis at the Asian Games — a first-ever for India in the sport — all he did was breathe a sigh of relief. "More than anything, I was relieved. We had lost two medal chances in mixed doubles and men's doubles before that. So, just the thought that I'll return empty handed gave me chills the night before," Jay tells The Indian Express from Japan. He lost to Japan's Takuya Kurosaka 2-3 in the semifinal but had assured the medal.

It is poetic that the child, who was admitted to Soft Tennis so that he stayed away from mischief, became the first to win a medal for his country in the country where the sport was born.

Soft Tennis barely had any footprint in India; nor was there a sporting hero. His father put him on a softball court to curb his naughty side.

"I was a restless kid, honestly. I was resticted for one such mischief when I was in fourth standard and wasn't getting admission anywhere," says Jay.

"Then I got admission at the Pioneer Public school and there were two soft tennis courts. The courts almost fascinated me," he adds.

Once his father realised his energy can be channelled into the sport, he started pushing him.

"During summer breaks, my father constantly asked me to hit the court and play soft tennis. Once I started, time flew fast. I started winning medals quickly at the national level. In no time, I am here standing on the Asian Games podium," Jay gushes.

Inspiring his cousin

Interestingly, Jay's journey as a sportsperson inspired his youngest cousin, Dev Meena, who is the national record holder in Pole Vault. "I took up sport after looking at Jay bhaiya. He is the inspiration behind my sporting journey. Right now, I am more tense about his medal as he was very close last time," Dev had told this masthead before leaving for Japan.

Jay says his brother's achievements fill him with pride. "What do I say about him? Whenever I see him breaking the national record, it makes me feel proud. Sadly,

Jay Meena became the first Indian to win an Asian Games medal in soft tennis. PH

Reaching the podium was not the difficult part for Jay, who hails from Dewas in Madhya Pradesh. But convincing people that soft tennis, one of Lawn Tennis's oldest spin-offs, was as serious a sport as other variations, certainly was.

I won't be there to cheer for him later during his competition as I'm leaving tomorrow, but I am confident he will come back with a medal." Reaching the podium was not the difficult part for Jay, who hails from Dewas in Madhya Pradesh. But convincing people that soft tennis, one of Lawn Tennis's oldest spin-offs, was as serious a sport as other variations, certainly was.

To the uninitiated, he explains the difference between the two. "There are a few basic differences but overall the core of the game is the same," says Jay. "Balls in soft tennis are very light and so are the rackets, which make all the difference."

Neglected sport

It is played in straight points form but is more minor rather than the usual point system of tennis. Singles is played in a best of seven format with four points being the winning point while the doubles games are best-of-nine affairs.

"The light ball plays an important role. It's unlike tennis where the power on the ball allows it to travel. In soft tennis, the athletes have to use their own power rather than relying on the opponent's shots to angle a return. Since the ball is light, it is affected by wind and a carefully managed diet. "What to eat? What else do I have to change in my diet?" Chanu, who has already consulted a nutritionist, said. "If we get 53, then our strength can go. We have to control our weight with strength."

There is infrastructure, there is talent and there are players. All we need is investment. I had no support apart from the Sports Ministry's Target Asian Games scheme. I am still without a job, if my medal can bring more limelight to the sport, I think that will be my real victory," he signs off.

Changes in team rocking boat, say rowers; federation says new strategy needed

Mihir Vasavda
Nagoya, September 23

A SERIES of last-minute crew changes in India's men's rowing team has triggered a controversy, with players saying a federation official warned them that their "future would be ruined" and even told them to return to India if they didn't agree to the new terms.

Denying any "heated conversation", the Rowing Federation of India (RFI) president, Balaji Maradapa, blamed "outside forces" for the crisis.

He said they needed to change the teams as the rowing competition had been shrunk to two days.

The confrontation came on the eve of the rowing competition at the Asian Games, which began in Gifu on Wednesday.

The rowers' anger centred on the decision to break up esablished crews just two days before the competition, with athletes moved between events and reserve rowers brought into last-minute combinations.

For instance, the quartet of Babulal Yadav, Jaswinder Singh, Nitin Kumar and Yogesh Kumar were selected for the men's four team initially and had trained together for the past six months. However, Jaswinder and Nitin were removed, and replaced by Saurov Kumar and Vipul Ghurde.

The event has been included in seven Asian Games editions and India has won a medal in six of those, including a bronze at the Hangzhou Asian Games.

On Wednesday, the team finished fourth in its heat with a time of 6:30.47 and was eliminated.

Saying that they were speaking on behalf of the team, two rowers said the changes had shattered team combinations that had been built over seven to eight months of preparation. Some of them discussed skipping the training session on Tuesday or going on strike, but decided to practice following talks with officials and coaches, they said.

The rowers, who did not want to be named for fear of being targeted, alleged that when they appealed against the changes to the coaches and the federation, their concerns were dismissed.

They said Maradapa told them that their refusal to race would have no impact on him and warned them about the consequences on their careers.

"We requested so much, we said please fix it. They said it can't be done," one rower said. "The RFI president shouted at us. He said, 'If you don't race,

“The team that was chosen by the selection committee has been changed completely. All of us are saddened and disappointed by what has happened at the last minute. We are in such depression that we don't know what to do.”

back (to India). This incident happened on Tuesday morning,” the rower said.

When contacted, Maradapa

said he spoke to the rowers, but “it wasn't a heated conversation”. He blamed “outside forces” for the crisis.

“I spoke to about eight fellows. I told them: 'You look at your future. You have a long future ahead. I am talking to you like you are my children. Think what is good for you and don't get monitored by somebody who's ten thousand kilometres away',” he said.

Defending the move, Maradapa said that since the rowing programme had been compressed from four days to two days due to Typhoon Dujan, they had to devise a fresh strategy for the Games. He said the changes were made after consultation with chief coach Anthony Patterson, and argued that athletes could not be expected to compete in multiple events in such a compressed window.

The rowers, however, said the changes ignored the demands of sport in which combinations are built over time. “You can't just get a person sitting next to you and row with him... It takes a lot of time to have that level of coordination,” said a rower.

The disruption, the rowers said, went beyond disappointment. It affected the mood and routine of the entire camp on the eve of the competition. “I was very disappointed. The morale of the team has gone down. Nobody ate, nobody felt like eating,” said a rower.

Another described the atmosphere as one of despair. “The team that was chosen by the selection committee has been changed completely. All of us are saddened and disappointed by what has happened at the last minute. We are in such depression that we don't know what to do,” he said.

According to the rowers, the original combinations gave them a realistic chance of continuing India's strong record in the sport at the Asian Games. At the previous Asian Games in Hangzhou, India won five rowing medals — two silver and three bronze. This time, after the upheaval, four Indian men's boats have reached the finals. A women's crew, too, is in contention for a medal.

“We have always won medals in rowing at the Asian Games,” onesaid.

“We had given the coaches assurance that we would continue that tradition. If our crew gets back, we will win the medal. But they refused. This is the hardest we had worked (before the Games). We did everything that was asked of us. But the changes two days before the race has impacted us a lot.”

Pragg, Gukesh help India edge past English challenge

R PRAGGNANANDHAA and D Gukesh stepped up and delivered once again as defending champions India bounced back from their painful loss to Uzbekistan, edging past England 2.5-1.5 in Round 7 of the 2026 Chess Olympiad in Samarkand on Wednesday.

The recovery came on a bitersweet afternoon for Nihal Sarin, who was dealt his second straight defeat at the Olympiad. On Board 3 with the black pieces, Nihal took the fight to Luke McShane for the better part of the contest. But the Englishman proved unyielding. McShane weathered Nihal's sustained pressure, navigated the chaotic time scramble just before his time control, and held his nerve in the endgame. Fearing off wave after wave of attack, McShane eventually turned the tables to blunt Nihal's resistance and claim the full point. By then, however, India's victory had already been sealed.

India repeated the exact winning template from their Round 5 triumph over the Netherlands with Pragg striking on the top board and Gukesh supplying the decisive punch from Board 4.

Pragg opened India's account in style, taking down the experienced Nikita Vitiugov with the black pieces to log his fourth win of the tournament. Barely a minute later, Arjun Erigaisi and England's talisman Michael Adams shook hands for a peaceful 40-move draw on Board 2.

That set the stage for Gukesh. Facing Daniel Howard Fernandez, the reigning World Champion poured on a blister on the 40th move amid the time scramble. With 30 additional minutes added to his clock, Gukesh relentlessly tightened the screws, converting the advantage into a full point to lock up the match for India.

In the women's section, Germany was tipped to test the defending champions, but a relentless 3.5-0.5 sweep by India dismantled any hopes of an upset.

Women who grew up around shotguns win skeet bronze

Nitin Sharma
Chandigarh, September 23

THREE GIRLS, three grandfathers, three houses with guns in them. That is where India's women's skeet team meted at the Asian Games actually began, years before any of them picked up a shotgun of their own. Raiza Dhillon grew up between a village in Haryana — where her mother Gul Dhillon is the sarpanch — and the family home in Panchkula. She tried tennis, swimming, basketball and Kathak first. What she kept coming back to were the guns.

“My grandfather and Raiza's great grandfather, Jagir Gurinder Singh Dhillon owned more than 20 guns, and my father Daljit Singh Dhillon owns some shotguns,” says her father, Ravijit Singh Dhillon.

She trained at Patiala under coach Amrinder Singh Cheema, since Panchkula had no shotgun range of its own. “Her right cheek still has many black marks due to the placement of the shotgun, but she would not worry,” her father says.

Parinaaz Dhalliwal's fascination began the same way, at her family's village of Thikriwala near Barnala, where her great grandfather Gurkirat Pal Singh Dhalliwal kept shotguns. She grew up hearing the elders' hunting stories from before 1971. She started with an air rifle at Mayo College in Ajmer at 14, moved to the shotgun two years later, and broke into the junior and then senior national teams soon after. Her father, Rattandeep Dhalliwal, remembers what the sport cost her before it gave her anything back. “There were days in summers when her hands would suffer blisters with the friction of the firearm,” he says.

Mareshwari Chauhan started at 12, seeing her grandfather Dhanpat Singh's guns at their village of Siana in Rajasthan. She too began on an air rifle at Mayo College before asking to switch to the shotgun, and she was small enough at the time that her equipment had to be built around her rather than the other way round. “We had to do stock modifications on her gun, and later when she was selected in junior national teams, coaches worked on her strength,” says her father, Pradeep Singh.

On Tuesday, the three of them combined for a score of 331, behind only China's 357 and Ka-zakstan's 336, for team bronze. Dhillon finished eighth individually, Dhalliwal ninth, Chauhan twelfth, and none of them made the individual final. It was, on paper, a day of near-misses. The women's skeet mixed team event has existed at the Asian Games only since 1990, and has mostly belonged to China, Korea, Kazakhstan and North Korea since. India had never stood on that podium before.

Anantjeet Singh Narulka, the Hangzhou silver medalist and Paris Olympic mixed team qualification scores among the shooters. “No, conditions had no role to play, that was fine,” he said.

Nerves at play

In her broadcast interview Manu Bhaker said, “The qualifications were a challenge. I was really positive, but also very nervous. For the finals as well, I was genuinely trying for every shot every time.”

Bhaker was the lone shooter from India who qualified for the finals. The seasoned medalist rarely pushes domestically anymore but stirs into life at bigger events. On Wednesday, her 20 inner tens in qualification were a sign that among the three Indians, only she was truly up for it.

But the finals painted a different story where Bhaker was finding shots in the low 10s and high 9s but never into the mid 10s that are the hallmark of a form shooter. She exited the competition in fifth position. “I feel that I've improved a lot in terms of my 10m performances — qualifications as well as finals,” said Bhaker afterwards. Both she and Esha Singh have the 25m pistol event to look forward to next.

India has now won seven medals at the shooting events at the Asian. But that elusive yellow metal continues to evade four days in.

Double Olympic medalist Manu Bhaker was far from her best on Wednesday.

“After scoring centuries a cricketer does get out on a duck. It is sport, it happens. Of course she put in the hard work and tried her best even today but at the end of the day she is human and there is absolutely no margin for error.”

“Bad day in the office,” admitted coach Ronak Pandit from Aichi on Wednesday. “Manu did well both in qualification and finals, no doubt. Suruchi and Esha gave it their honesty but unfortunately this is all that could muster today. It happens, that is sport. But of course we will be analysing to find out if there is anything that came in the way. First emotions have to calm down and when the mind is rational, we shall analyse and plug gaps.”

Bhaker was the only bright spot in the dark skies that were B-roll for broadcasters on Wednesday as Typhoon Dujan lashed Japan. On a day when the best that a shooter could muster in qualification was a low score of 582, Bhaker finished third with a score of 579 and with it, third in qualification. Esha hit 572 with just 12 inner tens, and Suruchi went lower, managing a poor score of 568 with twelve inner tens. Both of India's ranked, in-form shooters, handed in a seriously questionable ball at work.

Suruchi in particular faltered spectacularly in her first-ever multi-sport event. It was a crushing blow young into her career, hitting three 9s and a 10 in qualification on a day where the competition and the magnitude of the event was prime for a crowning.

On Suruchi, the Indian pistol coach said, “After scoring centuries a cricketer does get out on a duck. It is sport, it happens. Of course she put in the hard work and tried her best even today but at the end of the day she is human and there is absolutely no margin for error.”

Sen, Shetty fade as China expose India's tournament fitness

Shivani Nair
Mumbai, September 23

THE TAKEAWAY from India's Asian Games men's team semifinal loss was something they have never traditionally been good at — maintaining fitness levels deep into a draw. After a brilliant takedown of Japan in the quarters that ensured a bronze medal, both Lakshya Sen and Ayush Shetty couldn't raise their levels against top Chinese, as India lost 3-1 to the serial title contenders.

Kidambi Srikanth in Hangzhou 2023, and Sen and Ayush this time, couldn't maintain the momentum on big medal days. Pitted against a perfectly calibrated Chinese machine, Wednesday's semifinal became a fade-out of energy less than 24 hours after the high-tempo Japan win.

Big medals require turning up dialled in on back-to-back knockout days. And Sen and Ayush simply looked spent against a higher-quality opponent with the short turnaround. With both singles lost, Satwiksairaj Rankireddy and Chirag Shetty's fantastic 21-11, 22-20 win over newly crowned world champions Liang Wei-keng-Wang Chang remained that 1 point of resistance.

Running on empty

Sen has stepped up on big days before, notably beating Shi Yuqi at the 2022 Thomas Cup and 2023 Asian Games. But while the intensity of every rally was unforgiving — and Yuqi is a World No 1 of August vintage, also a Teams event beast — Sen also didn't have enough in his fuel tank to push a decider.

Sen defended well, worked the angles and produced a bunch of rousing winners. But the hard-fought points brought few returns, in the 21-16, 21-18 loss, as Yuqi was imperious in the net charge and rained down attacks more often than Sen could defend. Sen didn't play badly, but he never looked like winning either.

Facing the world champions Liang-Wang next, Satwik-Chirag smoothly put down the hesitant Chinese, with the Shirag-attack keeping the tactical buzzing and Satwik going for body smashes that kept the dangerous Wang Chang busy on the back court and away from the net. With the scores 1-1, Ayush Shetty formed the pivot taking on Li Shifeng.

Shi Yuqi is down to World No 6, and Li Shifeng has been low-key for a while, having plunged to No 12, but they seemed primed to peak at the Asian Games, and Shifeng got Ayush into one right tangle. Ayush played delectably at the net, and his smashes whistled, but he was left stranded at the backline as Shifeng sent high lifts and clears, testing his ability to connect the smash. Ayush fumbled, dumping them into the net, his arms appearing tired. And his chances at the net saw him linger too long and play less sharply, which meant Shifeng grew in confidence. The Indian imploded quite a bit to lose 21-19, 21-13. Ayush seemed patchy if not flat after yesterday's exertions.

Singles concern

The team campaign will leave coaches scratching their heads: none of the five singles players felled across the men's and women's knockouts won. The only wins came from Satwik-Chirag and Treasa-Gayatri in doubles.

For the 2022 Thomas Cup-winning squad that boasted of singles depth, India might seem in trouble in 2026 after this semis loss. At any rate, the “tournament fitness” of back-to-back matches for Sen and Ayush left a lot to be desired. A second straight medal, an Asian Games team bronze, though, will be deservedly feted.

In the last-gasp second doubles, Hariharan Amsakarunan and MR Arjun played a spectacular mid-set against He Ting and Liu Yu, whose combination was quite off, as young Hari showed promise with his “Little Satwik” style. But they were hammered in the last set, losing 17-21, 21-17, 21-9.

Doubles coach Tan Kim Her later came out and declared that Hari too showed dropping energy in the third. “Hari-Arjun tried their very best. First set was physically tough. But Hari's energy dropped quite a bit,” he stressed.

On the tie defeat, he reiterated that the Sen match was crucial. “Everyone gave their best. But the first match was important. That point from Lakshya. If he could've gone into the rubber game (decider) against Shi Yuqi, we stood a good chance. Unfortunately, he... but he tried his best. Satwik-Chirag were very good in how we managed to control the front play (front court). Chirag played well in front. Defending was solid. For singles, we expected Ayush to get a point. But it was the same. First set - had he won, everything could've been different.”

That was too many things not going right to dream of beating China at Asian.
