Dear Wifey,

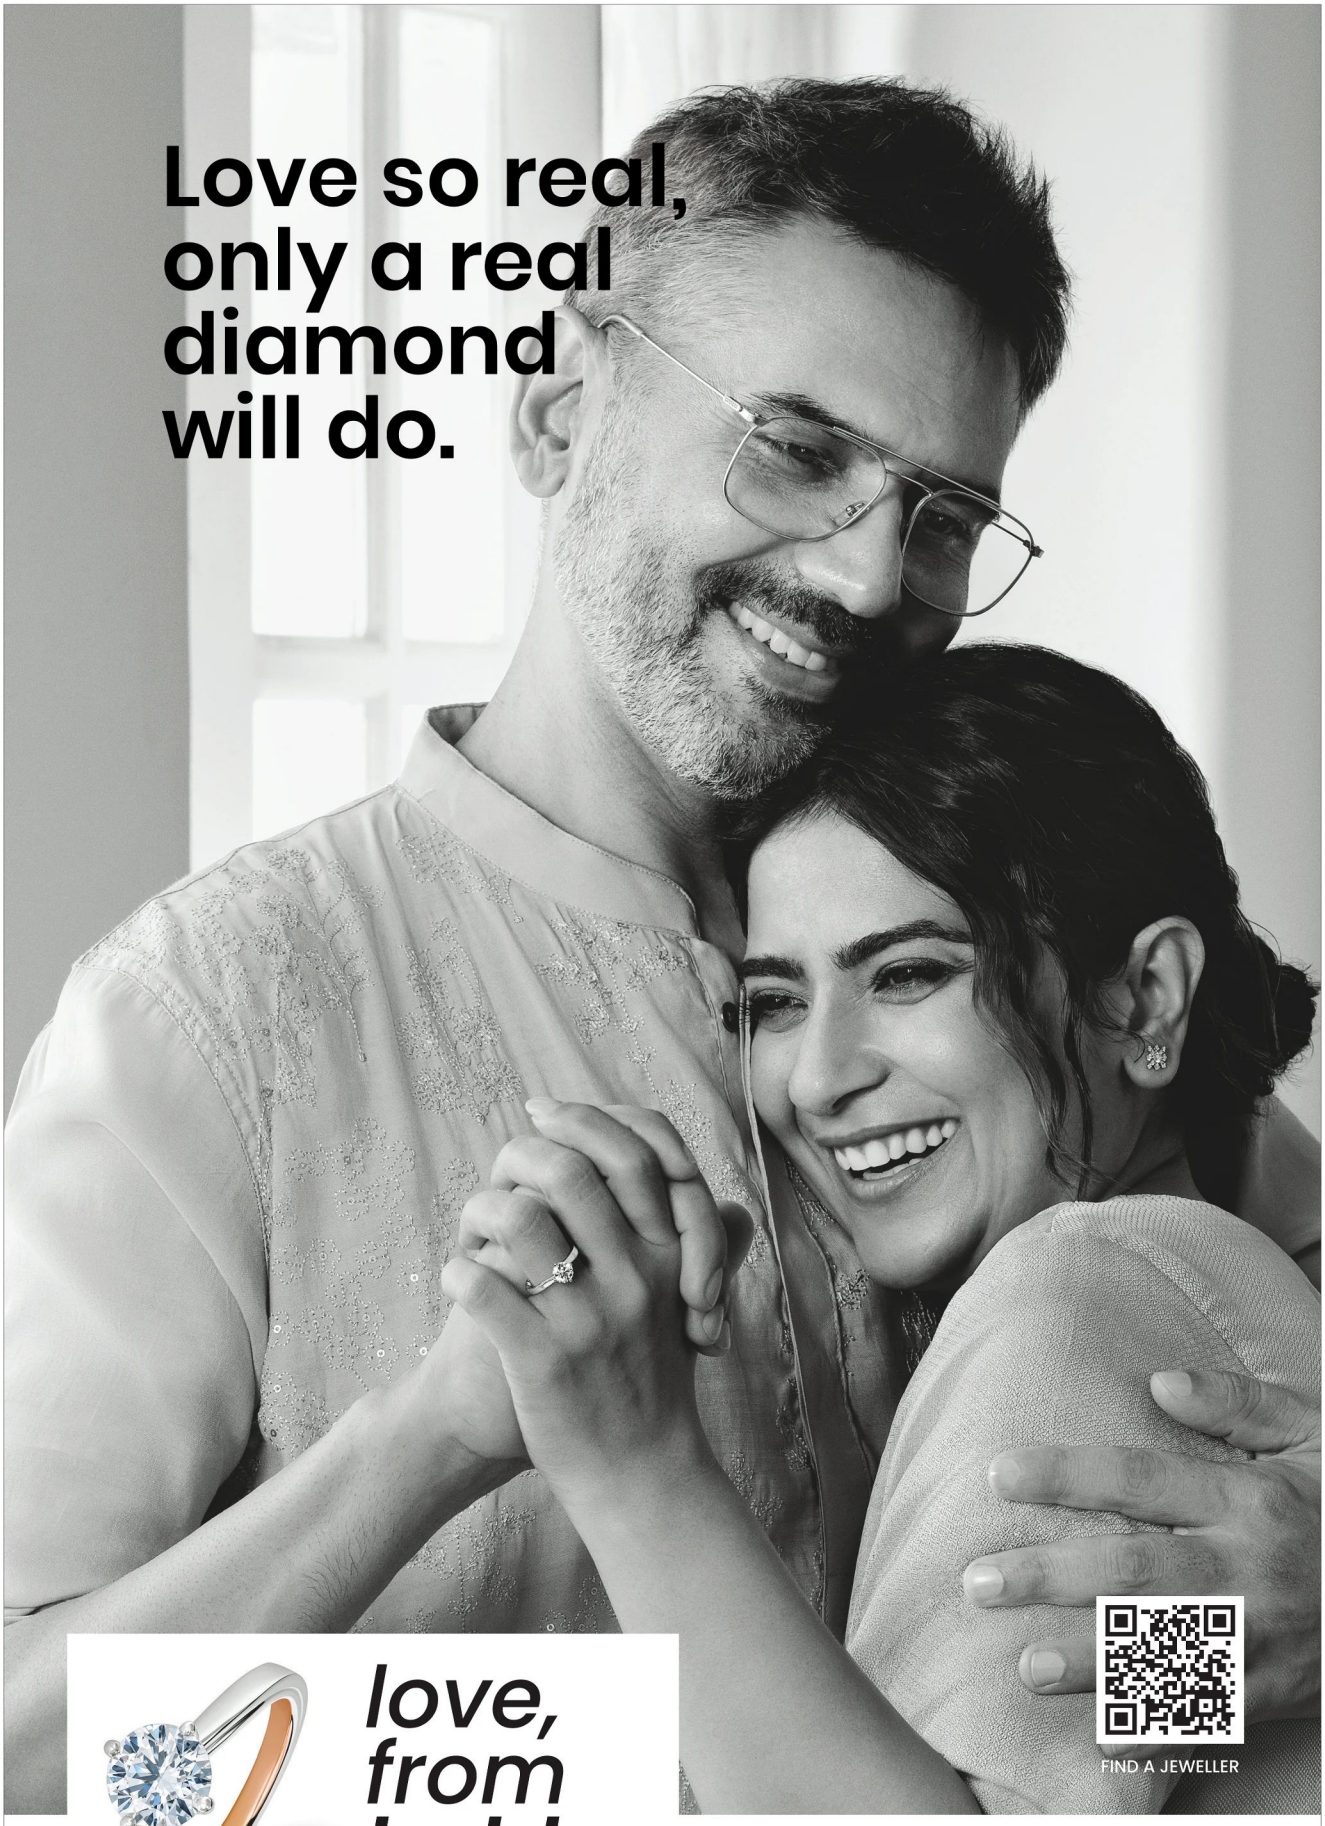

It feels like a lifetime ago that we said yes to each other
So much life has happened since.
We became parents, and then it was school runs, tuitions,
football lessons, abacus classes, homework, sick days, dance lessons, exams, college applications and some more exams.

And now, our child has left for college
And somewhere, in all those years, we haven't said
I love you to each other enough.
Or gone on enough date nights
Or had lazy breakfasts in bed
Or gone on a vacation, just the two of us
Or had candlelight dinners at home
Or gone on bike rides with your arms around me

We were busy raising a family
And somewhere along the way,
we forgot to make enough time for us
So now, with the house a little quieter let's find our way back to each other

If I get down on one knee, will you say yes again?

Love from,
Hubby

25 years of creating my space: Dia Mirza Rekhi

vishakha.pandit@hindustantimes.com

At 19, fresh from winning the Miss Asia Pacific International crown in 2000, Dia Mirza Rekhi made her Bollywood debut opposite R Madhavan in Rehnaa Hai Terre Dil Mein (2001). As the film, which initially failed at the box office before gaining cult status, completes 25 years this month, the 44-year-old actor looks back at the setbacks that followed: "When my films didn't work at the box office, I was honestly bunked from feature films. And that can be a huge emotional setback to a young and aspiring actor."

By 2004-05, Dia had stopped chasing stardom, choosing instead to focus on stories she believed in. "I've pursued meaning over material," she says. She later co-founded production house, which backed Love Breakups Zindagi (2011) and the Vidya Balan-starrer Bobby Jasoos (2014): "If I'm not going to get a seat at the table, I'm going to build my own table. I am going to create space for what I truly believe in and what I believe I can add value to."

Dia counts Sanju (2018), in which she played Manyata Dutt, and her portrayal of Maneka among the roles that opened new doors. She credits the web series Kaafir (2019), in which she played Kainaaz Akhtar, with changing how the industry perceived her: "Up until then, I would hear people say, 'You're so beautiful, underutilised, you should be doing more'."

Her advice to young actors? "There is no shelf life."

> As long as you are willing to grow and work and learn and bring your best effort and your integrity to a path, you will always work.

'Celeb managers called us to cancel airport and other sightings,' say paparazzi

FEAR GRIPS BOLLYWOOD

After shots were fired at actor Tiger Shroff's car in Mumbai's Juhu area on Sunday, Bollywood is grappling with fresh security fears. A message purportedly from the Lawrence Bishnoi gang claimed responsibility for the attack and threatened those working with actor Salman Khan. Police are investigating the claim.

BULLETPROOF CARS? STARS WEIGH OPTIONS

Two actresses who have worked with Salman Khan say they are lying low over safety concerns. An actor in his 50s, who has worked with Tiger, tells us, "My family has asked me to avoid going out as much as possible. We are even considering bullet-proof options for the cars."

Celebrity managers are also cancelling public appearances. "We had information about many celeb spottings, but after the firing incident on Tiger Shroff, several celeb managers called us to cancel airport activities and other spotting. Dekhiye thoda ajeeb sa gloomy sa toh hogaya hai," says photojournalist Pallav Paliwal.

Police protection has been stepped up for Tiger Shroff, Salman Khan, Aamir Khan and Rohit Shetty following the firing. Private security agencies are also reportedly seeing more enquiries from film industry professionals.

Salman skips shoot?
According to reports, Salman will not shoot for the upcoming Bigg Boss 20 Weekend Ka Vaar episode, with Shetty reportedly stepping in as host.

Jackie steps out, Suniel reacts
While several stars are keeping a low profile, Tiger's dad Jackie Shroff attended an event honouring late singer Bappi Lahiri. Actor Suniel Shetty, who was also present, said, "The whole world loves Tiger and Jackie Dada, and if something like this can happen to him, it could happen to anyone. It shouldn't have happened."

Memes cross the line

Memes about the firing involving Tiger Shroff have drawn criticism online. YouTuber Ashish Chanchlani slammed those joking about a potentially fatal attack, writing on Instagram, "Sad how someone could have died yesterday but people still wanna joke about it. Everything is now just a new meme material." Social media users also questioned the insensitivity surrounding the incident.

Mika, Kapil back Daler amid performance row

Shagun Roy

Noted Punjabi singer Daler Mehndi (59) has found support from the entertainment industry after Uttarakhand Minister Subodh Uniyal confronted him during a performance at the Siddhpeeth Maa Kunjapuri Tourism and Development Fair in New Tehri on Sunday.

Later, while speaking to ANI, Uniyal explained his stance of lashing out at Mehndi onstage by saying that the actor lip synced even after being paid ₹35 lakh for a live performance. Online allegations that the singer was intoxicated remain unverified.

Defending his brother, singer Mika Singh told us, "Daler paaji does not drink at all." He also posted a video saying he would "quit singing if anyone proved otherwise", and revealed that Mehndi had recently undergone heart treatment.

Singer Alisha Chinai criticised the minister, writing, "How dare anyone come onstage and insult him in this manner..."

Actor-comedian Kapil Sharma urged people to be kinder, citing Mehndi's recent surgery, while Shaan called him "the original rockstar". Singers Harshdeep Kaur and Palash Sen also backed Mehndi, suggesting he may have been unwell.

Singer Palash Sen rallied behind Mehndi: "Everyone has a bad day or ill health. Even legends can fall ill, but can't disappoint their fans by not showing up... Please look at him with love and respect."

Air we go again: How to protect yourself as the AQI worsens

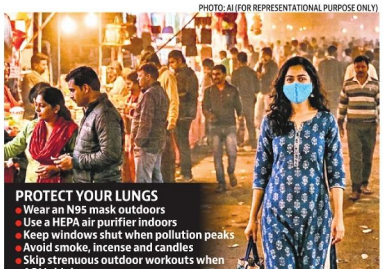

Radhika Bhirani
radhika.bhirani@hindustantimes.com

The chill is setting in, and so is the pollution. Delhi's Air Quality Index (AQI) touched 187 on Sunday before improving to 139 on Monday, according to the Central Pollution Control Board (CPCB). Mumbai, too, recorded an AQI of 187. With winter approaching, doctors warn that air quality could deteriorate further and advise residents to take precautions.

"Children under 10, the elderly, and those with pre-existing respiratory or cardiac conditions are especially vulnerable," says Dr Devendra Taneja, Shalby International Hospital. Dr Akshay Budhraja of Aakash Healthcare suggests switching to indoor activities instead of outdoor exercise: "The best time for outdoor workouts is when the AQI is relatively low, typically late morning or afternoon."

Dietitian Meenakshi Aggarwal of Marengo Asia Hospitals recommends a balanced diet rich in amla, oranges, berries, leafy greens, whole grains, nuts and seeds. While turmeric milk, Tulsi adrak chai, ginger lemon kadha and jaggery are often recommended for anti-inflammatory and antioxidant properties, experts say no foods can reverse the effects of air pollution. Minimising exposure remains the most effective precaution.

PROTECT YOUR LUNGS
- Wear an N95 mask outdoors
- Use a HEPA air purifier indoors
- Keep windows shut when pollution peaks
- Avoid smoke, incense and candles
- Skip strenuous outdoor workouts when AQI is high
- See a doctor for persistent cough or breathlessness

Actor Sanjana Sanghi recalls festive memories of growing up in a multicultural family in Delhi, from garba nights to Diwali ki safai

Festive Vibes

As Navratri gives way to Diwali preparations, actor Sanjana Sanghi is feeling nostalgic about her childhood in Delhi. “I love the memories of the festive season when one after the other there are so many festivals and reasons to dress up and eat good food,” says the 30-year-old.

What she particularly remembers is the annual cleaning ritual. “These days I am especially thinking of the run-up to the Diwali day when we all are engaged in the much-talked-about Diwali ki safai,” she says, recalling how her mother would stress over the preparations.

Growing up in a multicultural family meant celebrating festivals in different ways. “My Dadi is Punjabi, my Dada is Marwari and my Nana-Nani are Gujarati, so I’m a mixture of all these different traditions of India,” she says. Her fondest memories include garba nights with her maternal grandmother and card games with her paternal grandmother.

Now based in Mumbai, Sanghi misses those celebrations. “Whenever I get the chance to go back home for Diwali, I always do because it allows me to relive my childhood in the most special way,” she shares. Otherwise, she celebrates with friends, decorating her home with fairy lights and diyas.

As for festive fashion, Sanghi isn’t one to blindly follow trends. “We’ve to stop taking the pressure of subscribing to trends. I’ve never been able to understand them.” If she could raid a celebrity wardrobe, Sanghi says she would pick “Rekha for her timeless elegance and Deepika Padukone for her versatility.” “But I’m a lot more comfortable just being myself,” she adds.

> These days I am thinking of the run-up to Diwali... When you see all the genda, diyas, decorations and everyone gets together to do up the house, that fills my heart with so much joy.

Nepal denies screening nod to Ayushmann, Sara’s Udta Teer

Nepal has denied permission for the public screening of Ayushmann Khurrana and Sara Ali Khan’s upcoming spy-comedy Udta Teer, slated for release on October 23. In an official letter to distributor National Cine Group Nepal last week, the Ministry of Communication and Information Technology said the film had been reviewed by the Central Film Censor Board. Para-athlete Deepthi Jeevanji, 23, has struck gold at the ongoing Asian Para Games in Nagoya, Japan, clocking a Games record of 56.36 seconds in the women’s 400m T20 event. For the athlete from Telangana’s Kalleda village, who once faced taunts over her intellectual impairment, the victory means much more than a medal. “There was a time when me and my family faced negativity and were called names because of my impairment. But ever since I made a name for myself, everything has changed. Now, everyone talks to us with respect and that inspires me,” says Deepthi, whose parents worked as daily-wage labourers.

> My ultimate goal is to coach young girls who dare to pursue their dreams.
> DEEPTHI JEEVANJI, Para-athlete

The Paris 2024 Paralympics bronze medallist, who defended her Asian Para Games title, adds, “I felt happy to hear our National Anthem play, knowing I brought joy and pride to my country.”

Deepthi’s journey began in 2018, when para-athletics coach Satyanarayana spotted her potential. “The moment I watched Deepthi train, I knew she would do wonders,” says the coach.

Her success on the international stage has since inspired her to help other young athletes overcome similar challenges. “I want to help India discover and nurture a new generation of talented athletes,” she says.

For now, her family remains her priority. She says, “Bringing financial stability to my family means everything to me.”

Protesters block Louvre amid France unrest

Students block the entrance to the Louvre Museum beneath its iconic glass pyramid

The Louvre Museum in Paris, home to Leonardo da Vinci's Mona Lisa and one of the world's most visited museums, remained closed on Monday after students blocked its entrances. The protesters, from the École du Louvre, an art and culture school, were backing a nationwide high-school movement demanding better school conditions, increased education and culture funding, and an end to police repression.

The blockade followed a weekend of violent unrest across France on October 17-18. Around 2,400 people were arrested amid clashes with police, looting and vandalism. More than 3,000 shops were damaged or looted nationwide, prompting retailers to step up security. HTC
